Dictator of Pekin Flees Before Nationalist Army

CHANG DECLARES HIS RENUNCIATION IS ACT OF MERCY

After Plunging China into 2-Year Internecine Strife He Thinks of Homeless and Hungry.

SOUTHERN ARMY WILL ENTER SOON

Dictator Says He Fought To Rid Country of Reds and Hopes Work Will Be Completed.

Pekin, China, June 3.—(P)—Chang Tso-Lin, for two years ruler of Pekin and northern China, renounced his power and left the ancient capital at 1:15 o'clock this morning. He departed on a special train which had his old stronghold at Mukden, Manchuria, for its destination.

Chang sent members of his household on ahead of himself. A bodyguard and small retinue traveled in a pilot train which preceded that in which the former dictator fled.

He left behind a committee of elders in charge of the city and issued a farewell message expressing the hope that China would survive the civil war and the threat of bolshevism.

The city was orderly this morning and the committee of elders said that satisfactory arrangements had been made for handing over control to the victorious leaders of the nationalist, or south China, armies.

In his farewell message Chang Tso-Lin predicted early cessation of civil warfare.

Many Homeless. "This fighting," he said, "has reduced many to homelessness and starvation of an extent beyond description. If we continue to fight these people will only suffer more."

"Such a condition was not contemplated nor expected when I started the anti-red campaign. My assumption of my difficult post was with the object of saving the state."

"Even though my desire has not been fulfilled, I cannot bear to continue military operations. I am, therefore, ready to evacuate Pekin with my troops. Henceforth political issues are left in the hands of the people."

"I have been a military man half my life and have encountered many difficulties. But I would sacrifice everything for the sake of the people's welfare."

Declares Self Innocent. "Hoping that China will not be exterminated as a result of my management of its affairs, and hoping that the bolshevist peril which I suppressed will not be revived, I declare myself innocent and my conscience clear before the world and before all future generations."

Pekin, historic capital of China, for nine centuries has been the prize for which successive invaders of China and the warring Chinese factions have fought.

Situated near the northern frontier, the Tartar invaders regarded the city as a stepping stone to the north.

Two Women Champions Reach Atlanta by Air. Miss Marion Turpie, southern women's golf champion, and Mrs. Dalton Raymond, 1927 Dixie titleholder, who will play with Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn in the big exhibition match this afternoon at East Lake, arrived in Atlanta Saturday afternoon by airplane. The match will start promptly at 3 o'clock with Mrs. Raymond paired with Bobby Jones against Miss Turpie and Watts Gunn.

BY WHITNER CARV. Ten years ago this line of khaki-clad figures were advancing to glory, wounds or death in war-torn France. The echo of American guns at Cantigny, the first American attack, had barely died on the smoke-laden air. Those echoes were soon to give place to the more deadly rumble of Belleau Wood and Chateau Thierry. The peaceful and beautiful Marne valley was being sprinkled with shot and shell. To many an American the wheat fields of that valley became a sepulchre. For many a clear-eyed doughty they were turned into an amputating ground for legs and arms. To many a sturdy son of this country they proved the lurking place of poisonous gases to the ruin of healthful and youthful lungs.

Those who fell and lay still are honored in that far-off land. Simple granite markers stand as silent symbols to their sacrifice.

The Disabled Veterans. But many fell and were carried back to hospitals and later to this country. No shaft of granite heralds their duty to flag and country. Empty cork sleeves, cork legs and husky voices tell all too well of the aim of the German gunners and the efficiency of the German gas. And in many cases those who carry that empty sleeve and those cork legs and husky voices have reached the limit. Sunday afternoon at East Lake two young men whose age, at that hectic period when the pleasant valley of the Marne was being metamorphosed into a morgue, prevented them from

ATLANTA WARNED COUNCIL MUST BUY AIRPORT IN 1929

Gate City's Preeminence in Aviation Endangered Unless $100,000 Is Raised, Hartsfield States

Candler field, Atlanta's airport, may be lost to the city and with it Atlanta's air mail service, her rapidly growing passenger service and her preeminence in the south as the air hub of this great section of the country, if the city does not exercise its option to buy Candler field before April, 1929, according to warning given Saturday by William B. Hartsfield, alderman from the third ward and chairman of the aviation committee of council. Owners of Candler field have stated that the city's tender must be made in cash, it was learned.

Mr. Hartsfield called on members of council to face the issue, which is threatening the city's airport and make preparations to have the necessary $100,000 on hand in cash before the option now held by the city expires.

Council was placed on notice by Mr. Hartsfield that unless the $100,000 was available before expiration of the option Atlanta would have no airport.

"Unless we make provisions for the fund, Atlanta will have no landing field after April next year," Mr. Hartsfield said. "At the present time Atlanta is well ahead of other southern cities in aviation matters, but we must buy Candler field next year or all the money we have spent in equipment, grading and conditioning it will have been wasted. Candler interests, owners of the ground, have put us on notice that we must exercise the option to purchase it before the end of the lease and also have announced that the tender must be in cash. That means we must provide the $100,000 in cash."

"Memphis is preparing to spend several million dollars in development of Mud Island for aviation purposes and the plan is to make it one of the most modern and finest fields in the entire country. Birmingham, Savannah, Augusta, New Orleans, Jacksonville, Miami and other southern cities also are constantly making improvements in aviation facilities. Atlanta must keep the pace or be left behind the right ear. Major W. D. Tipton, the pilot, of Baltimore, and his mechanic, I. M. Cooper, of Baltimore, escaped injury, as did C. M. Brewster, of New York."

Mr. Mendell and Mr. North were brought to Grady hospital, where their injuries were treated. The Valetor was the prize cabin ship leased by Hoffman Machinery company, en route from Baltimore to Memphis. The party had stopped

Judge Ben Lindsey Dropped From Juvenile Board Here

As the result of views of Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, Colo., opponent of "companionate marriage," on the subject of matrimony, business was dropped from the advisory board of the Juvenile Protective association at the annual meeting held Saturday in the Atlanta and Lowry National bank building, according to Crawford Jackson, general secretary.

Judge Lindsey, who formerly was judge of the juvenile court in Denver, had been a member of the advisory board for a number of years, and at one time headed the board. Mr. Jackson said. Members of the advisory board are elected for life, but may be dropped from the board by action of the association, he said.

Dr. Wallace Rogers was reelected president of association. Other officers follow: M. Henry Cohen, first vice president; Clifford L. Anderson, second vice president; L. O. McCord, third vice president; A. J. Aven, fourth vice president; H. G. Walker, treasurer; J. H. Gilbert, auditor, and Crawford Jackson, general secretary.

John A. Manget was elected trustee in place of the late Dr. S. R. Belk. The executive committee follows: E. L. Harling, chairman; Mr. Manget,

STORE IS ROBBED AND $650 TAKEN

White Bandit Robs Grocery on Ponce de Leon Avenue; Decatur Street Store Looted of $600.

An unmasked white bandit held up the manager and five clerks of the Piggly Wiggly store at 234 Ponce de Leon avenue, as the employees were checking up late Saturday night, and escaped with $650 in cash. It was the opening day of the store.

The front door had been closed and all the customers had gone. The bandit entered through the rear doors and ordered all the clerks to lie down on the floor, face down and arms outstretched, and then instructed the manager, J. E. Holland, to go to the cash drawer and get the money.

After receiving the cash, which was in a small sack, the bandit started backing toward the rear door and reaching it he said, "I might have a little trouble starting my car, but don't come back here, or I might have to fill you all full of lead," and with that statement he was gone.

Police were furnished an accurate description of the man. But for the fact that Mr. Holland had transferred $3,120 in cash to the main office of the company for safe keeping less than two hours previous to the robbery the thief would have had a much larger haul.

Clerks who witnessed the robbery were R. N. Robinson, M. A. Clodt, J. Y. Gouber, Clarence Boley and R. W. Norman. Detectives J. C. Davis and J. W. Anderson investigated.

Negro Gets $600 Loot

An unmasked negro entered the shoe store of Jack Feldman, 150 Decatur street, late Saturday night, took a trip to New York, and intended leaving this morning.

Feldman said that the negro had been hanging around the store for several hours. The negro is described as being ginger colored, weight approximately 130 pounds, height 5 feet 6 inches and about 25 years old. He was wearing a light gray suit. Call Officers Higgins and Cartwright investigated.

Carrying Big Load, Baltimore Cabin Ship Is Unable To Leave Ground and Smashes Into Bank.

Sliding down a runway at Candler field and unable to rise into the air, the "Valetor," large, heavy cabin plane leased by the U. S. Hoffman Machinery company, crashed into the side of the field race track Saturday afternoon and slightly injured two of its occupants. Three other passengers escaped injury.

Wayne Mendell, of Orange, N. J., general sales manager of the Hoffman company, sustained a severe cut on his forehead and about his ear, and William N. North, 38, of New York city, vice president of the company, was slightly cut about the head behind the right ear. Major W. D. Tipton, the pilot, of Baltimore, and his mechanic, I. M. Cooper, of Baltimore, escaped injury, as did C. M. Brewster, of New York."

Mr. Mendell and Mr. North were brought to Grady hospital, where their injuries were treated. The Valetor was the prize cabin ship leased by Hoffman Machinery company, en route from Baltimore to Memphis. The party had stopped

NOBILE'S RESCUE VESSEL ARRIVES

Italian Ship Reaches Spitzbergen on Search for Crew of Italia, Lost in Polar Wastes.

(Copyright, 1928, by The Associated Press.) Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 2.—(P)—Pausing here only a few hours, the ice-breaker Braganza sailed at 8 o'clock tonight for the north on a search for the missing dirigible Italia and the 18 explorers of General Umberto Nobile's polar expedition. The steamer, which is one of the best ice boats in Norway, hopes to reach Mossel bay through Hinlopen straight if ice conditions permit.

The departure was hastened by the desire of the Norwegian crew of the Braganza to take full advantage of good weather which was prevalent today. Her captain said that any postponement would mean unnecessary additional delay.

INJUNCTION ORDER GRANTED BY JUDGE MADE PERMANENT

Mrs. John R. Hornady Is Restrained From Interfering in Administration of Club Affairs.

ELECTORAL RULES GOVERN DECISION

Judge Declares Sufficient Time Was Given To Nominate Mrs. Hornady in Usual Manner.

After two weeks of bitter contention between friends of Mrs. Charles Goodman and those of Mrs. John R. Hornady, rival claimants for the presidency of the Atlanta Woman's club, the right of Mrs. Goodman to the post was upheld by Judge John D. Humphries, of Fulton superior court, in a decision handed down late Saturday afternoon.

Judge Humphries declared the restraining order which he issued a fortnight ago in effect null and void. This prohibits Mrs. Hornady from interfering in any way with the administration of club affairs by Mrs. Goodman, her officers and executive board.

A strict adherence to parliamentary procedure and electoral rules of the club "as uniformly practiced by the membership" appears to have ruled Judge Humphries in his decision, arrived at four days after the case was argued and submitted.

Rules governing election of officers, adopted by the club in April, 1924, provide that "no votes for nominees shall be counted" whose names were not posted two weeks prior to the election, was the legal point on which the case hinged.

In his decision, the court held that the membership had been given due time to nominate Mrs. Hornady in the usual manner, and to vote for nominees shall be counted" whose names were not posted two weeks prior to the election, was the legal point on which the case hinged.

While attorneys for Mrs. Goodman issued a brief statement Saturday night, several women most aggressive in upholding the Goodman candidacy refused, with a finally almost belligerent, to comment on the new turn of affairs.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith said she had nothing to say, and others were reserved. One of Mrs. Goodman's staunchest lieutenants, when informed she was talking to a reporter, cried into the transmitter: "Don't quote me. I don't mention my name. I have nothing to say. . . . Not even a word."

An explanation of this verbal reticence was perhaps contained in the following statement released Saturday night, and signed by Attorneys Fuller, Bryant and Douglas: "The court decision that Mrs. Goodman shall continue to hold office as president of the Atlanta Woman's

Mrs. Hunt's Will, Providing Aid to Education-Seekers, Is Culmination of Life Work

Prominent Gainesville Woman Had Long Cherished Dreams of Helping Deserving Youth.

Numerous boys and girls who live in the mountain sections of north Georgia and who lack the means to pay their expenses through college will be able to get the educational advantages offered by two of Georgia's leading educational institutions through the realization of a cherished dream of a life time of an active and brilliant Georgia business woman, Mrs. Aurora Strong Hunt, of Gainesville, whose last will and testament recently was upheld by the state supreme court.

After a legal battle fought through the highest court in the state Mrs. Hunt's will has been upheld as it was intended and as a result the University of Georgia and Brenau college will come into substantial sums to be used in aiding Georgia boys and girls to obtain educational advantages.

The story of Mrs. Hunt's life ambition to do something for poor white children of the mountain sections reads like a romance. The story is told in fragmentary form, in the court records and it reveals a deep and abiding love of Georgia children which was carried to the extent that this woman won a life-long battle to win riches so that she could leave behind her at her death enough money to establish two big funds at these institutions for the aid of needy students from her mountain section of the state.

Victor in Woman's Club Tangle

Mrs. Charles Goodman, elected with Mrs. John R. Hornady at the stormy March 14 meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club when two presidential tangles in which both women were declared elected, Saturday was declared the president of the club in a court ruling by Judge John D. Humphries in superior court.

At the hearing Judge Humphries pointed out that Mrs. Turman's resignation had been placed on the minutes, and these minutes approved without protest at a subsequent meeting of the club.

After the April meeting, then, the presidential contest had apparently narrowed down to two candidates, Mrs. Goodman and Mrs. Melton. These names were posted in the clubhouse, as the by-laws seemed to require.

Several days prior to the election Mrs. Melton withdrew from the race, pleading ill health.

Later at the hearing it was brought out by the Hornady counsel, in a position from an official at Oglethorpe university, where Mrs. Melton's husband was a professor, that university officials had been approached by supporters of the Goodman candidacy, who pointed out that Dr. Melton was conducting a course at the university, and that the choice of his wife for an electoral position was ill-advised.

Hornady Charges.
At the hearing, the Hornady counsel charged that unfair pressure had been brought to bear in narrowing the presidential contest down to Mrs. Goodman. An allegation was here made that Dr. Melton's position was indirectly threatened unless his wife's candidacy should be withdrawn.

The retirement of Mrs. Goodman's opponents from the race constituted what counsel for Mrs. Hornady termed an "emergency." This situation resulted in a growing determination among Mrs. Hornady's friends to advance her in opposition to Mrs. Goodman.

The Goodman faction contended in court that the membership generally understood the May 14 election was uncontested, while their rivals insisted everyone associated with club politics was aware of the approaching conflict.

This supposition apparently was strengthened later when depositions by Chief of Police James L. Beavers and two of his detectives, recited that Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, retiring president, had called two detectives, asking that they be present in case of disorder.

When the nominating committee returned its report at the turbulent meeting, a motion was put by Mrs. Wilmer Moore that the secretary be instructed to cast the ballot, since the Goodman candidacy for president was unopposed.

Mrs. Hornady "Elected."
Despite a storm of objection from the floor, the chair declared the motion carried and announced the officers elected. The meeting refused to adjourn, later electing Mrs. Hornady after about a score of the Goodman supporters had retired from the assembly place.

For a week following the election, Mrs. Hornady occupied the president's office, after friends of hers had retired from the clubhouse. The Goodman interests then petitioned for a court order, enjoining Mrs. Hornady's "interference," which was granted temporarily by Judge Humphries. The hearing date was set for Monday of last week, and an imposing array of legal counsel argued the case at the hearing before available seats which filled every available seat.

Two Remained Candidates.

"However provoking her actions may have seemed to the friends of Mrs. Goodman, the rules and by-laws of the club as she did."

Ballots Were Printed.
"Friends of Mrs. Hornady had a ballot printed and her name for president, and went to the May meeting for the purpose of nominating her for the office of president. A motion was made, and declared carried by the presiding officer, instructing the secretary to cast the ballot for Mrs. Goodman. If there are more than one nominee for any office, the polls shall be kept open from 12 noon to 5:30 in the afternoon. These rules are intended to prevent surprises and to give the membership of about 800, nearly double the seating capacity of the assembly hall, an opportunity to express their choice."

"However arbitrary the actions of the presiding officer may have appeared, she had reasonable grounds for interpreting the rules and by-laws of the club as she did."

Despite a storm of objection from the floor, the chair declared the motion carried and announced the officers elected. The meeting refused to adjourn, later electing Mrs. Hornady after about a score of the Goodman supporters had retired from the assembly place.

For a week following the election, Mrs. Hornady occupied the president's office, after friends of hers had retired from the clubhouse. The Goodman interests then petitioned for a court order, enjoining Mrs. Hornady's "interference," which was granted temporarily by Judge Humphries. The hearing date was set for Monday of last week, and an imposing array of legal counsel argued the case at the hearing before available seats which filled every available seat.

Two Remained Candidates.
At the hearing Judge Humphries pointed out that Mrs. Turman's resignation had been placed on the minutes, and these minutes approved without protest at a subsequent meeting of the club.

After the April meeting, then, the presidential contest had apparently narrowed down to two candidates, Mrs. Goodman and Mrs. Melton. These names were posted in the clubhouse, as the by-laws seemed to require.

Several days prior to the election Mrs. Melton withdrew from the race, pleading ill health.

Later at the hearing it was brought out by the Hornady counsel, in a position from an official at Oglethorpe university, where Mrs. Melton's husband was a professor, that university officials had been approached by supporters of the Goodman candidacy, who pointed out that Dr. Melton was conducting a course at the university, and that the choice of his wife for an electoral position was ill-advised.

Hornady Charges.
At the hearing, the Hornady counsel charged that unfair pressure had been brought to bear in narrowing the presidential contest down to Mrs. Goodman. An allegation was here made that Dr. Melton's position was indirectly threatened unless his wife's candidacy should be withdrawn.

The retirement of Mrs. Goodman's opponents from the race constituted what counsel for Mrs. Hornady termed an "emergency." This situation resulted in a growing determination among Mrs. Hornady's friends to advance her in opposition to Mrs. Goodman.

The Goodman faction contended in court that the membership generally understood the May 14 election was uncontested, while their rivals insisted everyone associated with club politics was aware of the approaching conflict.

This supposition apparently was strengthened later when depositions by Chief of Police James L. Beavers and two of his detectives, recited that Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, retiring president, had called two detectives, asking that they be present in case of disorder.

When the nominating committee returned its report at the turbulent meeting, a motion was put by Mrs. Wilmer Moore that the secretary be instructed to cast the ballot, since the Goodman candidacy for president was unopposed.

DEPORTATION LOOMS FOR THIRD BASEMAN

Tampa, Fla., June 2.—(AP)—Charged with bringing a woman, reported to be his wife, into this country from Cuba after she had been deported, Manuel Salva, third baseman for the Sanford team of the Florida state league, was held in the county jail here today pending action on deportation. The woman also was held.

Salva was arrested when he came to immigration headquarters to inquire about the woman, who had been arrested here last Monday night. She gave her name as Modista De La Caridad Ariza y Jimenez de Salva.

They entered the United States together at Key West on May 6, last year, Salva testified, and were married the preceding April in Havana. He played baseball with the Tampa team during the early part of the season, and then joined the Sarasota club.

Immigration authorities, who have recommended to the department of labor at Washington, that both be returned to Cuba, said the woman had been deported on July 5, 1926, from Key West for failure to conform with immigration regulations.

On Tuesday of last week Judge Humphries took the case under consideration, announcing his decision Saturday.

The Goodman attorneys were William A. Fuller, Judge Shepard Bryan and Hamilton Douglas, Jr., while the Hornady faction was represented by Attorneys William Schley Howard and James A. Branch, of Branch & Howard.

Why America's Airmen endorse the air-cooled engine

THE supreme type of engine! With air-cooling every recent airplane record flight has been made possible. The air-cooled engine is the highest development of power plant for both airplane and motor car. 70% of all Aircraft manufacturers now approve air-cooling as the most modern and scientific cooling system—and without equal for sustained high speed.

In the Franklin Airman—air-cooling is responsible for the efficient, reliable and smooth-running engine. There is a wealth of power—always available for any road or any weather. Nothing ever happens to the air-cooling system—it is absolutely dependable. By eliminating a rigid radiator, air-cooling has permitted the chassis to be more flexibly designed—this and scientific light-weight construction and full-elliptic springs are immensely important factors in the Airman's supreme comfort.

To really appreciate the amazing performance offered by the Airman you must actually drive the car. We will gladly place a car at your disposal for demonstration.

REED AND SMITH EVEN IN ELECTION

Charleston, W. Va., June 2.—(AP)—The fight between the Smith and Reed forces for control of the West Virginia delegation of 16 members to the Houston convention was all even tonight, additional returns from the state primary switched the positions of several candidates for delegates.

With approximately one-third of the delegate vote yet to be tabulated, candidates representing eight votes from each camp were out in front.

In the fight for delegates at large, the anti-Smith slate backed by Senator Reed's state organization had three men and three women in the lead, while the Smith forces had one man and one woman in front. Eight delegates at large will have a half vote each.

In the district fights the Smith camp had seven delegates in the lead and the anti-Smith faction five. Two delegates were elected from each district, each with a whole vote.

Four unpledged republican delegates at large appeared assured of election, as did one committed to the popular choice. Four to be confused, of whom two will be elected, were running close. Two were unpledged, one for Hoover and one for the popular choice.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, continued to maintain an advantage over Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, for the democratic preferential vote.

as a convenient center for their power, and since those horses swept upon it, it has passed under a series of different names in the troubled history of China.

Seized in 986.

An invading force of Khitan Tartars seized it for their headquarters in 986 and named it Nanking, "the Southern Capital." Four to be confused with the present city of Nanking. During the early part of the twelfth century it was recaptured by Chinese. They reduced it in rank from a metropolis to a provincial city of the first grade, calling it Yen-Shan Fu.

The Khitan Tartars then swept across China and in 1151 they were in Pekin. The city became a royal residence under the name of Chung-Tu or "Central."

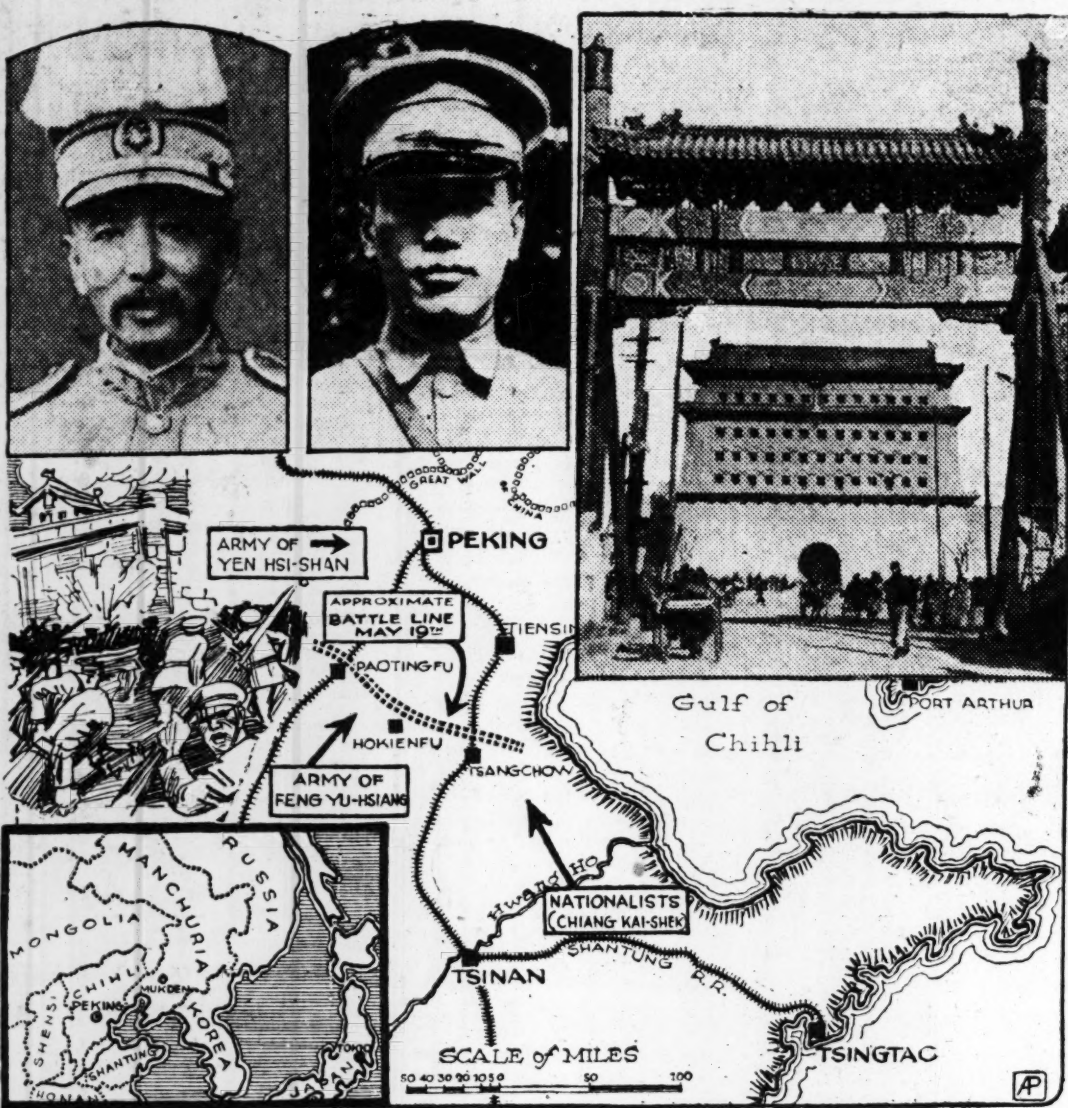

The famed Mongolian invader Jenghis Khan seized the city, but his interests centered on the Mongolian steppes and he refused to move his capital there.

His successor, Kublai Khan (1260-1294) rebuilt the city, calling it Yenking.

The second sovereign of the dynasty founded by Kublai Khan, Yung-lo (1403-1425) transferred his court to Pe-king (i. e., "North Court").

It thus became the capital of the Chinese emperors, who continued to rule from there until the Manchu dynasty fell in 1912 and China became a republic with Pekin as its capital.

Pekin Falls to Southern Chinese

Pekin, always the goal of the hosts of southern China in their war against the northerners, led by Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian war lord, has at last fallen. Chang and his army, according to news dispatches, evacuated the capital city Saturday. Chang Tso-lin is shown at the left, with Chiang Kai-shek, chief general of the southerners, in the center. The large map shows the fighting area, while the smaller shows the line of the northern retreat to Mukden. Of several gates in the wall which surrounds Pekin, the Chien Men gate, right, opens into the principal street of the ancient city.

WOMEN WILL URGE PROHIBITION PLANK

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—An "equal rights" constitutional amendment, American membership in the world court, federal protective legislation for women and children and prohibition enforcement are among the subjects on which the voice of American womanhood will make itself heard at both political conventions this year. But the greatest of these, measured by the interest it has aroused among organized women, is prohibition.

With decreased delegate representation within the conventions, the women representatives outside the convention halls will be better organized this year than ever before. Women headquarters will be organized by half a dozen different organizations and women speakers will be sent to plead before the resolutions committees for the inclusion of as many as eight different planks in the party platforms.

Official Delegates.

The League of Women Voters and the National Woman's Party each will send official delegations and, although the General Federation of Women's Clubs is not sending delegates, it will be unofficially represented by a number of its most prominent members and officials who, fresh from the annual meeting at San Antonio, will lend their influence in support of any plank that is in line with the federation's legislative program.

The League of Women Voters will send five planks, urging "national cooperation" in the shape of American adherence to the permanent international court of justice; "efficiency in government" through the abolition of lame-duck sessions of congress; "public welfare in government" through increased federal maternity and child labor legislation; "reduced living costs," through government operation of the Muscle Shoals, and "improved local status of women," through specific rather than "blanket legislation."

Back Single Plank.

The national woman's party will energetically back a single plank, favoring "blanket legislation" in the shape of a constitutional amendment granting "equal rights between men and women." The National Education association favors the establishment of a federal department of education.

The Federation of Women's Clubs, the Y. W. C. A., the Parent-Teachers' congress and several others of the most powerful women's national organizations have gone on record in favor of prohibition, and thus far no national organized body of women has appeared on the other side of the question. Active organization of the women's drive forces already is well under way, and two preliminary public hearings are planned, one in each of the two cities, on the two days immediately preceding the conventions.

Hostess Woman Head.

The Kansas City meeting will be headed by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, of Boston, Mass., representing the woman's national committee for law enforcement. In Houston, Mrs. Joseph W. Nicholson, of the National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement league, will preside.

The executive committee on prohibition enforcement plank and dry candidates will have headquarters in each city and will send both men and women speakers before the resolutions committees to plead for a prohibition plank.

Clara Olson's Murder May Get New Probe

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Madison, Wis., June 2.—The murder of Clara Olson, whose body was found buried near Prairie du Chien in the fall of 1924, which a warrant has been out since that time charging her sweetheart, Erdman Olson, with the killing, is to be subjected to a new investigation, according to an announcement by Governor Fred Zimmerman.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Olson, parents of Erdman, have never been convinced that their son killed his sweetheart, even though he disappeared at the time of the slaying. Attorney J. H. Bennett, representing the parents, petitioned Governor Zimmerman to reopen the investigation under state auspices on the ground that the court probe had not been thorough in a number of directions and Governor Zimmerman agreed to place the petition for a new hearing before Attorney General John Reynolds.

Governor Zimmerman will take up the Olson case with the attorney general and there is no question but that the probe will be called with the executive's insistence. Mr. Bennett is asking for a Joe Doe hearing, at which Clara Olson, father of Clara, and others will be questioned.

The parents of Erdman, according to Attorney Bennett, do not wish to shield their son, if he is guilty, but they believe that he may also have met his death and be buried near the spot where Clara's body was found.

Land Alpinists.

It is the intention to land the Alpinists at favorable points so that they may proceed overland to Widge Fjord. The Braganza brought two dog sledges but no dogs, so the men will drag the sledges.

The entire trip may last one week or it may be extended for a month or more, depending upon ice conditions and whether traces are found of the Italia. The ship will keep in touch with the radio station at Green Haven by means of its rather powerful wireless equipment.

This equipment is strong enough to enable the Braganza to receive weather reports direct from Tromsø, Norway. It has a sending radius of 700 miles.

An important item of the equipment is a set of Spitzbergen charts including some special charts showing ice conditions for the last 30 years.

Good Ice Seldom.

These ice maps indicated that good ice existed in only eight of those years.

Last week's northerly winds forced the floes against the north coast of the archipelago, and presumably piled the ice into the most of the bays and fjords. However, the Braganza, with her 300-horsepower engine, can penetrate almost any field of ice which is not anchored to the bottom of the sea. A condition of that sort scarcely is expected.

The second unit of the expedition from outside which are being dispatched to Spitzbergen is expected here tomorrow, when Lieutenant Lutzow, Holm is due to arrive on the Sealer Hobby. The lieutenant is bringing a Norwegian naval seaplane and considerable hope is based on what he may be able to accomplish if weather conditions permit him to make effective surveys from the air.

SAUNDERS APPEALS FOR RENOMINATION

UTILITY PUBLICITY RESULTS PRAISED BY COAST LEADER

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—Activities of power utilities were credited with having retarded municipal ownership of utilities all over the country in a letter introduced today in the federal trade commission's investigation of utilities' publicity methods. It was presented while George E. Lewis, the writer, executive manager of the Rocky mountain public utilities information committee, was testifying for the third day.

The communication was addressed to K. W. Kissick, manager of the Deming Ice and Electric company, Deming, N. M., March 3, 1925, and said:

"Had the utility industry not started its public relation work when it did; had it not inaugurated systematic newspaper advertising, educational activities in the high schools, colleges, universities and grade schools, had it not undertaken widespread speaking activities—in short, had it not done the things that it has done within the past three years, we'd all be in a hell of a shape today. We built it better than we knew when we started this work three years ago. We reared a defense wall that, we know now, constitutes our first line of defense. Without this, I venture to say that states, municipal and government ownership would have been 100 per cent ahead of what it is today."

Following the meeting last night in the office of Raymond H. Berry, counsel for the plaintiffs, and his partner, Thomas Potter, it was said that seven of the five women had agreed to accept the terms outlined.

The litigation expenses which in accordance with the terms of the settlement would have to pay, include lawyers' disbursements for stenographers, expert medical testimony and other expenses incidental to the filing of the damage suits in the supreme court.

Christian church, and interment was in Berea cemetery.

Mr. Ponder was well known and respected in this section and his death is mourned by a host of friends.

RADIUM VICTIM REFUSES OFFER

Newark, N. J., June 2.—(AP)—Terms of the settlement proposed by Federal Judge William Clark in the suits of the five women seeking aggregate damages of $1,250,000 from the United States Radium corporation, were unofficially disclosed today with the rejection of the proposal by at least one of the plaintiffs.

Judge Clark, who has no official connection with the cases, proposed that the women, whose attorneys and physicians say they are suffering from fatal radio-active poisoning, be given $10,000 cash, out of which amount they would have to pay legal expenses. The other compensation offered the women included a pension of $800 a year, the defendants also to pay for medical expenses and counsel.

Mrs. Quinta McDonald, Orange, objected to the terms. "Legal bills which I have received from time to time have run up into the thousands," she said.

At the home of Mrs. Grace Fryer, Orange, it was said that "she had agreed to no settlement."

RICH CO. STYLIST GOES TO NEW YORK TO GET NEW IDEAS

Mrs. Virginia Warren, stylist of the M. Rich & Bros. Co., left Atlanta Saturday afternoon for New York to work for a week with Tobe, famous Gotham stylist, and gain new ideas and fashion notes to be presented to Rich patrons.

The Atlanta department store is particularly interested in the latest modes of world style centers, devoting each Tuesday to "style day" features, when the newest things in women's wear are displayed. Living models are used effectively by Rich's on these events, and the practice will be given added impetus beginning next Tuesday, when the Rich company takes over the active operation of the ten room on the sixth floor of the store.

Mrs. Warren is director of the style features, and her experience in New York with the nationally-known Tobe is expected to result in many novel and attractive ideas and events to be staged later for patrons of the Rich company.

Fraternity Meets.

Mobile, Ala., June 2.—(P)—The Phi Kappa High school fraternity convened in a three-day session here today with 100 delegates present. The business sessions were held today and will continue on Sunday and Monday. James Overby, Mobile, exalted grand master, is presiding over the sessions. Delegates from Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee are attending the convention.

City Fathers Inspect Work on Viaducts

Members of the bridge committee of city council and Chief of Construction William A. Hansell are shown inspecting the excavations for foundations for the massive viaducts which will support the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts. Actual pouring of concrete will be begun this week, according to officials of the MacDougald Construction company, contractors, and work will be pushed to completion by February. From left to right in the picture are Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward; Councilman Charles L. Gresham, of the third ward; Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, of the seventh ward and chairman of the bridge committee; Chief Hansell; Councilman Wiley L. Moore, of the seventh and vice chairman of the committee, and Alderman William B. Hartfield. One of the large steam shovels can be seen in the background.

R. B. HANEY, FORMER COUNTY POLICEMAN, DIES IN BRUNSWICK

R. B. Haney, of Brunswick, former Fulton county policeman, died Saturday in a Brunswick hospital from injuries received late Friday night when the motorcycle on which he was returning to Brunswick from Savannah collided with an automobile on the coastal highway near Darien, relatives here learned Saturday.

The body of Mr. Haney will be brought here for funeral services and interment, plans to be announced later. He leaves his wife, three daughters, Mrs. O. F. Handcock, of Atlanta; Miss Italia and Stacia Haney; three sons, Milton, R. B., Jr., and Holland Haney, of Brunswick; three sisters, Mrs. Carl Bowen, Mrs. J. B. Ballard and Mrs. Frank Haney, all of Atlanta, and two brothers, W. N. and C. F. Haney, of Sevean.

HARRIS CONTINUES EFFORTS FOR CANAL IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Washington, June 2.—(Special)—Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, announced today that despite an unfavorable report to the war department he would continue his efforts to obtain authorization of a canal to connect the St. Marys and Satilla rivers, through Camden and Charlton counties.

Surveying the two rivers under authorization of an amendment to the rivers and harbors act obtained several years ago by Senator Harris, the war department engineers reported that it was not feasible to construct the canal with a depth and width sufficient to accommodate ordinary river boats. The flow at Waycross is insufficient to fill such a canal, the engineers said, adding that the cost would be out of proportion to the benefits to be obtained.

Whenever he made a successful venture in shipping Mr. Patterson invested in real estate in Baltimore and soon acquired vast holdings in that city.

At the time he made his will the older trader evidently was offended at the conduct of his daughter, Betsy, the "Glorious Betsy" of the stage play, and declared in his will that it was not "reasonable" that she should share in his estate equally with his other children.

The will begins with his reference to "Glorious Betsy" and her conduct toward him. Item 9 of the will, covering this feature, is as follows:

"The conduct of my daughter, Betsy, has through life been so disobedient that in no instance has she ever consulted my opinion or feelings. Indeed, she has caused me more anxiety and trouble than all of my other children put together, and her folly and misconduct has occasioned me a train of expense that, first and last, has cost me much money. Under such circumstances it would not be reasonable, just or proper that she should, at my death, inherit or participate in an equal proportion with my other children in a division of my estate. Considering, however, the weakness of human nature that she is still my daughter, it is my will and pleasure to provide for her as follows, viz:

"I give and devise to my said daughter, Betsy: First, The house and lot on the east side of South street, where she was born, the house and lot now being occupied by Mr. Duncen, the bootmaker. Second, The house and lot at the corner of Market street bridge, now occupied by Mr. Daily, the chairmaker, and Mr. Priestly, the cabinetmaker. Third, The three adjoining

Life of Famed Glorious Betsy Revealed in Will at Sparta

Intimate glimpses of the mad-cap character of Betsy Patterson, romantic girl figure of Baltimore life in the early days of the nation, who later married Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte, of France, and upon whose career the stage play "Glorious Betsy" was based, are given in a copy of the will of William Patterson, her father, which is on file in the courthouse at Sparta, Ga.

This will, which was filed 101 years ago in Hancock county because of the heavy business interests of the testator, reveals a gripping story of the business life of the late colonial days and of the days during the American revolutionary war for independence told by the old merchant. The testator was 75 years old when he made his will and he wrote in 60 pages of long hand the story of his life, of how he amassed his fortune and of his philosophy of life and his view of business ethics. He tells of how he engaged in the shipping business during the revolutionary war and gives a graphic description of how he brought powder to America from France to be used by General Washington, who was at that time engaged in battle with the British near Boston.

"We finally got one ship loaded with powder through to Philadelphia and at that time General Washington did not have enough powder to fire a salute," the old merchant wrote.

Engaged in Shipping. The writer of the will was engaged in the shipping business at Philadelphia for many years. He came to this country from Ireland when 12 years old. He soon built up a paying business and later moved to Baltimore. He outlined his plans for making investments in the shipping business which he termed "a gamble."

He said he would never risk more than one-half of his fortune in any one venture.

Mr. Patterson went to the West Indies to establish a base of operations for carrying supplies to the American colonies during the war. He was at St. Eustatia, but because of the activity of the British he moved his quarters to Martinique. A successful venture in shipping Mr. Patterson invested in real estate in Baltimore and soon acquired vast holdings in that city.

At the time he made his will the older trader evidently was offended at the conduct of his daughter, Betsy, the "Glorious Betsy" of the stage play, and declared in his will that it was not "reasonable" that she should share in his estate equally with his other children.

The will begins with his reference to "Glorious Betsy" and her conduct toward him. Item 9 of the will, covering this feature, is as follows:

"The conduct of my daughter, Betsy, has through life been so disobedient that in no instance has she ever consulted my opinion or feelings. Indeed, she has caused me more anxiety and trouble than all of my other children put together, and her folly and misconduct has occasioned me a train of expense that, first and last, has cost me much money. Under such circumstances it would not be reasonable, just or proper that she should, at my death, inherit or participate in an equal proportion with my other children in a division of my estate. Considering, however, the weakness of human nature that she is still my daughter, it is my will and pleasure to provide for her as follows, viz:

"I give and devise to my said daughter, Betsy: First, The house and lot on the east side of South street, where she was born, the house and lot now being occupied by Mr. Duncen, the bootmaker. Second, The house and lot at the corner of Market street bridge, now occupied by Mr. Daily, the chairmaker, and Mr. Priestly, the cabinetmaker. Third, The three adjoining brick houses and lots at the corner of Market and Frederick streets, extending westwardly on Market street until they meet the old houses on Market street that are bequeathed to my son, Henry. Fourth, The two new brick houses and lots on the east side of Gay street, near Griffith's bridge, together with the vacant ground adjoining behind, leading into Harrison street, for and during the time of the natural life of her, my said daughter, Betsy."

Grandson Attorney General. A grandson of Patterson's recalled that daughter was attorney general in President Roosevelt's cabinet. Another item of the Patterson will creates a trust fund, with the mayor and council of Baltimore and their successors in office, trustees, with the interest from which a monument to the cause of liberty was to be erected in the city of Baltimore. The item of the will creating the trust provides that after the interest from the trust fund becomes sufficient to erect the monument, that it should be placed in the city of Baltimore, to the memory of General Lafayette. The plot of the ground upon which the two monuments were to be erected was given to the trustees by the testator.

After the erection of the two monuments the Patterson will provided that the interest from the trust fund should be used for the purpose of improving the harbor or harbors at Baltimore in the interest of the shipping industry. However, after his will had been signed and witnessed, becoming vexed with the mayor and council of Baltimore over some real or fancied grievance, accounts of which were not given, Patterson executed a codicil to his will in which he revoked the trust and withdrew the bequest.

Washington, June 2.—(Special)—Funds soon will be made available to the Georgia State College of Agriculture for extension work under provisions of the last deficiency bill passed before adjournment of congress. Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, a member of the appropriations committee, said today.

The college will share in an appropriation of $800,000 for work being carried on by the various state institutions, the fund being provided for in the so-called Capper-Ketcham bill in which Senator Harris took an active interest.

A New Civic Center

On account of the number of unusual features of the Wall street level of the Arcade, this floor has been termed a new civic center for Atlanta. Here one finds a club room for civic organizations, visitors' room, with a competent maid constantly in charge; ladies' rest room, parcel lockers, post office and barber shop and other extraordinary service. An excellent example of the management's policy to make the Peachtree Arcade "a city within itself."

HANSELL BACKERS POINT TO RECORD

Pointing to a long list of constructive achievements in which the city construction department has been engaged since William A. Hansell took office in 1923 as chief of construction and pointing out the "inadvisability of making any change in the department at this time," the campaign committee sponsoring reelection of Mr. Hansell Saturday issued a statement in behalf of his candidacy.

The communication points out that within the past five years 147.28 miles of street paving have been laid within the city limits and cites the claim that this is two-thirds as much as was laid in more than 75 years previous to that date.

Included among other figures and projects listed in the communication were the following improvements:

Laying of 135.68 miles of sidewalks; 102.04 miles of curbs, 96.51 miles of sewers; widening and regrading of Forrest avenue; Spring street; Peters street; Teelwood drive; East Fair street; Washington street; East Alexander street; Courtland street; Capitol avenue. Construction of the Elkhorn Drive. Arch. McDonough road; Henne street; Bell-Hill street and Forrest avenue bridges and underpasses; Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts supervision work being under construction.

Bridge Reconstruction.
Reconstruction of the Magnolia, Confederate avenue and Mitchell street viaducts and bridges.

Design of fire station house No. 19; laying out Candler field, Atlanta's airport; and design of hangars, rest building, floodlight towers and other improvements incident to establishment of a modern field.

"A change in the office of chief of construction would probably entail activity on many important construction projects at this time and would disrupt a pretentious program of improvements already mapped out," the statement pointed out.

"Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts are already under way. Mr. Hansell has worked faithfully and diligently in assisting with the plans for the structures. He is familiar with every detail. A change would mean that another individual must acquaint himself with the work, and this would tend to retard progress on the structures."

Has Efficient Employees.

"Mr. Hansell's opponents admit he has an efficient corps of employees. This is shown by a campaign promise that most members of the department will retain their posts in the event of Mr. Hansell's defeat. If that is true, why make a change at all?"

"Opposition has attacked making of the topographical, property line and triangulation surveys and have branded them a waste of money. We once had a topographical map of the then city limits of Atlanta. That map now is worthless because the Atlanta sewerage system drains practically all of Fulton and many parts of De Kalb counties. Every honest engineer will admit that a map of the drainage area contained in a divide is an important factor in the size of the drain which must be constructed to dispose properly of sewage and storm water."

"There is only one way to ascertain that, and the topographical map is that way. The maps will pay for themselves many times in the next few years. This is shown by the fact that reliable, competent and sound engineering firms made bona fide offers to the city to do the maps without cost if the city would give them the taxes the property line map will add to the registers for the 10 years following completion of the surveys."

Extras in Concerning Work.

"Walter F. Schulz, consulting engineering on the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts, should have answered to the satisfaction of everyone the charge of excessive extras in depression of the railway tracks over which the bridges will be built. There were certain unit prices, which were followed to the letter of the contract. The construction department did not make the contract, but as a servant of the mayor, general council and the people of Atlanta, it protected the interests of the citizens of the city in every possible manner."

"The records of the incumbents in the office demonstrate without effectual contradiction, efficiency, honesty, courtesy and a knowledge of the needs of the city. A progressive administration in keeping with the growing demands on the department is promised by the Hansell ticket."

"Many changes in downtown Atlanta have been effected by the department in an effort to expedite movement of vehicular traffic. This has saved the city hundreds of thousands of dollars in time which would have been spent in traffic jams."

"We feel sure that citizens of Atlanta will weigh the question and then vote to retain the present organization. It will react to the best interests of the city. The Hansell campaign has been conducted on a high plane and without dealing in personalities."

SIX LEAVE TODAY FOR DEPORTATION TO NATIVE LANDS

Six aliens will leave Atlanta this afternoon for Ellis Island, whence they will be deported to their respective countries. The party will be in charge of Immigration Inspector J. H. McVay and Lieutenant of Police Jack Maloney.

Those to be deported are Mike Raskich, Jugo-Slavia; Francisco Rodriguez, Spain; Thomas Cole, Liberia; Luis Opina, Colombia; Nicholas Matsowka, Greece; and George Mack, Turkey. Two aliens will be picked up at cities en route and will accompany the deportation party to Ellis Island.

DR. WM. COCHRAN TO RUN FOR SEAT IN LEGISLATURE

Thomasville, Ga., June 2.—Dr. William R. Cochran, well known and popular citizen of Thomasville, has announced as a candidate in the coming democratic primary for member of the Georgia legislature from Thomas county.

Although the list of candidates for most of the offices at the disposal of the county voters is unusually large this year, Dr. Cochran's announcement is only the second made for the place of state legislator, in the lower branch of the legislature.

SPARTA POLICE CHIEF TO CLEAN UP TOWN

Sparta, Ga., June 2.—Chief of Police Thomas R. Brantley assumed his duties Friday after his election on last Monday night, and immediately entered upon a campaign to clean up the streets, vacant lots and all places where debris has collected during the winter months. The job of sanitary officer has been given Chief Brantley and he has a force of hands who will make a clean-up of every place that needs it.

'BLACK CROWS' HEAD STARS COMING HERE

When Atlantans go to the Erlanger theater next Wednesday night to see and hear the entertainment brought here for the one performance, by the Southern Musical bureau, they will see some of the most famous and most expensive stars in the theatrical firmament of today.

Headed by the "Two Black Crows," blackface dialogue artists whose inimitable humor, transferred to the phonograph, has resulted in the sale of more than 3,000,000 records in the past 18 months, the company of performers is far and away ahead of anything seen here in several years, as far as popularity goes.

W. C. Fields, the former Folies comedian, who has more recently been starring in feature motion picture comedies, also is in the company. Ruth Joan, former Metropolitan soprano, is to sing, as well as Clifford O'Rourke, Irish tenor, and famous in New York amusement circles as a singer of romantic ballads.

The program, which was announced Saturday by S. Russell Bridges, president of the bureau, shows that the "Black Crows" will give three of their newest and funniest dialogue scenes while Fields also will present three of his skits. That is, of course, according to program. How many times they will appear in response to audience demands, no one, of course, can tell.

Miss Joan and Mr. O'Rourke are both down for several solo appearances as well as for one group of musical comedy songs together.

Scots for the offering, which are going so fast that it is apparent that the house will be sold out before Wednesday night, are on sale at Cable Piano company, north Broad street, and Phillips and Crew Piano company, corner Ellis and Peachtree streets.

MAJOR GAUGLER, ORDNANCE OFFICER, ARRIVES AT FORT

Major Roland L. Gaugler, ordnance department, recently assigned to headquarters Fourth Corps area to replace Lieutenant-Colonel Sidney S. Underwood, who is to be retired July 10, has arrived at Fort McPherson to take over the duties of corps area ordnance officer. He comes to the Fourth Corps area from Washington, D. C., where he was on organized reserve duty.

Major Gaugler is a native of New Jersey and began his army career as a cadet at the military academy in March, 1900. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the cavalry branch in June, 1913. On January 13, 1918, he was promoted to first lieutenant and assigned to the ordnance department, and received the temporary rank of lieutenant-colonel in the same branch on August 2, 1919. He was transferred permanently to the ordnance department in July, 1920, and has since served with that branch.

Scout Douglas Oliver, Jr., Is Honored On Eve of Departure for African Wilds

At the right, Douglas Oliver, Jr., Atlanta, is shown being congratulated by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale on his selection to accompany the Martin Johnsons on an African trip. At the top is pictured a portion of the parade of 2,000 scouts in Doug's honor and the car in which the youthful Eagle Scout rode.

Douglas Oliver, Atlanta Eagle scout, who leaves for New York at 8 o'clock this morning on the first leg of his trip to Africa, where he will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson on their next camera "Safari," was given a farewell tribute Saturday in a rally at the Wesley Memorial church, following a parade in which more than 2,000 scouts and scout officials participated.

A point of interest in the program was the presentation to Douglas by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale of a check from Troops 25, 1, 3, 20 and 71, and the presentation by Douglas of $3 certificates to Atlanta scoutmasters. The parade was headed by the Police band, followed by a car containing the mayor, Doug, his mother, Mrs. W. K. Duncan; his scoutmaster, Frank Coyle, and his assistant scoutmaster, W. E. Coley. Around the car, Doug's own troop, No. 25, formed a guard of honor. Following this car was another carrying W. A. Dobson, city scout executive; T. W. Moore, president of the scout council, and W. Perlin, Nicholson, scout commissioner. Then followed about 2,000 scouts marching in troops. The parade disbanded at the Wesley Memorial church where the rally was held. The meeting was opened by a speech from Doug, who thanked his brother scouts for the cooperation they have given him. Mayor Ragsdale, in presenting the check to the youthful adventurer, said that he had never felt he was doing a greater honor than in presenting to a true Boy Scout the pledge of the admiration of his fellow citizens. W. A. Dobson, who presided, praised Doug as the most representative American scout with whom he had ever come in contact. T. W. Moore was the next speaker and told the scouts that a red letter day had come for scouting in the southeast. According to Mr. Moore, Doug's scoutmasters, more than any other individuals, deserve the credit for the youth's achievements. W. Perlin Nicholson, the next speaker, stressed Doug's leadership, which, together with his achievements, typifies the true spirit of scouting. F. D. Chadwick, representative of the national council and head of the sixth southeastern regional district, affirmed that Doug and his companion, Robert Douglas, of Greensboro, N. C., have done more for establishing scoutdom in the south than any other boys.

Doug presented the scoutmaster certificates, with Hal Hentz, member of the board of directors and president of the Atlanta Court of Honor, presiding. The following were given certificates: Two Atlanta boys who have gained the coveted rank of Eagle scout were awarded recognition. They were James Rankin, of Troop 60, and Jack Telford, of Troop 19. Troop 3 of Avondale won first place for the banner given to the troop with the largest proportional attendance in full uniform. Second place was won by Troop 25, and third place by Troop 10. ## WOMEN'S BODIES BACK MOVEMENT FOR PEACE

The Conference on the Cause and Cure of War held in Athens on May 3 has resulted in immediate action on the question of peace from two large women's organizations.

The Business Woman's Council of Atlanta, meeting at the College Memorial church, and the executive board of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Georgia Conference M. E. Church, South, have passed resolutions pledging their support to the multilateral treaty prescribing war among those nations signing the treaty, and urging the administration and succeeding ones to persistently prosecute negotiations until such a treaty is ratified.

Mrs. J. N. McEachern, president of the Church Women's board, stated: "We do not believe that it is necessary to change human nature in order to stop war, but we do believe that we can and will change our method of settling our disputes which no doubt will continue to arise. We will make war a crime, just as we have made murder a crime. There are still murderers, but we no longer have honorable duels."

Mrs. Rosser Little is secretary for the board of the Woman's Missionary society, and Miss Martha Harris is secretary of the Business Woman's Council of Atlanta.

TENNESSEE DELEGATES VIOLATE G. O. P. RULE

Nashville, Tenn., June 2.—(P)—Only stretching of the republican national committee rule requiring that delegates be certified to the secretary of the committee by May 23 will save three Tennessee congressional districts from going unrepresented at the national convention in Kansas City.

A telegram from Roy O. West to Hal H. Clements, Tennessee state chairman, said that no credentials had been received from the first, second and eighth districts. The first district has two delegates; the second two, while the eighth district elected four delegates with one-half vote each. J. Will Taylor, congressman and member of the national committee for the state, hails from the second district.

POTEAU TO SPEAK AT STATE NORMAL SERVICES SUNDAY

Statesboro, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) Dr. Edwin M. Poteau, supply pastor of the First Baptist church, Atlanta, and former president of Furman university, will deliver the commencement sermon at the Georgia Normal auditorium on Sunday morning. The college quartet and the Glee club have arranged some special musical numbers for this occasion.

On Monday evening Richard R. Russell, Jr., is to address the graduation exercises at the Georgia normal school at the house of representatives. J. E. McCroan, chairman of the executive board of the college, will deliver the address to eighty-two graduates.

New Piggly Wiggly Store and Market Opened on Saturday

Big crowds Saturday attended the model new store and market opened on that day at 224 Ponce de Leon avenue, at Myrtle street, by the Piggly Wiggly Georgia company, according to the statement of Harry G. Brown, vice president and general manager.

C. R. Holland is in charge of the new store as manager and J. P. Hill is market manager. Both are widely experienced in their lines. The new establishment brings the total of Piggly Wiggly stores here to 32, with 20 Piggly Wiggly markets. Mr. Brown says more new stores will be opened in the near future in accordance with Piggly Wiggly's large expansion program planned for this city.

Divorce Granted.

Gallipoli, Miss., June 2.—(P)—Chancellor Williams, presiding over a chancery court term, today granted a divorce to Ollie May Cuevas, wife of Hubert J. Cuevas, of Gallipoli, after the couple had been married for two years. The ceremony was performed when the young woman was 14 years of age, and the court granted annulment of marriage on a plea of cruelty.

girls are invited to be on hand as guests of the Rich company throughout the week. Mrs. Joseph's puppet shows will have as their subjects well known stories and characters dear to the hearts of children the world over.

FARM RELIEF BLOC PLANS CAMPAIGN FOR KANSAS CITY

Chicago, June 2.—(P)—A committee was named today at a meeting of prominent republicans interested in farm relief to prepare resolutions to be submitted to a second meeting of farm relief advocates at Kansas City on June 9. If the resolutions are approved at the second meeting they will be taken before the republican national convention three days later as this group's farm relief program and a request will be made that whatever action is decided on be incorporated in the republican platform.

The committee to prepare the resolutions is composed of Senator James F. Watson, of Indiana; Governor Adam McMullen, of Nebraska; and George Peck, of Moline, Ill., who represented farm organizations at Washington sponsoring the McNary-Haugen bill vetoed by the president. At the same time the meeting here was in progress farmers from a dozen northern Illinois counties were gathering at DeKalb to adopt resolutions calling for relief and to protest the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. Many of these farmers at the beginning of the open air meeting expressed the intention of going to the Kansas City convention.

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

When you buy an electric refrigerator, do a bit of investigating on your own. Look under the cabinet, look carefully inside it, and, above all things, listen to it.

When you look under the cabinet do you find moving parts of machinery or no machinery at all? In the General Electric Refrigerator, you'll notice at once that all the models are up-on-legs. This means an easy job cleaning under them. And it also means that all the machinery is safely sealed away in the air-tight steel casing which you see on top of the cabinet.

Look inside. Is there really ample food space? You will find in the General Electric Refrigerator that the chilling chamber is amazingly compact. It actually takes little more space than the trays in which your ice is frozen.

Then listen. This you must do. We want you to judge for yourself the quietness with which the General Electric Refrigerator operates.

All these things are vitally important. But be sure to consider, too, the organization which makes it. The General Electric Refrigerator is the product of fifteen years of research in the laboratories of General Electric.

Come in and see the many models. Notice their absolute simplicity. Make comparisons with other refrigerators. If you write us, we will be glad to send you a booklet which gives complete descriptions of the various models.

Time payments can be arranged, if you prefer.

DECATUR CHAMBER TOUR IS OUTLINED

Decatur, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—Business men of this section of the state will visit those of southern Georgia on a big four-day motor tour which has been arranged by the Decatur Chamber of Commerce beginning June 19 and continuing through June 22, it was announced today.

This motorcade will constitute the most extensive tour ever planned by the organization. It was pointed out, and covers the many south Georgia sections that are expected to prove interesting to those participating. A special feature of the tour is an entire day and night to be spent on Tybee Island.

A subcommittee was appointed at a previous meeting, of which Robert Hamspek is chairman, to submit a route for the proposed tour and suggest the dates that such should be held.

This committee, which includes Hugh Burgess, John W. Weekes, Foster Law, Robert Ingram and F. E. Gogler, submitted its report and the dates suggested and the tour outlined were unanimously approved. The proposed motorcade will be as follows:

Leaving Decatur at 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning, June 19, going by way of Covington and Madison to Thomson, where luncheon will be had at 1:45 p. m. Leaving Thomson in the afternoon the party will proceed by way of Augusta to Waynesboro where the first night will be spent. From Waynesboro the tourists will visit Millen, Sylvania, Springfield, on the second day. Reaching Savannah at noon they will either remain there or at a hotel on Tybee Island until the afternoon of the next day.

Leaving Savannah on the afternoon of June 21, the motorists will proceed to Dublin, where the third night will be spent.

From Dublin on the morning of June 22 the party will go to Milledgeville, where the last day's luncheon will be had. In the afternoon of this day the motorcade will return to Decatur.

Those interested in entering this motorcade should communicate with the Decatur Chamber of Commerce. Charles D. McKinney is general chairman of the Seeing Georgia movement. B. Hugh Burgess is chairman of the motorcade, and Robert Hamspek is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Elimination of Peachtree 'Bottle Neck' Faces Council

—WIDENING OF PEACHTREE STREET—FROM BAKER STREET TO IVY STREET——OFFICE OF CHIEF OF CONSTRUCTION—
ATLANTA GEORGIA—

Proposed elimination of the "bottle neck" on Peachtree street between Baker and Ivy streets is shown in the above drawing furnished by William A. Hansell, chief of construction. The shaded portion on the east side of Peachtree street shows the extent of the improvement. City council will consider the project at its regular semi-monthly meeting Monday.

City council at its session Monday, in addition to considering a proposal to widen the eastern side of Peachtree street between Baker and Ivy 20 feet, thus making the thoroughfare an 80-foot boulevard from the central business district to North avenue, also will have before it a proposal of Councilman William E. Saunders, of the twelfth ward, to float another bond issue calling for issuance of $1,500,000 worth of securities.

Deeds to property for extension of Peachtree drive from eighth to 16th streets also will be offered to council with a view of extending the street through to Peachtree street within the next few months.

"Bottle Neck" Elimination.
Elimination of the "bottle neck" on Peachtree would open up the boulevard and would do much to relieve congestion of traffic on Peachtree street, according to council leaders. Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward, is sponsoring the project. He also will push the Peachtree drive improvement, and announced Saturday that actual work on the second section of widening, regrading and repaving of Luckie street, which extends from Hunnicutt to North avenue, is under way.

The Peachtree widening project will go to council with a unanimous recommendation of all members of that body who attended a meeting of the streets committee of city council Thursday afternoon. At that time property owners were heard from and while there was some opposition to the proposal to establish a taxing zone to pay for the improvement, there was no concerted protest.

Elias Pay Ward.
One of the outstanding features of the Saunders proposal will be $200,000 in bonds to accept the proffer of Jacob Elias for establishment of a pay ward to be operated in conjunction with Grady hospital. Mr. Elias has offered to give the city $100,000 if another $200,000 is posted for the annex. Council leaders will insist that the city take immediate steps to accept the tender inasmuch as Mr. Elias insists on immediate action. The county is expected to give $100,000 to complete the sum needed.

Mr. Saunders announced Saturday that he will ask that another $300,000 be added to the original paper which called for $1,200,000. The added amount will be for a modern police station.

Mr. Saunders also will ask that the uniform of Atlanta policemen for the summer be khaki, and that city council authorize purchase of the suits from city funds.

Other allocations of the Saunders bond proposal include $250,000 for library improvements, $250,000 for new buildings for Battle Hill sanitarium, $200,000 for park improvements, and $150,000 for a junior high school in the southern, and another $150,000 for a new junior high school in the southwestern sections of the city.

WOMEN PRAISED FOR HOME SURVEYS

San Antonio, Texas, June 2.—(AP)—Describing the meaning of "home" as "the assemblage of things with and through which man lives," Dr. J. Willis Slaughter, of Rice institute, Houston, Texas, congratulated the General Federation of Women's Clubs here tonight for their campaign to develop and teach the fine art of living.

Dr. Slaughter, speaking before the nineteenth biennial convention of the federation, said that the home "is the origin and the final objective of human activity. It is that fixation of human forces and achievements which makes civilization possible, which gives to each new generation a higher and firmer foothold in the ascent of man."

Devoted to Surveys.
The federation has devoted the last four years to surveys, studies and experiments for the improvement of the American home and the keynote of the present convention is "the fine art of living."

Dr. George K. Burgess, director of the bureau of standards, revealed many ways in which his bureau is making it possible for Americans to practice the fine art of living.

The bureau of standards, he said, has made a careful study of materials, prices, designs and property values in order to give homebuilders the best possible help in creating their homes. Zoning plans, plumbing, safe and efficient lighting systems, fire hazards, and many other questions have been investigated to make possible the building of the most efficient and satisfactory home.

Goes Into Home.
The work of the bureau then goes into the home, testing equipment from the automobile to the radio set, developing a new and better sugar for the housewife, devising schemes for reducing the cost of manufacturing, distributing and selling home equipment, setting standards of weight, measure and quality and providing dependable practices for certification and labeling of goods.

Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson, of Dayton, Ohio, dealing with a different phase of the home problem, told the delegates that women now hold the purse strings in America and that it is up to them to master economics if they are to make homes a success.

She declared that billions of dollars are lost annually through men being absent from work because their wives have not learned how to buy proper food.

FULTON OFFICER LEAVES TO BRING SAUNDERS HERE

Armed with extradition papers signed by Governor L. G. Hardman, County Policeman W. A. Wells left Atlanta Saturday afternoon for New York to return George M. Saunders for trial in Fulton superior court on charges growing out of stock selling activities here in 1927.

Nine indictments are pending against Saunders in three of which he is jointly accused with Jerry Tiffany and E. O. Freeman. The three men are said to have operated a stock concern here under the name of Phillips & Co., fleeing numerous Atlantans by selling them worthless securities.

The indictments allege cheating and swindling and selling stocks without a Georgia license, which is a misdemeanor.

Losses suffered by clients through their dealings with the trio, according to investigating officers, have been estimated as high as $200,000. The other two men have never been located.

MEX. SMUGGLERS ORDERED TO LEAVE

Mexico City, June 2.—(AP)—Two men are under arrest in connection with the attempted smuggling of silk into Mexico from the United States, and the attorney of one of them has been ordered to leave the country.

General Jose Alvarez, former chief of President Calles' staff, and Magistrate Jorge Castaneda Rendon are in cells at police headquarters and more arrests are expected.

Teleforo Ocampo, one of the most prominent attorneys in Mexico who has been General Alvarez's counsel for a long time, was ordered to leave Mexico. Ocampo denied that he had any connection with the smuggling operations which led to General Alvarez's dismissal from his post and his arrest. He intends to leave for Havana by way of Vera Cruz shortly.

Guidobaldo Elias, customs chief at Laredo, discovered the contraband and notified the president. President Calles said Alvarez immediately visited him and claimed that he had been the victim of a political plot. Calles said that investigation, however, revealed his guilt.

RE-ELECT R. C. TURNER CITY ELECTRICIAN

A Competent Man in a Vital Post

This is an electric age. Electricity lights our homes and streets, drives our trolley cars, lifts our elevators and operates our greatest entertainer, the motion picture. But electricity must be properly regulated to be safe and serviceable. For such regulation the people of Atlanta look to their city electrician.

R. C. Turner, our present city electrician, has served the people well. He is thoroughly trained in the technical phases of electrical engineering. He is always ready to give prompt and courteous personal attention to the needs of citizens. His professional standing is indicated by the fact that he is a past president of the International Association of Municipal Electricians.

During his term of office Atlanta's whiteway lights have been greatly improved and extended over the city. All inspection services of the electrician's office have been faithfully performed. Candler Field has been so well lighted that electricians have come from all over the country to study its illumination before lighting their own airports.

If reelected Mr. Turner promises to continue these improvements. He will advocate more equitable rates for users of electrical devices in homes. He will continue to safeguard the safety of the people.

He will serve Atlanta.

SHIP COLLISION CAUSE MYSTERY

Boston, June 2.—(AP)—The mystery of the collision which sent the freighter Kershaw to the bottom off Vineyard Haven yesterday morning with the loss of seven members of her crew was as great as ever today as federal authorities prepared to question the 29 survivors and the officers and crew of the liner President Garfield, the ship which rammed the smaller craft.

The surviving members of the Kershaw's crew including her master, Captain E. S. Brooks, were aboard the steamship Fairfax of the Merchants and Miners corporation, owners of the Kershaw. They and officers of the Garfield declined to discuss the collision.

The ships met in bright moonlight with admitted visibility of between 10 and 15 miles and a smooth sea, after having been in sight of each other for at least four miles.

The stem of the Garfield plowed into the Kershaw, which sank within five minutes. The tug was in the past tore a large hole in the Garfield's bow below the waterline and necessitated a transfer of ballast which sent the four party to the vessel high in the water for the completion of its trip to Boston.

Today temporary repairs to the Garfield were being rushed and it was expected it would be able to leave for New York tomorrow. The Fairfax, with Kershaw survivors aboard, was planning to sail for Baltimore late today.

The President Garfield, a Dollar Line ship, was bound from New York to Boston and the completion of a round-the-world cruise. The Kershaw was headed for Norfolk from Boston.

Lindbergh Wrote To Herrick Year After Epic Hop

Paris, June 2.—(AP)—Although Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh spent May 21, the anniversary of his arrival in Paris, in the utmost seclusion, he apparently thought enough of the anniversary to muse over it and to dream of the future, for on that day he wrote a letter to Ambassador Herrick in Paris, his host on his historic arrival in the French capital.

The letter, which was dated New York, May 21, and was received by Ambassador Herrick today, read:

"Dear Ambassador: It is a year ago tonight that I landed in Paris among a people who are now to me second only to my own. I wish that I might be spending this evening again in your embassy and among my friends in France. Paris does not seem 3,000 miles away and some day it will be less than 23 hours from our shores. I cannot be with you tonight, but my thoughts are of Paris and France. As ever, 'CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.'"

CUBAN GIRL DIES AFTER 14 YEARS' LIFE AS RECLUSE

Key West, Fla., June 2.—(AP)—A girl who 14 years ago imprisoned herself with a vow that her lover never again would see her face, is dead, faithful to her oath.

The girl, Julia Colon, pretty Cuban senorita whose hair reached to her knees, quarreled with her sweetheart when she was 13.

"I never want to see your face again," she told her in a flare of anger, and as heathenly she vowed he would not, and retired to a room in her aunt's home, where only once since, prior to a fatal illness, had anyone, even a close relative, seen her.

The lover returned and pleaded for forgiveness, but the door remained closed. Food was given her through a small opening; she made her toilet, and attended to all the routine of daily life for herself within her room.

A few days ago the young woman was stricken with typhoid and persisted in refusal to admit anyone who sought to give her medical attention, until the disease, from which she died yesterday, rendered her so weak she could not resist.

The physician who attended her in her last illness attributed to her long unmarred by 14 years' imprisonment. The husband, who since has married, was one of the first to hear of her death and was told, as well, that Julia Colon's last request, that her face be hidden in death as it was in life, had been granted.

Five Atlanta Boys Win High Honors In Graduating at Davidson College

Above are four Atlanta boys who were awarded diplomas at the recent graduation exercises at Davidson college, Davidson, N. C. These men have all been prominent in campus activities throughout their student careers at the Carolina school. From left to right they are: P. J. Garrison, Boyce Martin, Robert S. Lowrance, Jr., and Julian Lake.

Davidson, N. C., June 2.—(Special.)—Five Atlanta boys, who have attained prominence at Davidson college, were graduated last week in the largest class ever to receive diplomas from the institution.

They are: Boyce Martin, Robert S. Lowrance, Jr., Thomas E. McGeech, Julian Lake and P. J. Garrison.

Boyce Martin, recent winner of the low medalist cup in the North Carolina intercollegiate golf tournament, also served as editor-in-chief of "The Davidsonian," student weekly during the past year as well as a staff member of each of the other two student publications. In May, 1927, he was elected secretary of the Southern Federation of College Students.

R. S. Lowrance, Jr., an officer in the R. O. T. C. unit, holds membership in the Seaboard and Blade, honorary military fraternity. For four years he has been a member of the Glee club, as well as the symphony orchestra, and the Wilkett quartet.

T. E. McGeech, son of a prominent decatur minister, won his intergram as a member of the varsity football team and the baseball nine. He also made Gamma Sigma Epsilon, honorary chemical fraternity.

Julian Lake was chairman of the committee in charge of a recent vocational guidance institute, conducted among Davidson students and which won attendance among colleges in all sections of the south. He was a captain in one of the Davidson R. O. T. C. companies as well as a member of the Seaboard and Blade and captain of the rifle team, which won a silver cup at Camp McClelland, Ala., later going to Camp Perry to compete for national honors.

P. J. Garrison, Jr., for three seasons was a member of the wrestling team. He was never defeated in his college mat career. He has served as a member of the staffs of three different Davidson publications, as secretary-treasurer of the Forensic committee, as a member of the Y. M. C. A. board of control and as an officer of the Pandemic Literary society and as director of the college military band.

BROWN, OF BOSTON, ELECTED NEW HEAD OF 2D DIVISION

St. Louis, June 2.—(AP)—Major General Preston Brown, of Boston, was elected president of the second division, A. E. F., reunion association at the tenth annual reunion here today. He succeeds Lieutenant Colonel Hanford MacNider.

Captain John W. Thomasson, Jr., of Washington, was elected vice president; Captain C. O. Matfield, Washington, and George V. Gordon, Chicago, both were elected.

Boston was selected for the 1929 reunion and Los Angeles for the 1930 reunion. Some delegates asserted the 1930 selection was unconstitutional and threatened to fight it at next year's reunion.

SIX TENNESSEANS FILE FOR GOVERNOR ON G. O. P. TICKET

Knoxville, Tenn., June 2.—(AP)—Petitions qualifying six candidates for the republican nomination for governor of Tennessee had been filed today. Two had been qualified for the nomination for United States senator and two for membership on the railroad and public utilities commission.

Those entitled to have their names placed on the ballot for governor are Raleigh Hopkins, of Maury county; John R. Raulston, of Franklin; Lou Scott, of Savannah; Tenn.; Adam Bowman, of Johnson City; James G. Crockett, Jr., of Nashville; and M. H. Gamble, of Blount. For the senate, General James A. Fowler, of Knoxville, and former Governor Ben W. Hooper, of Newport, and for the railroad commission N. S. Sobey, of Dyer county, and S. Homer Tatum, of Crockett.

The radiogram, sent through Fort McPherson, conveyed from the secretary of war his congratulations to the school and its personnel. G. M. A. was one of only 15 schools designated for this coveted military honor last year. Captain McFadden, of the United States army, has been the war department's selection for Georgia Military academy's army post commander for several years.

New Radio Device To Chart Course Of Ocean Fliers

Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, June 2.—(AP)—Trans-oceanic fliers of the future will be able to fly a course definitely charted by means of an improved type of radio beacon, which has an absolutely fixed wave length, it was announced at the radio aircraft laboratory here today.

Radical improvements in the radio beacon and the completion of successful design of a double voltage engine driven generator for use in aircraft were announced in a statement to the Associated Press today by Captain Paul S. Edwards, signal corps, United States army, in charge of the laboratory.

"The signal corps here have made improvements in beacons which increase its efficiency 100 per cent over the old type," Captain Edwards said. "Under the old system 'A' or 'N' were sent out at four to five-second intervals. When the pilot was off the course on one side 'A' would be heard; if off on the other side 'N' would be heard. When on the course the keying arrangement caused the signals to interlock in a single dash or the letter 'T'. The old system required on the part of the pilot as the signal was on for only a split second's duration.

Under the new system the transmission is on all the time. With this character of transmission the pilot is enabled to use the same tuning method in picking up a broadcasting station. This has the effect of increasing the range of a transmitter almost double to that of the old methods."

FLORIDIANS BUCK ON PRICE ASKED FOR STATE CODE

Tallahassee, Fla., June 2.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin announced today that he had decided to withhold his proclamation designating as the official laws of Florida a compilation of acts now being published by an Atlanta firm.

The decision of the governor was reached, it was said, after numerous protests from various attorneys of the state, that the Atlanta firm was asking exorbitant prices for the compilation.

The legislature of 1927 authorized the appropriation of $35,000 for the purchase of a sufficient number of sets of the laws for state and county officers. The firm, however, is said to be asking $100 for sets of annotated copies of the acts.

BALLARD TO RUN FOR SCHOOL POST

Dr. N. H. Ballard, former state superintendent of schools, announced Saturday that he will be a candidate for this position in the democratic primaries in September, as an opponent of Dr. M. L. Duggan, who now fills this post. Dr. Duggan announced his candidacy for reelection several weeks ago.

In his announcement, Dr. Ballard said he intends to make the displacement of the state school law his chief issue. He charges that the administration of this fund by the present school authorities is "disastrous."

Few of the 63 candidates for the 16 places on Florida's unaffiliated delegation have expressed opposition to Duggan, who is on the side of or against any aspirant to the presidential nomination.

The candidacy of Governor Al Smith, of New York, however, has been placed squarely before the voters by John T. G. Crawford, national committeeman, who declared in a recent statement that "it would be unfortunate, indeed, if Florida sent to Houston a delegation so extreme in its opposition to Governor Smith as to prefer disruption of the party in preference to voting for his nomination."

FLORIDA PRIMARY TO END TUESDAY AFTER HOT RACES

Jacksonville, Fla., June 2.—(AP)—One of the warmest campaigns in the history of Florida politics drew to a close tonight as candidates for state and county offices ranging from United States senators to clergymen made last minute bids for favor in the democratic primary election Tuesday.

Wide-spread interest that has been manifested in many races, together with an outpouring of women registrants exceeding that of any previous year has accounted for a total registration more than double the number of ballots cast in the 1924 primary, according to available figures.

The campaigns of the various candidates, which have been replete with exchanges of personalities, have brought forth issues ranging from the tariff to good roads and Everglades reclamation, but the positions of candidates for delegates to the national democratic convention remains for the most part in doubt.

Few of the 63 candidates for the 16 places on Florida's unaffiliated delegation have expressed opposition to Duggan, who is on the side of or against any aspirant to the presidential nomination.

$21,228,000 APPROVED FOR MISSISSIPPI WORK

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—Allocation of $21,228,000 for prosecuting the work on the lower Mississippi under the flood control act recently approved, was announced today by Secretary of War Davis. He acted on the recommendation of the chief engineers and the president of the Mississippi river commission.

The allotments are: Bonnet Carré spillway, $1,500,000; main line levees, $8,000,000; levees, $8,000,000; dredging and miscellaneous work, $2,000,000; and surveys, $228,000.

Approval of this work was contained in the report submitted to the chief of engineers of the Mississippi river commission and in the army engineer plan submitted to congress by the chief of engineers. They do not, therefore, have to be passed upon by the board provided by the new law to consider the engineering differences between the adopted army engineer project and the plans recommended by the Mississippi river commission.

The work will be carried out by the Mississippi river commission under the local supervision of the district engineers at St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans. These officials will be instructed to prepare the necessary plans and specifications for starting work as early as practicable.

The allotment leaves a balance of $2,290,000. For the present it will be held in reserve for work on tributaries under section six of the new law and for contingencies.

EDITORS PAY VISIT TO MUSCLE SHOALS

Florence, Ala., June 2.—(AP)—Approximately 175 members of the National Editorial Association visited Muscle Shoals today as guests of J. L. Meeks, publisher of the Florence Times News.

The editors and publishers of newspapers in all sections of the country inspected the government nitrate plant and Wilson dam, and afterwards listened to an address by Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama.

Approximately 100 of the visiting newspapermen signed a telegram to President Coolidge urging him to sign the Muscle Shoals bill which recently passed congress.

The visitors left this afternoon for Nashville in continuation of their tour.

Prize-Winning Savannah High Paper To Receive Constitution Cup This Week

The Blue and White

Vol. XIX SAVANNAH HIGH SCHOOL, SAVANNAH, GA., FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1928 No. 6

S. H. S. WINS SECOND PLACE IN G. I. A. A. TOURNAMENT Addresses Lions On Junior College ARNOLD WINS DEBATING TITLE OF HIGH SCHOOL

DEFEATED IN FINALS Mercer-High Phillips Speaks Before Circle Body JACKSON HOLDS Parents' Night GIRLS WIN SILVER CUP

Here is the best high school paper published in Georgia during the 1927-28 season, in the opinion of judges appointed in the contest, sponsored by The Constitution and Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity. The staff of the paper, from left to right, are as follows: Jacques Reinstein, Jr., editor-in-chief; Adrian Colquhoun, business manager; Lowry Axley, head of the English department and faculty adviser of the editorial staff, and H. G. Swayne, head of the history department, and faculty adviser of the business staff.

As a symbol of the excellence of the paper from journalistic standpoints, a handsome silver cup will be forwarded by The Constitution this week to the editorial staff of the Savannah High School "Blue and White," the high school publication having won the cup which The Constitution awards annually in the contest sponsored by the Georgia Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity.

Keen rivalry was exhibited by the many school papers of Georgia for first honors in the contest, many excellent specimens of school journalism being received by the fraternity. Of the many entrants in the contest, ten finalists were selected and these were presented to Louis D. Newton, editor of The Christian Index, and Professor George Sparks, grand president of national Pi Delta Epsilon, of Georgia Tech, who were the judges.

The Savannah paper won first place and the silver cup, while second place was awarded to the "Gambler," of G. M. A. College Park, and third place to the "Mount Berry News," of Mount Berry school, near Rome. The "Blue and White" is the third paper to win a cup, the trophy becoming the permanent possession of the winning school each year. The winners of the first two cups were Athens High school and Albany High school. The annual contest is open to all high school papers throughout the state.

A Typical Newspaper. The "Blue and White" is a typical newspaper, being edited along a proved journalistic style, with great attention to newspaper style in heads and stories. The decision of the judges was based on typographical excellence, from the standpoint of make-up and type styles; contents of heads and stories, and the timeliness of stories and articles.

The staff of the winning "Blue and White" is headed by Jack Reinstein, editor; Adrian Colquhoun, business manager; H. G. Swayne, business faculty adviser, and Lowry Axley, editorial faculty adviser.

The high school newspaper contest was started three years ago by The Constitution in an endeavor to better the standards of student journalism, in the belief that to do so would redound to the benefit of journalism as a whole.

Student journalism is one of the most interesting features of school life, nearly every school having some form of a newspaper or bulletin, some printed by the students themselves as in the case of the "Mount Berry News." In the case of others, like the "Blue and White," the printing of the paper is farmed to a regular job printer, the school staff handling all the details of writing, makeup and advertising solicitation.

Improvement sought. The contest sponsored by Pi Delta Epsilon seeks to have the high school newspapers better their editorial style and reporting service, as well as the head writing. The majority of school newspaper reporting consists of athletics and student activities, these departments being featured in the "Blue and White." The "Blue and White" always includes an excellent column of student gossip, together with occasional fiction stories, exceedingly well written, by the students.

The judges of the contest are well-known Atlanta men. Mr. Newton, being an editor, author and publicity man. He is editor of the City Builder, official publication of the chamber of commerce, and editor of The Christian Index, widely-known Baptist publication. Dr. Sparks is a former editor of the Mason Telegraph, former feature writer of the Washington Times, Syracuse Journal, El Paso Times, Washington correspondent of southern newspapers, Mexican border correspondent and is the author of several war books. Both judges are listed in "Who's Who in America."

HARDMAN TO GREET OIL MILL LEADERS

Governor L. G. Hardman will welcome delegates to the three-day convention of the Interstate Oil Mill Superintendents' association at the opening session Wednesday morning at the city auditorium, according to announcement Saturday. An exhibition of the industry's products will be a feature of the annual gathering.

Morning and afternoon business sessions of the convention will be held in Taft hall, while the main auditorium will be used for the exhibition, including oil mill machinery, equipment and supplies. About 45 firms are planning to have exhibits for the occasion and about 300 superintendents and managers of cottonseed oil mills are expected to attend the convention, coming from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

High lights of the entertainment program will be a theater party at the Keith's Georgia on Wednesday night, and a banquet at the Atlanta Athletic club Thursday night. Hotel headquarters for the convention will be at the Ansley hotel, W. H. Camp, of Atlanta, is president, and W. Frank Duh, of Atlanta, is secretary of the Exhibitors' association.

$13,254,553 FLOOD CLAIMS ARE FILED ON NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, June 2.—(AP)—Claims totaling $13,254,553 have been filed against the city of New Orleans as the result of damage caused by the artificial levee at Cadeaux, which was cut more than a year ago to save the city from the Mississippi flood.

Time for filing the claims expired at midnight. Of the total sum $12,521,344.89 represents claims filed by the reparation commission by 2,007 claimants. Court suits instituted by 75 litigants complete the amount.

Approximately half of the claims already have been settled for an average of 28 cents on the dollar and it is considered unlikely that the total amount paid out will be more than $4,000,000.

When the levee was cut below the city several thousand acres were flooded.

SOUTHERN GIVEN RIGHT TO EXTEND CINCINNATI LEASE

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—Proposals of the Southern railroad system to extend for 60 years the lease which it now holds on the Cincinnati Southern railway, owned by the city of Cincinnati, and to raise the rental charge were approved today by the interstate commerce commission.

ADULT ON LEE LAID TO ELLIS B. BARRETT

A charge of "disorderly conduct" was made against Ellis B. Barrett, prominent Atlanta attorney and councilman from the fifth ward, Saturday night, on complaint of C. V. Lee, of 358 Washington street, who claims that he was attacked by Mr. Barrett and his brother, Detective George Barrett.

According to Lee's statement, he was walking along Washington street with a sister of the Barretts, when the two brothers rode up in an auto, and jumping out of their car, assaulted him. Ellis Barrett denied hitting Lee. Officers Ginn and McGarrity investigated.

No charge has been made up to date against George Barrett. Action in his case will have to be taken by Chief Beavers if complaint is made by Lee.

ADOPTED BOY KILLS SELF FOR SORROW OVER LOST MOTHER

Smithfield, N. C., June 2.—(AP)—Saddened by the fact that his mother could not be located after an extensive search, Willie Lee Cornett, 14, adopted son of a Johnston county couple, today was dead of self-inflicted wounds.

The body was found in the yard of the Cornett home near here. Death was caused by a gunshot.

The boy was adopted by his foster parents when he was seven years old and at that time was being cared for by the Children's Home society.

FORMER LAND BANK PRESIDENT DRAWS SIX-YEAR TERM

Kansas City, June 2.—(AP)—Walter Craven, former president of the Kansas City Joint Stock Land bank, today was sentenced to six years in the federal penitentiary and fined $25,000 by Judge Merrill E. Otis and Miss Alice R. Todd, former secretary, was sentenced to a year and a day in prison on a charge of misapplication of funds and making false entries.

This will be a convenient location to the trains so that the cream may be shipped without delay.

Mr. Fortune was cut about the face and head and had his leg hurt, besides internal injuries.

3-YEAR-OLD BOY SETS HOME AFIRE WITH CIGARETTE

Montreal, June 2.—(AP)—A three-year-old cigarette addict was blamed today by his mother for a fire which damaged the home of his parents last Wednesday. Mrs. Henry Lamarche, the mother, told Fire Commissioner Quinn in court that all efforts of herself and her husband had so far failed to keep cigarettes from the boy.

"Well, the insurance companies are not going to protect you if you allow your three-year-old son to smoke cigarettes," said an insurance representative.

MANY PILOTS ENTER BRUNSWICK AIR FETE

Brunswick, Ga., June 2.—(AP)—The committee in charge of the arrangements for the air derby to be held on St. Simons island next Friday and Saturday, when Redfern field will be dedicated, announced today that between 25 and 35 flying machines of various kinds had entered. They include three army planes from the Pensacola, Fla., air station. Indications are that the derby will be one of the largest held in this section. Several thousand out-of-town visitors are expected to attend.

BROTHERTON RITES TO BE HELD TODAY

Final rites for Charles H. Brotherton, 47, well-known Fulton county deputy, who died Friday morning at his home, 640 Grady place, will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon from the Calvary Methodist church.

The Rev. Felton Williams and the Rev. G. W. Gasque will officiate, with interment in Oakland cemetery.

An honorary escort composed of Fulton county court attaches, many of whom have served with Mr. Brotherton for years, will conduct the casket to the graveside.

This delegation has been requested to meet at Calvary church at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Brotherton was for 30 years a deputy, having received his appointment under the late Judge Henry Tanner. He had been ill for a year preceding his death.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Brotherton is survived by three brothers, Frank M., Harold P. and William M.; a daughter, Mrs. Guy Green; son, Will Stone Walker; two sons, Rev. Charles M. Meeks, pastor of the Thomasville Methodist church, officiated, the services being from the family residence and interment was in Laurel Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Stone was 74 years of age. She came to the United States from England when 12 years old and was married several years later to Charles C. Stone, of Illinois. She came with her husband to Thomasville more than 20 years ago and had since resided here continuously.

She is survived by one son, Raymond Stone, and one daughter, Mrs. Nell Stone Walker, both of this city. She was an active and useful member of the Methodist church, and greatly beloved by a large circle of friends.

MRS. G. H. BRAMBLETT BURIED AT FORSYTH

Forsyth, Ga., June 2.—Mrs. Georgia H. Bramblett, 80, widow of the late A. W. Bramblett, one of the founders of the Bramblett Hardware company, died at her residence Friday. Mrs. Bramblett suffered a fall a few weeks ago which terminated in her death.

She was a devout member of the Methodist church and one of the most esteemed women of this city. Surviving her are one son, A. W. Bramblett, Forsyth; two daughters, Mrs. H. B. May, Buford, and Mrs. E. Bridges, Griffin. Several nieces and nephews, among whom are Mrs. H. W. Searcy, Forsyth; C. W. Hill and John M. Hill, Forsyth, and W. C. Hill, Miami, Fla.

The funeral was held from the residence Saturday, conducted by Rev. J. H. Barton, pastor of the Forsyth Methodist church. Interment was in the Forsyth cemetery.

MRS. H. F. SAUMENG SUCCUMBS AT ROME

Rome, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—Mrs. H. F. Saumeng, 62, widow of the late H. F. Saumeng, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal church, died at the residence on Westmore road, Friday morning.

Mrs. Saumeng had been in poor health since late in January, but her condition was not thought alarming until Wednesday. Mrs. Saumeng was formerly Miss Maria Teresa Brown, daughter of Evans Brown, a member of the parliament in New Zealand. After a world tour her father decided to live in Asheville, N. C., and built a stone mansion on Henderson mountain, which he named Zealandia, and it was recently offered to President Coolidge as a summer white house.

Funeral services were held from St. Peter's church Saturday afternoon, conducted by Bishop H. J. McKel, at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Saumeng was buried in the cemetery on Westmore road, North Carolina.

Mrs. Saumeng is survived by three brothers, W. Vance Brown, St. Herbert, Brown, Asheville; Potter Brown, Richmond, Va.; one sister, Mrs. William Blood, New York, and her husband.

MISS MARY INGLES, ATLANTA WOMAN, DIES IN RICHMOND

News was received in Atlanta Saturday of the death in Richmond, Va., of Miss Mary Lee Ingles, who for the past 12 years had been a resident of Atlanta. Miss Ingles was ill in Atlanta for several months and last February went to her old home in Richmond, where it was hoped the change would prove beneficial.

The interment will be at Martinsville, Va., her birthplace, this afternoon.

Miss Ingles is survived by her mother, Mrs. B. H. Hughes, who spent much of her time in Atlanta; a brother, George Ingles; a sister, Mrs. Charles Watkins; three nieces, Liza-beth, Maude Randolph and Catherine Watkins, and one nephew, Charles Watkins, Jr., all of Richmond. Miss Ingles was one of the pioneers among women who entered the business field, her first and only position being with the Western Union Telegraph company and extending over a long term of years. She rose from a clerical position in the superintendent's office, Richmond, to a responsible position at the head of a department in the general manager's office, Atlanta, which necessitated her transfer here. This position she held until her illness preceding her death. She was about 50 years of age.

Miss Ingles was a member of St. Luke's Episcopal church, deeply interested in every phase of church work and was active in all benevolent causes.

MRS. EMILY J. STONE LAID TO FINAL REST

Thomasville, Ga., June 2.—Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Emily Jane Stone, who died Thursday night at the residence of her daughter, Mr. Nell Stone Walker, in this city. Rev. Charles M. Meeks, pastor of the Thomasville Methodist church, officiated, the services being from the family residence and interment was in Laurel Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Stone was 74 years of age. She came to the United States from England when 12 years old and was married several years later to Charles C. Stone, of Illinois. She came with her husband to Thomasville more than 20 years ago and had since resided here continuously.

She is survived by one son, Raymond Stone, and one daughter, Mrs. Nell Stone Walker, both of this city. She was an active and useful member of the Methodist church, and greatly beloved by a large circle of friends.

J. H. GILES, WINDER, LAID TO FINAL REST

Winder, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—John H. Giles, one of the most highly respected and progressive citizens of Barrow county, died at his home in Chandler's district Wednesday. He was 74 years of age and had been in declining health for about a year.

Mr. Giles was born in Barrow county, Ga., and moved to Jackson county in his early manhood, where he became actively engaged in farming, becoming one of the largest and most progressive farmers in this section.

He is survived by his widow; two daughters, Mrs. George W. Steed and Mrs. W. E. Elder, and two sons, P. L. Giles and Edmund Giles, all of Barrow county, and one son, Mrs. Mattie Caruth, of Oconee county. He was a brother-in-law of R. A. W. Smith, of Winder. His funeral was held at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, at the residence of Mr. Giles, on Westmore road, North Carolina.

Funeral services were held from St. Peter's church Saturday afternoon, conducted by Bishop H. J. McKel, at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Saumeng was buried in the cemetery on Westmore road, North Carolina.

Mrs. Saumeng is survived by three brothers, W. Vance Brown, St. Herbert, Brown, Asheville; Potter Brown, Richmond, Va.; one sister, Mrs. William Blood, New York, and her husband.

BEN P. MILTON DIES IN TELEPHONE BOOTH

Ben P. Milton, of 906 Briarcliff road, was found dead in a telephone booth at the Terminal station about 8 o'clock Saturday night by Patrolmen Alonzo Walker and C. D. Holton.

When someone called the attention of the officers to a man who was slumped down in one of the telephone booths they investigated and found the man apparently dead. He was rushed to Grady hospital, where staff doctors pronounced him lifeless upon arrival.

Milton apparently had been talking with someone over the telephone when he was stricken, for his arm was hanging across the transmitter and the receiver was dangling near his hand when the body was found.

He was an agent of the Proter & Gamble company and had offices in the Norris building.

F. M. KIRCUS, 81, IS LAID TO REST NEAR WINDER, GA.

Winder, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—One of the few remaining Confederate veterans of Barrow county passed away in the death of F. M. Kircus, who died at his home near Winder on Wednesday. He was 81 years old and had been in failing health for some six months. He was able to attend the last veterans' reunion at Winder on April 26 and was in apparently good health at the time. His wife died about two years ago, and he had been living with his children at his home above Winder since then.

During the civil war he served in the 42d Georgia regiment and made an excellent soldier.

Mr. Kircus is survived by three sons, William, John and Atticus Kircus, and two daughters, Miss Pearl Kircus and Mrs. Levi Smith, all of Winder, and a number of grand children. His funeral was held at Cedar Creek church Thursday afternoon, Rev. S. P. Higgins officiating, and his remains were interred by the side of his wife in the churchyard near by.

OWNERS PROTEST INROAD OF STORES

beauty of Peachtree road, and the enjoyment of our homes.

The corner in question is a portion of the property formerly constituting the estate of Walter Andrews and acquired from him by the Massell company. The corner on which the stores are said to be planned is understood to have a frontage of 300 feet on Peachtree road and 500 feet on Andrews drive, coming to a point at the junction of these two streets, the greatest width is understood to be 600 feet.

Other Property Restricted.

The movement of protestation on the part of property owners is said to have originated as result of a recent newspaper item announcing the proposed store development. With the exception of the former Andrews property and another vacant parcel, said to be controlled by residents of the neighborhood, the land in this section is subject to residential restrictions incorporated in the deeds, it was stated.

Members of the committee appointed to present the resolution together with Chairman McCrea are Frank Fleming, Clarence Haverly, Shepley and Ryan, Arnold Broyles, Edward H. Inman, Mrs. W. T. Hendley, Robert C. Alston, Harry Harmon, James F. Hickey, Ryburn G. Clay, Stuart Wilham, Ott Alston, Dr. F. P. Calhoun, H. Clay Moore, Clark Howell, Jr., Cary F. Baker, Jr., Bulow Campbell, Edwin Johnson, Carl Dinkler,

E. J. Lang, of 1268 Piedmont avenue, was found dead in his home Saturday with a bullet wound in his head and a pistol by his side, according to police reports. A coroner's jury, at the undertaking parlors of Harry G. Poole, gave the cause of death as "a pistol wound, self-inflicted." Lang is said to have taken a note to his wife that he was taking his life because of financial difficulties.

SHORT IS PROMOTED TO MACON POSITION

Paul Short, for the past year director general of all the neighborhood theater interests of Lucas and Jenkins in Atlanta, has been promoted to the position of city manager of that company's theaters in Macon, it was announced Saturday.

Not alone has Mr. Short, one of the youngest theater executives in the south, made a record for himself in the managerial duties, but at the suggestion of Mr. Lucas and Mr. Jenkins he recently inaugurated a policy of presenting elaborate stage shows at each of that company's houses in Atlanta, the West End, the Palace and the Tenth Street.

Producing these shows himself, and advertising them under the name of "Paul Short's Follies," the youthful theater executive soon became one of the most widely-known men in the city, and one of the best-dressed producers. He used local talent exclusively, taking it in a more or less unskilled form and whipping it into attractive stage shows, with attractive scenery and costumes.

Under Mr. Short's direction, several local semi-professional stage artists have grown into vast popularity, and should Mr. Short pursue a similar policy in Macon it is probable that some really nationally famous performers will be discovered in Georgia's central city.

The stage shows are but a small item of Mr. Short's activities and innovations in neighborhood theater operation. He has introduced successfully many new ideas in smaller theater operation and his promotion to the more important post is scheduled to bring the Lucas-Jenkins theaters in Macon to an even higher plane of entertainment, and into more popularity even than they enjoy now.

It was under the guiding hand of William K. Jenkins, of the Lucas-Jenkins theater, that the young Mr. Short, then just out of college, made his entrance into the theater field as manager of the West End theater, then under the supervision of Alpha Fowler, one of the most prominent smaller theater operators in the country.

The purpose of Colonel Lindbergh's visit is a survey of possible airway routes. His hour of departure from here and destination have not been announced.

Members of the national committee began taking up the hotel space allotted to them in anticipation of their preliminary task Monday when they will start hearing various delegations contesting for seats on the convention floor.

Entire Delegations.

All of these contests, which involve 73 seats, have been brought from southern states except for two delegates from Porto Rico; in the case of Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi they affect entire state delegations.

Two weeks or more of long working days before them, Chairman William M. Butler, of the national committee, was at his desk at committee headquarters in the security building where a large suite has been reserved for the central organization. In another private office was Roy O. West, the committee's secretary, and still another, William V. Hodges, committee treasurer.

Early Delegates.

Over in the Baltimore hotel in spacious quarters, were the early Hoover and Lowden delegates and arrangements have been made in the same hotel for Curtis, of Kansas, Watson, of Indiana, also will open headquarters early next week.

In the lobbies of the Baltimore and the Hotel Muebach where most of the delegates might be seen, little groups of committeemen, an early delegate or two and newspapermen were talking over the situation and the talk was pretty general and confined mostly to what everybody already knows.

The single new topic was the pillage of farmers who, reports from various middle western centers have said, are mobilizing for a march on the convention city to demand a strong farm relief declaration in the party platform and a middle western candidate.

Action of Farmers.

"What are the farmers going to do?" was asked on all sides. Nobody seemed to have the answer and the general opinion was that it would have to remain speculation until more concrete developments had shown themselves.

At Hoover headquarters, where James W. Good is in charge, the tendency was to laugh off the pillaging although there was no concealment that it was thought to be detrimental to the commerce secretary's candidacy. Rather than comment on it directly, Good produced a sheet of letters from corn belt writers declaring "politics" lack of the movement.

DEMOCRATS PLAN TO VISIT ATLANTA

Democrats from North and South Carolina and Georgia will establish temporary headquarters in Atlanta on June 23 as they stop here for a few hours en route to Houston to the democratic national convention. The Henry Grady hotel has been selected by former Governor Clifford Walker, chairman of the committee on arrangements, as the Atlanta point of concentration for the delegates from three states.

The Georgia delegates will begin arriving in Atlanta early in the morning on June 23, and will be housed at the Henry Grady hotel. Those from North Carolina will arrive at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon over the Southern railroad. The entire group will leave at 8 o'clock on the "Senator George Special" for Houston.

The first stop will be at New Orleans, where the special will stop for the day while the city of New Orleans acts as host to the delegates and their friends. Leaving New Orleans at 10 o'clock Sunday night, June 24, the train will arrive in Houston Monday morning about 9 o'clock.

The Carolinians will be carried on three Pullmans which will start from points within those states and will be joined to the rest of the "Senator George Special" in Atlanta. Anyone interested in securing reservations in the limited space still available on the special may do so by communicating with F. L. Nelson, district passenger agent of the Atlanta & West Point railroad, in the Henley building, Atlanta. Transportation from Atlanta to Houston is slightly more than $22, with Pullman rates as follows: Tourer berth, $8.20; lower berth, $10.25; section, $18.45; compartment, $29; drawing room, $36.50.

CAROLINA CASTS VERY LIGHT VOTE

Charlotte, N. C., June 2.—(AP)—Casting one of the lightest votes in the history of democratic primaries in the state, North Carolina democrats today voted on two state offices and for congressmen in five of the 10 districts.

There was little interest manifested in the election except in the ninth congressional district where the veteran congressman, A. L. Bulwinkle, was opposed by two state officials and for congressmen in five of the 10 districts.

There was little interest manifested in the election except in the ninth congressional district where the veteran congressman, A. L. Bulwinkle, was opposed by two state officials and for congressmen in five of the 10 districts.

Over in the seventh district Congressman W. C. Hammer appeared to be having a walkway with T. C. Battle in Davidson and Randolph counties, from which 29 precincts had reported. There are 218 precincts in 13 counties in the district, however. The vote was: Hammer, 2,638; Battle, 37.

In the fourth district, consisting of six counties, immediately around Raleigh, Congressman E. W. Poirer appeared to be making his usual showing against opposition, although the returns were scant. In 15 out of 117 precincts Poirer had 1,662; P. W. Mock, 85; Crookmore, 138.

No returns had been received from the second and sixth districts. In the state races R. T. Fountain, of Rocky Mount, was leading in 141 precincts out of 174 for lieutenant governor over John D. Langston, Goldsboro publisher, and W. H. S. Burgwyn, of New Bern, county clerk. The vote was: Fountain, 4,582; Langston, 3,598; Burgwyn, 3,176.

Frank D. Grist, commissioner of labor and printing, was leading two opponents by a clear majority in 138 precincts. The vote was: Grist, 7,254; M. L. Shipman, whom Grist defeated four years ago, 983; J. J. Peterson, Pittsboro publisher, 2,420.

Aged Physician Denies Charges Of Drug Selling

Denying all charges made against him by federal narcotic agents, Dr. J. F. Webb, 80-year-old Confederate veteran, Saturday issued a statement in which he asked his friends and the public to suspend judgment until his trial is held.

Dr. Webb, who was arrested a week ago on charges of possessing and selling morphine, and who is under $5,000 bond pending an investigation of the charges by the federal grand jury, said: "I am an honest man 80 years old and this is the first time in my life I have ever been charged with a violation of any law, city, state or federal."

Dr. Webb was born and reared in Newton county and at the age of 16, weighing just 90 pounds, he enlisted in the Confederate army, serving with Wheeler's cavalry, and saw continuous service until the close of the war, he stated. He graduated in medicine from the Atlanta Medical college and held postgraduate diplomas from Tulane university and the Post-Graduate School of Medicine of New York city, he said.

Federal narcotic officers said that Dr. Webb was arrested after a woman undercover agent had worked up a case against him. Dr. Webb gave her a two-grain dose of morphine, the normal dose being a quarter of a grain, the agents charged.

NEGRO COLLEGES WILL HOLD JOINT EXERCISES TODAY

Commencement exercises of Morehouse and Spelman colleges will be featured by joint baccalaureate services today. Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee and outstanding negro leader of America, will deliver the principal address at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in the Sisters chapel at Spelman college.

Degrees will be awarded graduates of Spelman at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, when an address will be delivered by Dr. William T. Foster, director of the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research.

Morehouse college will graduate the largest class in the history of the institution at exercises Wednesday morning. Degrees of bachelor of arts will be given 44 students, bachelor of science degrees to five, and bachelor of theology to one.

Dinkler's $1,500,000 Lookout Mountain Hotel Will Formally Open on June 23

The new $1,500,000 Lookout Mountain hotel, shown above in the background, will be opened on Lookout mountain on June 23, with a dinner. This is expected to assemble 500 notables from all sections of the south. Upper left is James M. Lynch, manager; Ross Kelley, upper right, chief clerk; lower left, Charles Brantley, chef; Alfred Anglade, pastry chef, is shown at lower right. These four "key" figures in the newest Dinkler hotel will be surrounded by two score other employees, who come from leading resort hotels of the nation.

One of the most brilliant programs ever to be witnessed in the south has been arranged for the formal opening on June 23 of the 250-room Lookout Mountain hotel, the new Dinkler hotel, which will be the south's premier resort hotel. All arrangements have been completed for the organization of assistants, including James M. Lynch, for many years prominent in hotel circles of the nation, with broad experience and marked success, will manage the hotel above the clouds. He has surrounded himself with an outstanding organization of assistants, including Ross Kelley as chief clerk, who comes from the Roney-Plaza hotel, of Miami Beach; Charles Brantley, chef, and Alfred Anglade, pastry chef, the latter two also from the Roney-Plaza. Two-score others, with vast experience in the Miami and Atlantic City hotels, will join the corps of employees to open the fashionable new Lookout Mountain hotel.

CONDEMNED MEN FINGER-PRINTED AND PHOTOGRAPHED

Attended by five deputies and securely handcuffed, Harold Hammond and R. H. Sheppard, condemned on murder charges, Saturday were taken from the Fulton Tower to police headquarters, where thumbprint impressions and photographs were taken of the two men.

It was reported this was done at the request of Governor L. G. Hardman, who gave Hammond a respite pending investigation of his mental status. The governor was out of the city Saturday, and could not be reached for a statement.

The 20-day respite granted Hammond, under sentence for the slaying of Lottie Bell Ingram and her child, expires June 18, while an appeal from Sheppard's second death sentence is pending in the supreme court.

Sheppard has been tried twice and twice sentenced to death in Fulton superior court. Two juries having found him guilty of slaying Homer Fowler with an ax in a three-story rooming house during February of 1926.

AHAVATH ACHIM IN CONFIRMATION EXERCISES TONIGHT

Confirmation exercises of the Ahavath Achim Sunday school will be held at 7 o'clock tonight in the synagogue, corner of Washington street and Woodward avenue. The services will be presided over by I. J. Paradise, while Rabbi A. P. Hines will deliver the principal address. Those receiving diplomas are Sam Amovitz, Sarah Arnold, Bloomer Bines, Herbert Ganssler, Haskel Davidson, Goldie Feinberg, Hilda Golden, Lottie Gocher, Celia Kalinik, Helen Lisk, Ida Goler, Rose Kramer, Annette Penner, Marie Smith and Israel Wilensky. An elaborate program has been arranged for the occasion.

NEGRO IS BOUND OVER FOR MURDER ATTEMPT

Charged with attempted murder, Lester Lindsey, 22, negro, of 358 Martin street, was held for the grand jury under $1,000 bond Saturday afternoon by Recorder Murphy M. Holloway.

It is alleged that on the night of June 1 Lindsey poured a quantity of carbolic acid down the throat of his 12-month-old baby. The child is at Grady hospital, where it is expected to recover. Witnesses testifying at the hearing claimed to have seen Lindsey as he attempted to kill the child.

LIBRARY WILL CONDUCT SUMMER READING CLUB

Miss Tommie Dora Barker, librarian of Carnegie library, announced Saturday that the vacation reading clubs which have been conducted so successfully for several years past by the library will be conducted again this year at the main library and all the branches.

While vacation reading clubs have been conducted for many years by the public libraries Miss Barker pointed out the fact that "today schools and parents have become library-minded and the library idea of the right book to the right child at the right time has become a very important factor in the education of children."

In outlining the library's plan for vacation reading Miss Barker said: "We feel that it is important for the children to keep the unbroken contacts with books during the vacation period so that they will return to school in September with a definite gain in reading habits, and to this end have conducted for several years vacation reading clubs for the children. The library also is cooperating with the leaders of the various groups organized by the Parent-Teacher associations for summer reading in suggesting suitable lists of books, and co-operating with parents in directing their children's reading. The room for boys and girls at the main library and the branch libraries are all in charge of trained librarians who have a special knowledge of children's books and so can guide the child to the books that he will enjoy most and thus keep him from becoming discouraged by getting books that do not hold his interest because they are either too difficult or too easy for his mental age."

The plan that the library has worked out for the boys and girls' reading clubs is as follows:

A list of 25 books carefully selected and graded both for story appeal and cultural interest will be prepared for each grade from the third to the ninth. Children desiring to join the "Vacation Club" will register at the main library or any of the branches after June 1 for that purpose. After registering the child's name will be posted on a roll of honor and at the same time he will be presented with an attractive booklet in which to keep a record of his reading. The purpose being "quality" rather than "quantity," each child will be asked to read only ten books. When he has completed his reading and made the appropriate record thereof in his booklet he will have ten gold stars after his name on the roll of honor. In early September all of the children who have completed the reading of ten books from the list will be invited to a book party at the main library. The party will be made as alluring as possible by appropriate entertainment and honors bestowed. Each child will be presented with a certificate to show that he has completed the reading.

FT. BENNING READY FOR R. O. T. C. CADETS

Fort Benning, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—More than 300 R. O. T. C. cadets from the Fourth Corps area will assemble at Fort Benning June 8 for a six week period of training. It was announced by officials here today. The exact number of cadets who will attend the camp is 322.

Major J. T. Kennedy, field artillery, the P. M. S. and T. at Alabama Polytechnic institute of Auburn, will be the commanding officer. He was in charge of the camp last year. All schedules for the course this year have reached headquarters of the local infantry school, and have been approved. All supplies have been requisitioned, tents have been erected, and all necessary preliminaries have been completed for the reception of the cadets. The first two days of the camp will be spent in organizing and attending to details which are necessary for the opening of the camp.

In addition to the tented area south of the twenty-ninth infantry tents, the camp will consist of two mess halls, branch of the post exchange, a recreation room, a store room and a building for headquarters personnel.

The number of students who will attend the course are divided into the four branches as follows: Field Artillery, 143; ordnance, 67; engineers, 92; and signal corps, 20. The signal corps unit will be composed of cadets from Georgia Tech; artillery from Auburn, ordnance from Georgia Tech; engineers from Auburn, University of Alabama and University of Tennessee. The instructors who have been detailed to the camp up to this time are Captain B. H. Bolley, engineers; Captain H. E. Skinner, ordnance; Captain B. C. Anderson, F. A.; Captain J. M. Garrett, F. A.; First Lieutenant C. P. Townsend and George D. Barth, F. A.; First Lieutenant E. Wells, S. C.; Captain L. S. Dillon, engineers; First Lieutenant H. L. Porter, engineers.

OGEECHEE SUNDAY SCHOOL DIVISION MEETS WEDNESDAY

Statesboro, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) The annual Sunday school convention of the Ogeechee River association will be held at the Clito Baptist church next Wednesday. Rev. R. S. New will deliver the principal address.

Arrangements for a child health campaign in the county are rapidly being perfected and it is the aim of those in charge to have every child in Bulloch under 7 years of age to visit motorized clinics of the state board of health.

HOTEL AT THOMASTON DESTROYED BY BLAZE

Thomaston, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) The Pasley hotel, for 28 years one of the leading hosties of the city, was destroyed by fire early Saturday. The fire was discovered shortly after 2 o'clock and resisted all efforts at extinguishing it for almost two hours, leaving only the chimney as a landmark. There were only a few guests in the building at the time and all were warned in ample time to vacate. The building was of frame construction having been enlarged several times, and was only partly covered with insurance for about $8,000. The cause of the fire has not yet been ascertained. Mrs. C. M. Pasley has operated the hotel since its beginning, and has achieved a reputation of approval by the commercial travelers of Georgia and surrounding states.

SUMMERVILLE STORES OBSERVE HALF HOLIDAY

Summersville, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—The merchants and business houses of Summersville will observe a half holiday on each Wednesday afternoon between June 1 and September 1. These half holidays have been observed for the past three or four years by the business people of Summersville.

DAVIS IS CANDIDATE FOR ST. MOUNTAIN CIRCUIT JUDGESHIP

James C. Davis, twice member of the house of representatives from DeKalb county, announces for the judgeship of the Stone Mountain circuit, consisting of the counties of DeKalb,

JAMES C. DAVIS.

Clayton, Rockdale, Campbell and Newton, of which circuit Judge Hutchison is a candidate to succeed himself.

Mr. Davis is a member of the law firm of Wright & Davis, and practices both in the Atlanta and Stone Mountain circuits. He lives at Stone Mountain.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Davis says:

"I have my candidacy upon the record of my private and professional life and my record as a member of the house of representatives, where I have served for the last four years, with the hope that I have gained the confidence and trust of the people of the circuit."

"I was admitted to the bar in 1919 upon my discharge from the United States marine corps, where I served during the world war. Since that time I have been continuously engaged in the practice of law. There can be no issue in a campaign for judge except the full, fair and impartial administration of all the laws to all people alike, and to this end I pledge my best efforts if I should be the choice of the people for this office during the coming four years."

CAPT. J. W. CLARK PAYS ENTRANCE FEE FOR PENSION REACT

Capt. John W. Clark, state pension commissioner, Saturday qualified as a candidate for reelection, when he paid his entrance fee of $150 to run in the democratic primaries in September. It was announced by Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the state democratic executive committee.

Judge J. J. Hunt, of Griffin, announced his candidacy for this position several weeks ago. He also has qualified as a candidate. Captain Clark and Judge Hunt are the only candidates for state offices who have qualified as candidates. Both are Confederate veterans.

Several other candidates have announced their candidacies for state house offices but have not qualified with the secretary of the state committee. The books will be closed June 23. All candidates who desire to run for state offices must qualify on or before that date.

African Evangelist Will Give Lecture Series Here This Week

The Rev. Prince Kaba Rega, African evangelist and lecturer of Unyoro, British East Africa, will deliver a series of lectures in Atlanta this week, beginning with 11 o'clock Sunday morning services at the Liberty Baptist church.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon he will speak at the Liberty hall on Edgewood avenue, and again at the First Congregational church, corner of Houston and Courtland streets, at 7 o'clock tonight.

On Tuesday night the Rev. Prince will lecture at the Wheat Street Baptist church, while at 8 o'clock Wednesday night he will appear at the Holy Temple and Thursday night at the same time at the Liberty Baptist church.

HAS ATLANTA MOST CRIME?

It seems unbelievable that Atlanta should be pointed out as the most crime-infested city, of ten of the largest in the United States. But Secretary Veiller, of the committee on criminal courts of the charity organization society of New York, publishes statistics that are alarming, if correct.

As J. W. Hubbard writes, in a comment published elsewhere, "he ought to know what he is talking about."

The fact is, this is not the first time that statistics to the same general effect have been promulgated.

As shown, taking the commission of major crimes on a basis of population of 100,000, the percentage in New York is given as 4.7, the lowest; Chicago, next lowest with the percentage given as 9.6—again almost unbelievable in view of the continuously raging gangster high crimes and wars among themselves in that city—and Atlanta as 52.0, which is the highest.

It has been said by law enforcement officials in Atlanta that the figures are incorrect. Be that as it may, it is well-known that Atlanta is among the most criminal cities in the country, and the charge of law enforcement is not altogether to blame for it.

"The slowness of meting justice through technicalities in the Georgia laws is one of the causes."

Another is the fact that Atlanta, as the metropolis of the southeast, is the melting pot for the criminal classes from several states, and offers unusual avenues for escape from apprehension.

However diligent may be police officials in the apprehension of criminals, who may commit crimes here, or hide here after the commission of crimes elsewhere, the fact remains that more criminals slip through the meshes in Atlanta than perhaps in any other city of relative population in America.

Only the other day three bandits who stole a pay roll in Rome, boldly tied two officials of the victimized institution to posts, in the full light of day, and shot their way through Calhoun, were definitely traced to Atlanta.

"Detectives announced that they and their location were 'known,' and that they would soon be in 'the clutches of the law.' But where are they? Later admissions were to the effect that they had left the city."

There is too much of this sort of thing, and it is one of the causes that is holding up Atlanta in the unenviable limelight of being the most criminal city.

Another cause—and it is well to be frank about it—is the volume of freshly distilled bootleg liquor that is flooding the community; liquor full of fusel oil, distilled one day and sold the next; liquor that fires the brains, sears the conscience, incites crime, and of a quality that, as Sam Jones used to say, would "make a rabbit spit in the face of a bulldog." The other day a hard-working carpenter of good reputation, who had never been in the courts on any charge, filled up on poison "white mud," walked home and deliberately killed his wife, with whom he had lived happily. When sober he did not remember the horrible crime he had committed.

New York city has the Baumes law. It is apparently working well. Chicago, as notorious as it is, has far less arrests for drunkenness than Atlanta, on a per capita basis. New York has fewer than Chicago, on the same basis.

It is humiliating to be designated by what is claimed to be reliable statistics as the most criminal city in America. It is a challenge to the city officials, to the police department, to the courts. And it is a challenge that should not go unanswered.

Is there any political significance in New York restaurants' new rule to serve no water with the meals?

Next they will be printing the menu cards on blotting paper.

Jack Dempsey was scheduled to give an exhibition in a Los Angeles church to raise some money. It would have been worth the price of admission to see Jack fight the devil, but the event was sidetracked by a majority of churchgoers.

WATCH THEIR STEPS.

More than 50,000 school children in Atlanta are just beginning their summer vacations.

It means play.

At no season of the year is it so important to "watch the step" in order to avoid traffic accidents, swimming and other accidents, as during the three months beginning with June.

People, young and old, should be safety minded at all times, but the vacation period particularly fastens a greater responsibility upon the parents.

Children should not be permitted to play in the streets under any circumstances. They should be counseled to obey the traffic laws. At the swimming pools care should be taken that no accidents befall them. It should be the duty of all citizens to cooperate to prevent as far as is humanly possible the marring of the happy vacation season with accidents of any kind.

DR. DAVIS MODIFIES—IF?

On this page is another communication from Rev. Dr. W. C. Davis on the presidential question, the crime wave and law enforcement, in which he noticeably modifies his position on bolting the party as taken in his first card on the subject. His views, as expressed today, are thoughtful and impressively sincere and fair. In his first communication Dr. Davis based his argument on the presumption that the democratic delegates at Houston, late this month, would write in the party platform a wet plank and that Governor Smith, if nominated, would stand for the nullification of the Volstead act. Something was said also about a possible movement for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

In his second communication Dr. Davis "trusts" that we were correct in our editorial discussion of his first communication, in which we said, and again reiterate, that there will be no effort to write a wet plank into either party platform, no effort to nullify the prohibition act and no move during or after the convention to repeal the amendment.

On the contrary, the platforms of both parties will stand unequivocally for law enforcement and no one will be nominated by either party who does not stand footedly for constitutional government, for enforcement of all laws, organic and statutory, and who is not worthy of the honor reposed in them by their respective party conventions.

We have not supported the candidacy of Governor Smith for the democratic nomination. On the contrary, we have hoped, and still hope, that a southern democrat may be nominated, and certainly no better man will be placed before the convention than our own Senator Walter F. George.

But we would be untrue to the constitution of our country if we permitted one of our religious views to disqualify him, in our judgment, for public office.

The separation of church and state is a mandate of our fundamental law, and religious liberty is a guarantee of the bill of rights.

As to the wet and dry issue, Governor Smith has repeatedly said, as New York's executive, that the strict enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and of the Volstead law, the latter the amendment's enabling act, was required of the federal officials, and that they should be held strictly accountable for its enforcement.

Nothing is further from the facts than to charge him with being a "nullificationist" because he declared that the burden of responsibility for enforcing a federal law rested upon the shoulders of federal officials.

That is true, and certainly in New York state where there was no local option "bone dry" law prior to the operation of the federal prohibition law.

In Georgia, and in most of the southern states, we had state dry laws when the eighteenth amendment was ratified. It is admitted that the bootleg traffic was then on a much smaller scale than now.

The statement of the New York World that Governor Smith would "not accept the nomination on a dry platform" was not authorized by him, and to say that the "World" spoke as the mouthpiece of Governor Smith is a violent presumption.

If he should be nominated at Houston it will assuredly not be on a wet platform, and it will be time enough then to hear the views of the party's standard-bearer. The fact, however, that the convention will not insert a wet plank in the platform does not mean that the weaknesses of the present statutory law, by reason of which bootleg concoctions are flowing throughout America on an ever-rising tide, may not be frankly and thoughtfully discussed.

All laws should be enforced, and if any one law is not enforceable it should be made enforceable.

BANKERS ON TAX REVISION.

At the recent meeting in Savannah of the Georgia and Country Bankers' association a resolution was unanimously adopted for an "honest, impartial, non-partisan and non-political study of state and local tax systems and the formulation and advocacy of an equitable system of taxation for the state." It called upon various groups, including farmers, laborers, realtors, manufacturers, merchants and civic clubs to cooperate with a bankers' committee, the state's tax commissioner and other officials, toward the preparation of a revised tax plan to present to the next general assembly. The resolution in full is reproduced on this page.

This movement not only needs moral encouragement, but it needs the practical, determined efforts of all organized groups of Georgia citizens toward the desired revision of the present archaic, hodge-podge taxation system, or systems, that is in vogue today.

In the first place—regardless of the plan of taxation—the state should have, as have most of the progressive states of the nation, a state tax commission which shall administer all revenue matters of whatever nature. All revenues should be drawn into the treasury through this one branch of government, thus coordinating one of the most outstanding functions of administrative government.

As the situation stands there are four separate and distinct departments of state government collecting taxes. Every department of the state, except two, collect fees of one kind or another. Fees are special taxes, and should be returnable to the treasury by just one branch. Such a branch should be a state tax commission, clothed with liberal authority to administer all taxes without discriminations, immunities, favors, or the lack of standard rules of just equalization.

It is particularly essential that the problem of taxation should be kept divorced from politics and from partisan and factional considerations. In this declaration the bankers very properly made the point definite and unmistakable. The legislature which will convene in 1929 will have no issue before it of wider and more vital importance than that of enacting impartial, fair and adequate tax legislation, with the thought always in mind that taxes are the payments of citizens for the services of government. It is not so much the price paid, therefore, as it is to secure the services commensurate with the price.

MILLIONS ARE STARVING.

In north China there are 10,000,000 victims of famine. The charitable and humane Chinese of all sections of that vast empire are doing all within their power to alleviate the sufferings of their own people. Relief organizations in Tsinan find Chinese Christians and non-Christians working side by side, and vying with one another in making personal sacrifices in order to finance relief work among the suffering in the Shantung area.

Cable dispatches declare that in Tsinan every morning at 8 o'clock 30,000 shivering, hungry people wait for the one meal a day which stands between them and starvation.

One cable dispatch says: "Every day the women of our villages bring in tiny babies who have been picked up, half starved and frozen blue. Some die within a few hours of their rescue."

Another cable dispatch says: "Horror is blended with pity at tales of strong sons who have strangled their aged parents in order to keep them from the pangs of starvation, strangled their parents and then starved to death."

Infanticide is now generally practiced in the famine districts by parents who can barely keep themselves alive, or who cannot endure to see their children dying of slow starvation."

In this country a notable group of laymen and churchmen has been organized to raise $10,000,000 to succor and relieve these millions of starving people. Dr. S. Parks Cadman, of New York, who was recently in Atlanta, and who is a regular contributor to the editorial page of The Constitution, is chairman. He has assumed the active leadership of the campaign. It is a stupendous task, but the pressing human need justifies not merely the undertaking but every personal and collective sacrifice that can be made.

Dr. Cadman, in a statement just issued, says: "No personal testimony from us is necessary to depict for Americans the appalling conditions resulting from the pitiable plight to which millions of Chinese farmers and their families have been reduced not only by famine but by other causes for which they are in no way responsible."

"Ample, conclusive testimony has been given by impartial observers trained by years of experience in analyzing and reporting matters of great magnitude and vast importance to the world at large. These witnesses are the staff correspondents of the great American daily newspapers and press associations. Their cable reports depict, in detail, conditions so harrowing, heart-wringing and appalling that we would have proved unbelievably callous to the suffering of our fellow man had we—when invited to assume responsibility for this campaign—questioned its causes, or sought seemingly logical reasons or excuses to escape a manifest duty, even in the full knowledge that our duties would be onerous. We have considered only the need—only the opportunity—to perform an urgently required humanitarian service. And we have acted apart from whatever sectarian, political or racial inclinations we may have individually. We are joined—Jew, Protestant, Catholic and non-churchmen—in the cause of humanity."

We raise hundreds of millions of dollars annually in this country for foreign church missions. Here is an opportunity to help in a practical way to relieve human distress that is without a parallel in its gripping appeal.

CRISP TO OFFER GEORGE.

It is fitting that Representative Charles R. Crisp, of the third Georgia district, should have been chosen to place the name of Senator Walter F. George before the Houston convention as a candidate for the democratic nomination for president.

Senator George resides in Mr. Crisp's district. They have been life-long friends.

Mr. Crisp is a forceful speaker, and is a nationally known figure by reason of his high position on the ways and means committee, and his membership on the American debt funding commission.

It has also been suggested that "Charlie" Crisp—as he is affectionately known not only in his home state but by his congressional colleagues of both parties—may be chosen as the permanent chairman of the convention.

A better selection could not be made. He was parliamentarian for his father, when the latter was speaker of the house, and he was subsequently parliamentarian for Speaker Champ Clark. He is recognized by both sides in the lower branch of congress as one of, if not the quickest and ablest of the parliamentary law experts in this country.

His fairness has never been questioned, and his parliamentary decisions have never been reversed.

The Constitution joins in the hope that this outstanding Georgian may be chosen for this position of great party honor and responsibility.

MR. DOBBS' GOOD WORK.

The board of trustees of the LaGrange Female college, of which Samuel C. Dobbs, of Atlanta, is chairman, has made a unique departure from the usual curriculum by the establishment of a "department of household science."

This is to be entirely different from the "department of domestic science," which is now a feature of practically every course of study in colleges and schools for young women. It is the first chair of the kind, so far as is known, established in any female educational institution in America. It has been amply endowed by Mr. Dobbs, in honor of the LaGrange college.

The suggestion, which originated with Mr. Dobbs, its founder, met with the hearty approval of every member of the board, and it is proposed to install as the head of the department a woman not only trained in the science of house-keeping, but in the profession of biology and physiology, which also embraces that of professional nursing.

The purpose of this new department is to teach the rules of health conservation, among adults and children, pre-maternity care, the care and health of babies, dieting, the employment of fresh air and of sunshine in keeping the home bright and happy and inviting. It also will teach the fundamentals of disease prevention, and all of the allied features which will tend to the establishment and maintenance of Christian homes of culture that shall also be homes of comfort and cheer and happiness. As supplementary to such training, of course, will be the department of domestic science which deals more specifically with the preparation of food, preserving, canning, etc.

LaGrange college is one of the oldest and most useful institutions of the kind. It is practical, and among its alumnae are hosts of the most outstanding women in the south, leaders in education, in church, and in the better and sweeter things of life. It has always been featured by a striking spirit of practical religion.

No man in Georgia is doing a greater service for Christian education than Mr. Dobbs. His splendid work at Reinhardt, for mountain boys and girls, is well known. He has erected a fine vocational education building there, and has paid the institution out of a heavy burden of debt from his own funds. He is helping the LaGrange college in the same practical way.

June 17th has been selected as Father's day with the slogan "Give Father a Tie." Dad would appreciate an even break!

The worm will turn. An eastern railroad is turning a motorist for derailing a string of box cars.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Democrats Can Furnish Us a Needed National Administration.

Washington, June 2.—(Special)—Politically, we don't know where we are going, but we know where we are not going. A week from next Tuesday, the democratic national convention will be assembled in Kansas City and two weeks later, on the 26th, the "uninterrupted democracy" will be called to order at the national convention, at Houston.

The state of the union will call upon each of them to propose an agenda for the conservation and self-protection of the general welfare for the next four years.

Seldom in our history, or that of any other modern nation, has there been so fine an opportunity for the exercise of sane and splendid statesmanship. The people of this nation are ready and eager to acclaim and adopt the outstanding need of a statesman with practical ability and sound sense, whose eyes are open wide to the immediate needs of his time.

It will be the blunder of morrow for either political party to repeat the error of 1920 and present to the nation another simple politician afflicted with the curse of Reuben.

The country is bearing a serrated affliction, rising to unprecedented peaks of prosperity and sinking elsewhere into sloughs of distress and bankruptcy. It needs equalization and stabilization. "Hic labor, hoc opus est."

Patriotism Is Not Pauperism.

It is the grossest of pessimism to say that the quality of American patriotism is impoverished, that is the dictum of a doctrinaire whose prejudice against the popular movement is a fact that we have gathered out of our resources and operative activities an unprecedented flock of millionaires, and that are not affluences—rather they are welcome affluences of the mechanism of our progressive civilization. An independent, self-sustaining democracy can easily control them.

The great and redeeming fact is the palpable betterment of the condition of the mass of our population. All but fewer than two per cent of them are working, earning better, and living more abundantly than ever before and than any other nation of humans on the globe.

It is indeed a marvel of civilized history that in a population of over 120,000,000 persons fewer than 2,000,000 are temporarily and unwillingly unemployed in gainful work.

In fact, the sea-level of our people is higher than ever known before. Those unfortunately caught in the whirl of the economic period of transition, many agencies of relief are working for their rescue.

Neither of our big political parties is rotten through and through. Either of them can command from its ranks the best of our country, a just and honest government for the conduct of the nation.

The democratic party alone offers to give our country a just and honest government, and equal treatment by the national government.

Do you remember how the "experts" predicted dire results if we insisted on payment of the loans we made to the allies? They could not pay in gold, because we had all the gold. They could only pay in goods, which meant flooding our markets with cheap products of European labor. This would put our manufacturers out of business, throw our labor out of work, and raise prices generally.

Well, we have managed to struggle along now for a number of years. Some manufacturers have gone out of business. They always do. Some have failed to pay their taxes. They always are. But as for the general run, we are doing very nicely, thank you.

Two hundred million dollars is a huge quantity of money. And the "experts" wanted us to tremble at the thought of that vast wealth coming down upon us. But somehow or other the instinct of the American people told them they could not do it. They stood it so well that they paid us nearly $9,000,000,000. And we did not lend it. We simply loaned it. The net export of our country was only $671,000,000. Plenty to pay the current war accounts three times over, to be sure, but lending money in part of our business now, the bankers were not pretty sure if a profit they would not lend it.

What has happened, of course, is that these war debts and loans, enormous in themselves, have taken their places in the vastly increased total of foreign transactions, where proportionately they are but minor items. The total debt payments due to the allies amount to only one twenty-second part of the actual cash sent us from foreign countries for general business purposes.

Germany now has more communists than Russia. It also has more of other things.

The European powers and Japan, having accepted Mr. Kellogg's proposal for the renunciation of war so far as the general principle goes, and there being some prospect of the details being worked out so that a treaty of some kind can be signed, are beginning to wonder about Russia's conduct. They are beginning to wonder about Russia's conduct. They are beginning to wonder about Russia's conduct.

A more futile and dangerous thing the Japanese could hardly do. There may be those among her politicians who would like to see Russia's position, where, in the case of any later outward events in China, she would have the other powers in inevitable combination against her.

The Chance of the Democrats.

The time has come under our constitution when the people are summoned as freemen to confirm or change the administration of their government. We have been passing through seven fat years and the prosperity of them has tempted many of our servants to faithlessness and fraudulent self-enrichment. Slight wrong, then, that a spirit favoring a change of the vast majority in government is abroad among the people. And it is no wonder, either, that many of them who are thus discontented are the public affairs of the people. And it is such men are not enlisted and enlisted for our service the fault will lie with the people themselves. When Palmitus sleeps at the helm the buccaners board the ship!

The SAILORS' MAIL.

Manhattan has fifty postoffice stations, and the character of the mail passing through them is widely diversified. The Wall Street postoffice specializes in mail devoted to money and law, aside from the spare time love letters of stenographers. Almost all the letters received by a certain East Side branch are written in languages other than English. The chances are that more "bunk" goes in the Times Square branch than in any other.

Much of the private mail here would make entertaining reading for the public, but in this time of most unusual letters probably can be found at U. S. P. O. S. C. I. That string of initials stands for United States Post Office, Second Class, and the building provides lodging for 1,500 men, and is always filled. The mail has grown to such proportions that the government has established a special branch which receives mail in a year, and nearly 1,000 call boxes.

Last year the house mother sent 1,882 letters, many in response to inquiries about missing mail. She sent 202 sailors' letters. Regally, Jack may have a sweetheart in every port, but mother's letters are more faithful.

ARCHIBALD BONGE, THE DOORMAN.

The standard way to try to crash the door of a Broadway postoffice is for one of a group to ask the doorman questions while the others slip in. The asker of questions would seem to be a voluntary martyr in the cause. But the scheme doesn't work. This word comes from Archibald Bonge, a doorman who stands six feet and nearly eight inches on the Broadway sidewalk and guides the crowd

NEW YORK SKYLINES

Many Men of Power You Seldom Hear of, and One of These Is Edison's Chief Aide—The Passing of an O'Henry Haunt.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, June 2.—In and around New York are many men and women of large capacity and high executive powers, but quite unknown to the general public. They are vice-presidents, private secretaries and personal representatives who actually make many of the important decisions attributed to their chiefs.

Of this type is William H. Meadowcroft, right-hand man of Thomas Edison, and just turned seventy-five. He has been associated with the inventor forty-seven years. While Mr. Edison is in Florida, experimenting with rubber, Mr. Meadowcroft sits in the library at Orange, N. J., answering the bulk of the vast mail arriving for Mr. Edison from all parts of the world.

Mr. Meadowcroft, English-born and formerly a New York lawyer, is the Edison diplomat. He is a white hair, like the inventor, an easy voice and friendly blue eyes which look through spectacles directly at the person addressed. It is his job to start back to Colorado, in good humor, the man who has come across most of the con- tinent of the vast mail arriving for Mr. Edison from all parts of the world.

There is a citizen may get trimmed—no slang intended—for a quarter, a dime, or nothing, depending on whether the member of the faculty, an advanced student or a freshman, wields the stent. Tuition is $100, and every graduate gets a diploma with a seal on it.

Says the dean: "The life and luster of the face must be brought out. Note the bumps on a man's head before you begin to clip."

SOLD AND THE PLATES DISTRIBUTED.

Allaire's, the German restaurant frequented by O'Henry and Charlie Murphy, has been sold and distributed. The mural paintings going to a former patron, a famous artist, and the building is to be used for a roadside service on Long Island.

The fixtures, including many elaborate stoves and sinks, were sold under the hammer by J. H. Regan, the man who has sold other famous restaurants overtaken by calamity. He was a partner in the business with Monaghan, Shanley's, the Palm Garden, Terrace Garden and Bronx Hofbrau.

Edward Eckert, "Old Fritz," the oldest waiter attached to Allaire's, is still taking and delivering orders, but in modern dress. He is sixty-eight, and in the course of years of good tips he saved a tidy fortune. He then left the business and he put it all into German bonds and in the war. That's why he is still carrying dishes.

Dr. Davis Modifies Attitude If No Nullification Action

Editor Constitution: I trust that you are correct in your opinion that neither the democratic nor republican national convention will insert a wet plank in its platform. I am sure that you will be no organized movement to elect or select any person for a national office of any description upon the issue of the repeal of the 18th amendment, but that both parties will stand for law enforcement, and "the democrats at Houston" will declare specifically for law enforcement and that not a delegate in that convention will raise his or her mouth to the contrary, and that one would not accept, whoever he may be, from whatever section he may come, will stand flatfootedly upon law enforcement, and that the name of no man will be presented to the convention who would seek, by statute, or otherwise, the nullification of the prohibition amendment, and that the question of a possible "wet" plank in either party platform may be dismissed.

The New York World seems to hold a contrary opinion. It stated, if correctly reported, that Governor Smith would run on a wet platform, and that one would not accept the nomination on a "dry" platform; furthermore, that he would not accept the nomination, or make law enforcement his running mate was also "wet."

The presumption is that the World spoke with authority, as the mouthpiece of the governor.

All must admit that there is much drinking and dissipation throughout the land, and that a wave of immorality and crime is sweeping over every section of the country, but I am unable to see how the public sentiment and the Volstead act are in any measure responsible for drunkenness and debauchery. The judges throughout America, before the prohibition amendment, declare that the chief cause of crime is the lack of good homes and home training.

It is true that some of our criminals are from our best families, but this is exceptional.

Reared in the best of culture, refinement and morality, our boys and girls have a finer influence and a better opportunity than the children in homes lacking such environments.

When we add to culture, refinement and morality, spiritual environments, our youth are less likely to be tempted by the temptations are evils in social life.

Young men and women from such homes are not apt to drift to or commit crimes.

Our own seven judges of the superior court give the same testimony as that given by judges throughout the land. The main trouble is in the home.

Dr. Cadman's Analysis. The following question was proposed to Dr. S. Parks Cadman: "What is the chief source of our increase in crime?"

He answered: "Parental neglect combined with wrong social ideals. When a youth is left to his own impulses, and is not reared by the home influences, he is likely to consort with a group of outside rebels who scorn the codes of honesty and morality, and who get their money and what money can procure. He loathes work and the discipline it imposes. He is personified in crime. He is entitled to his share of the plunder."

There is another cause that often leads to the drunkenness and crime—unemployment. Hundreds of thousands and probably millions of Americans are without work and don't get it. Many are arrested for vagrancy.

They are not to blame for this sad condition. Being unable to secure employment they should not be prosecuted for the existence of many

Resolution of the Georgia Bankers' Association on State Tax Revision

Following is the tax revision resolution adopted at the recent session of the Georgia Bankers' association in Savannah:

"Whereas, the present system of taxation in this state is antiquated, obsolete, and condemned by all competent authorities, and large classes of property under this system are escaping taxation, and the state is suffering an undue burden upon real estate and a few other classes of property; and

"Whereas, taxation is one of the most vital problems facing the people of Georgia and fair tax laws are essential to permit Georgia to compete on terms of equality with other states and attract outside capital; therefore, be it

Resolved, first, That the Georgia and Country Bankers' association, the Manufacturers' association, the Merchants' association, the Georgia association, the civic and commercial organizations and all associations interested in the improvement of the laws be requested to appoint a similar committee for the purpose of cooperating and working together for the purpose set forth in this resolution.

"Resolved, second, That the president of this association do appoint a special committee on taxation to be composed of ten members of this association, to include the president and secretary of each association, to cooperate with the legislative committee, other officials and all interested bodies in an honest, impartial, non-partisan and non-political study of the present tax system, and the formulation and advocacy of an equitable system of taxation for the state of Georgia."

"Resolved, third, That the farmers' organizations, the labor organizations, the Georgia Realtors' association, the Manufacturers' association, the Merchants' association, the Georgia association, the civic and commercial organizations and all associations interested in the improvement of the laws be requested to appoint a similar committee for the purpose of cooperating and working together for the purpose set forth in this resolution.

INTERESTING DATA OF PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS.

The presidential election this year will be the 36th since the creation of the republic by the federal constitution and the first election of Washington as president on January 7, 1789.

During these 139 years and thirty-three presidential terms, occupants of the office have been only twenty-nine individuals, as ten of them were re-elected to a second term.

President Cleveland was the only one who had an interim of one term between the two in which he served.

In six instances the term was filled out by the vice president succeeding to the office upon the death of the president, and in two cases—those of Roosevelt and Coolidge—the incumbent was subsequently elected to a full term.

The first time when the regular electors failed to elect was in 1800 when Jefferson and Aaron Burr both received seven electoral votes. The choice went to the house of representatives. On the first ballot, February 11, Jefferson received the votes of eight states, Burr six, and the election was tied. The balloting went on until Tuesday, February 17, when, on the thirty-sixth ballot, Jefferson received seven votes and Burr four, with two states divided and not counted. Thereupon Jefferson became president and Burr vice president.

The election of 1804 was the first under the amended constitution, in which the electors voted for president and vice president. It was also the first in which a regular caucus of democratic members of congress was held to nominate party candidates. In that election Jefferson got 102 electoral votes to four for Adams, and 35 for C. C. Pinckney, of South Carolina, federalist.

The first person to decline a nomination to a presidential ticket was John Langdon of New Hampshire, who declined the nomination for vice president to Madison, on the democratic ticket, and Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, was substituted. The ticket was elected.

In 1820 the democratic ticket of Monroe and Tammings for reelection had practically no opposition. Of 235 electors three died before they could cast their votes and of the remaining 232 Monroe got the votes of 231. (One elector in New Hampshire, chosen by Monroe, nevertheless voted for John Quincy Adams to prevent Monroe from sharing with Washington the honor of a unanimous election to the presidency.)

No one has since come that near to rivaling Washington's record.

The race in 1824 was a "free-for-all" between Henry Clay of Kentucky, John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts, William H. Crawford of Georgia, and Andrew Jackson of Tennessee. Jackson got the most popular votes and the largest number of electors, but not a majority. Again the election of a president devolved upon the house.

On the first ballot Adams was chosen, receiving the votes of 13 states, Jackson had seven states and Crawford four. This was the famous "bargain election" in which Clay was charged with trading his votes to Adams in return for appointment as secretary of state in the Adams cabinet. Whether there was such a bargain or not, Clay got the job and the ever after odium of having traded for it.

The next election, 1828, the democrats pitted Jackson against Adams, and "Old Hickory" wiped the trader out by 175 electoral votes to eighty-two for Adams.

In 1832 for the first time all candidates were nominated by convention. It was then that the famous two-thirds rule that they still enforce.

The first regular party platform was that of the national republicans, in 1832. It was a platform of "free trade" and "free whigs" as whigs, which was issued by them in the 1832 campaign. The whig convention of 1840, and the first national committee was appointed by the democratic convention of 1840.

The election of 1876 was disputed and had to be decided by an extraordinary commission of five supreme court justices, five representatives and five senators. They awarded the office to Hayes, republican, by one electoral vote.

"Shall we take the radio?"
"Heavens, no! That's why I'm going."

News Item: Mr. and Mrs. Don Herold are spending a few days in Palm Springs to get away from the radio set which Mr. Herold bought last week.

Doris declared that she was going to Palm Springs to turn handprints. England will not do back us up if we find we need help.

Other countries, too, will probably help us out if worst comes to worst. Chicago once had a world's fair, and it had better watch out or it will have a world's war.

The thing we need fear most is their tanks.

It will take a lot of gas masks to capture the stockyards.

Fortunately we are able to forget most of the follies of our youth. But I read in the morning paper that a certain gentleman in Chicago never stops. Ten years from now I may be able to buy a radio set so sensibly that I will pick up the speech of the man who is speaking.

"The Crowd" is about the best movie I have ever seen, and I can at least respect a movie director. King Vidor has observed life in life instead of in other movies. He deals in such wares as the poignant tragedy of a bathroom door that won't shut, and makes "big scenes" of such realistic events as a family picnic on the beach. I have always contended that the movie would never come to anything until they dealt with smaller subject matter. It takes a bigger man to direct a family breakfast scene than it does to handle 10,000 extras in a battle scene. I have seen the Hollywood over a year, but have not until now felt any desire to meet any motion picture executives, and now I would like to tell King Vidor how fine I think his "The Crowd" is.

Mr. Les Harkley has bought her husband a new car in which to negotiate the Baumes law.

Editor Constitution: In the Saturday Evening Post of May 26, 1928, is an article by Lawrence Viller, under the heading "Making the Criminal Walk the Plank."

It refers to the operation of the Baumes law in New York state, and especially its effect on the habitual criminal.

Mr. Viller is secretary of the committee on criminal courts of the city of New York and ought to, and doubtless does, know what he is talking about. He quotes statistics printed in one of the metropolitan dailies to show the effect of the Baumes law on the criminal population.

Since those laws became effective a check of the major crimes per 100,000 population shows a certain decrease in 10 of our large cities. New York, with 47 crimes, was lowest; Chicago, next with 52; and Atlanta, tenth with 66. Atlanta, with 66 major crimes per 100,000 people.

The Baumes law in New York thus seems to make effective their slogan: "Catch the crook—keep him caught—hand him a fitting sentence—see that he serves it."

Second: "It helps to maintain discipline among the students." My own feeling is that the serious-minded young men who come to Boston university do not need to be controlled by military methods. We do not need to call in the war department of the United States government to assist us in maintaining discipline.

Third: "It aids in character development in that it teaches the boys submission to authority and at the same time it is one of the best forms of physical exercise." These are the strongest arguments in favor of military drill, but even to this, common sense is not given; for while proper physical results for purposes of exhibition are in fact attained, the individual student out of his natural rhythm and characteristic motion. It is a violation of the individual's natural and mechanism of every member of the unit. Military drill is not the best exercise either for character or for the body.

Fourth: "It helps to maintain discipline among the students." My own feeling is that the serious-minded young men who come to Boston university do not need to be controlled by military methods. We do not need to call in the war department of the United States government to assist us in maintaining discipline.

There is no question but that the financial lack of the war department makes a strong appeal. Yet the fact that the institutions such as the University of Wisconsin, which makes military training optional, are in accord with the federal law as to land-grant colleges.

In 1923 the secretary of the interior was instructed in military tactics as a requirement on the part of the states as are the other branches which are members of the Morrill act.

It does not appear, however, from the federal legislation that the instruction in military tactics is any more obligatory on the individual student than is instruction in agriculture or mechanics arts. In 1927 the present secretary of the interior wrote: "A land-grant college, by changing its course in military training from a compulsory to an elective course, would not suffer any diminution in the appropriations that it now receives from the United States government under the act of the acts of congress providing aid for such institutions." In as much as the administration of Morrill funds and the training of the land-grant colleges so far as concerns the requirement of these funds and the act of congress for them and the department of the interior, the opinion of the secretary is a ruling of high authority. No secretary of the interior has ever known, has ever given a different opinion. And the war department, whatever may be its interest in having military training to support it by any different interpretation of the law. The secretary of war, John W. Weeks, referring more particularly to the national defense act does not make military training compulsory at any of the institutions which receive the benefits authorized by the act. So far as the war department is concerned, it is optional with the authorities of the school, college or university whether military training shall be an elective or a compulsory course in the curriculum.

It would be sufficient for all practical minds for military training to be compulsory only in the regularly authorized military schools.

HOW DO HEALTH AUTHORITIES GET THAT WAY?

A correspondent told us here a few weeks ago how a Japanese who happened to be a witness, pleaded in vain for consent of relatives or friends to apply artificial respiration to a victim who had been rescued from submersion. The relatives or friends insisted on waiting for the arrival of a machine and by their attitude perhaps sacrificed the victim's life. The correspondent was prompted by another incident that we had commented upon—this time, the victim was resuscitated. The correspondent summed up the first incident by saying "ignorance triumphed."

In this column I have repeatedly called attention to an error in the technique of artificial respiration as taught by the American Red Cross instructors and the life-saving instructors of several other organizations, companies or institutions. The faulty method has indeed been "indorsed" by an imposing list of federal bureaus, national public service associations and the like. The fault or error in technique is the placing of the subject's hand or forearm under his forehead. The purpose of this, the erring organization asserts, is to keep the nose and mouth free for breathing. The United States public health service (a bureau of the treasury department) only a few weeks ago issued a pamphlet giving an excellent description of this method of resuscitation, with pictures and detailed directions for its application. In this pamphlet, the exposition of the health bureau lists the organizations that have "indorsed" the error, and the description of the method, as well as the pictures, show that the health bureau is as strong as any of the gas companies or electric light power companies in its insistence on the error. ## To Our Missing Birds

By ERNEST NEAL

THE REDBIRD WILL COME TO MY WINDOW IN SPRING

And warble his wild fresh notes;
The mockingbird, even in winter, will sing
When a dream on the south-wind floats;
The thrush and the wren—again and again—
Will sing e'er the snow melts away,
And the fussy jaybird is bound to be heard
In December as well as in May.
But gone from the land is the little joree,
Once the source of my innocent joy—
And where, oh, where, can the bluebird be,
The bird I loved most when a boy?

THE SPARROW STILL CHIRPS FROM THE PEEP OF THE DAWN

'Till shadows of evening fall,
When chuck-will's-widow, all sad and forlorn
Responds to quaint whip-poor-will's call.
Whistling bob-white, with cheering delight,
Still gladdens his lady love,
While floats on the breeze from cool woodland trees
The sweet plaintive coo of the dove.
But gone from the land is the little joree,
Once the source of my innocent joy—
And where, oh, where, can the bluebird be,
The bluebird I loved when a boy?

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

When a minister in a big parish feels joyful, sick, or sad, at odds with his work and with the world, what should he do?

This is my present state and I have been at it for 20 years without a break in a hard country place. Please advise a brother in distress and omit address.

Things New and Old About the Bible

By REV. W. P. KING

MILITARISM IN EDUCATION.

The tremendous increase of militarism in education is well illustrated by the following figures taken from a report of the National Education Association.

In a 15-year period (up to the last available statistics) federal expenditures on military training in civil schools have increased from $75,488 to $10,636,504. A 15-fold increase; the number of institutions giving such training, from 57 to 223; a four-fold increase; the number of students enrolled, from 2,479 to 119,914; a four-fold increase. Compare these increases with the increase in population, which has been but a 57 per cent increase from 1910 to 1920.

Professor William Bradley Oatis, of the College of the City of New York, testified before the house military affairs committee in 1926 in part as follows: "Never before, gentlemen, in American history has the freedom of our higher educational institutions been thus threatened by an army bureaucracy. It is an insidious influence and has gradually been largely because the American people have not been aware of what is going on."

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman writes: "It smacks of insouciance if not of ignorance for any man to tell us that military drill is the chief proponent of manly character. What about the drill of daily life in the home, the shop, the factory, the store? Watch the countless numbers of all ranks and conditions pouring forth in their tasks every morning. They

Before the CURTAIN

By ELMO HAMBY

Mr. Stanley Joins the Lodge.

JACK STANLEY

Jack Stanley, a public and a period that has not been marked by flashy, spectacular work on the part of the leader, but solidly good, consistent performances as master of ceremonies.

But all things must be taken into account. This department heretofore predicts that Mr. Stanley, the Public God, will be fully as successful, a bit as his predecessor. It must be realized that the leader has been met with several great obstacles.

In the first place, the men who perform before the audience of the north must completely re-acclimate himself when he comes south. Pep, dash, exaggerated pantomime and much clowning is requisite of a hand leader who performs on the wrong side of that hectic imaginary line. When he comes south, the master of ceremonies must undergo almost a complete change.

He must be more unobtrusive. He must be more dignified. The rolling of the eyes, and the clowning with the hands, and the shouting, a bit as his predecessor. It must be realized that the leader has been met with several great obstacles.

Mr. Stanley has very nearly learned his lesson. It would be much longer until you probably wouldn't recognize Jack from some of our noted "true southern gentlemen." And with that great and impelling musical gift which is his, it requires no soothsayer to predict brilliant success for the dark-haired champion.

Viva Mr. Stanley.

Ahoy! Mates, Mystery in the Air.

Probably I'm no good guesser at all, but for the past week, there's been a deep and unfathomable air of mystery surrounding the Capitol theater. "Mystery" Semon, manager, and Fred Wilson, assistant manager, concerning some new entertainment feature they are going to spring on the public soon who theatergoers.

With whatever reportorial sagacity your correspondent possesses, I have hunted and suggested and intimated for six whole days, and the only thing I have still does not lend itself to any coherent announcement.

Anyhow, I know that it has something to do with the Capitol's first anniversary, which occurs week of June 25, but from conversation, I believe that the innovation which is to be introduced on this date will be a permanent feature.

Again, Mr. Semon slipped one day and mentioned that a number of principals of the Municipal Comic Opera company were coming to the Capitol. Maybe it's going to be comic opera.

Maybe, and maybe not. Mr. Semon denied that the new idea had anything to do with Jimmie Hodges; that the music-comedy star is not returning, and so, being at my wit's end, I forsook the theater, and wandered my weary way to the typewriter, and so to you, dear reader.

Mr. Semon promises to make a complete announcement of the whole dang affair next Sunday, so we'll all have to hold on for another week.

Panoramic Pot-Shots Off the Peachtree.

Nevertheless, there's a tale being handed around that a certain young theater official of the town, who has a penchant for falling madly in love with, and proposing to pretty nearly every performer who comes to his theater, was accepted, finally, by one young lady at the intriguing hour of 4 o'clock in the morning one day last week.

At last report, the young man was still wondering what reply would be sent after she had said "yes."

There is something radically wrong when a bride on her wedding day does not write home that she has the best husband in the world.

No man has the courage to tell a woman the things that her mirror does.

CAREER OF DIAMOND TOLD IN LOEW FILM

The recent insistent call for innovation in motion picture creations has been answered with "Diamond Handcuffs," the unique offering to be shown at Loew's Grand theater this week and which, according to the critics, is based on an ingenious and altogether clever idea. It is romantic and adventurous story built around the history of a strange jewel and rascal, Wilkie Collins' famous "Moonstone" in the intensity of its dramatic interest. Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel, Lawrence Gray and a great supporting cast make of "Diamond Handcuffs" a drama that begins in the diamond mines of South Africa and comes to a thrilling climax in the tortures of the Parisian underworld.

The new picture traces a diamond from its discovery in the mines to theft for a woman's love and the sinister spell by which it spreads through every walk of life. Last for it perpetrates a society scandal; desire for it launches a war in which police and gangsters battle with machine guns in a city street. Finally out of its sinister influence, emerges a sweet and pure love.

Eleanor Boardman scores a triumph as Tillie, the underworld heroine in the new story, which John McArthur directed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, and Lena Malone, the little dancer who recently proved a sensation in "Chicago," plays a sinister native character, human prototype of the uncanny diamond, Conrad Nagel, Gwen Lee and John Roche enact the society triangle in the story, and Lawrence Gray plays opposite Miss Boardman.

New Griffith Film Current At the Howard

No picture to recent years has evoked more spontaneous praise from critics than "Drums of Love," the special "Appreciation Week" feature at the Howard theater this week. It's an epic romance of two brothers in love, which D. W. Griffith has fashioned into a masterpiece of the screen. Mary Philbin, Lionel Barrymore, Don Alvarado, Tully Marshall and William Austin in the leading roles.

The picture is said to be so far advanced in the realms of sheer beauty and dramatic strength that no comparison can be made with any modern screen production. In the masterpiece of his, Griffith is said to have achieved the very ultimate in perfection.

It is seldom that Griffith grows enthused. Twenty years of bitter struggles in bringing an infant industry to the plane of an art—more reaching and universal even than the graphic arts—has tempered whatever of self-indulgence he might have. He is a slow-thinking detective who has an uncanny habit of getting into trouble. Raymond Hatton is cast in a dual role. He is a newspaper reporter and also the leader of an underworld gang and the terror of his rivals in crime.

Other characters are ably handled by Mary Brian, dignity as ever and maddly in love with the rising young attorney played by Jack Luden. Smith, the leader of a rival gang, has been placed in the hands of our old friend and screen villain, William Powell. The theme of "Partners in Crime," is the thrilling one of law's battle against the underworld. The locale of the picture is a great American city and is a decided step from the beaten path in comedies. Incidents of the story provide the comedy situations but the laughs are subordinate to the interest of the plot.

If a woman has the views of a man that is the worst thing you can say for her.

Alamo No. 2.

"What Price Glory," the merry war film which will be shown Monday, Tuesday, at the Alamo No. 2, theater, is a screen play without a villain. Another novel feature of it is that you can use your own discretion in picking the hero. Nobody could dispute that the fiery Charmaine, played by Dolores Del Rio, is a more than adequate heroine, and that Privates Kiper and Lipinsky supply all the comedy necessary.

But who's the hero? Is it Captain Flagg, the hard-boiled marine who gloriouly drunk at Barle-Duc and leads his men into battle as light-heartedly as though he were going on a picnic? Or is it Sergeant Quiet, the rough and blustering leatherneck, who knows all the card tricks in the deck, steals his superior officer's sweethearts when he gets a chance and takes his war as a matter of course?

BEERY-HATTON COMEDY ON GEORGIA SCREEN

"Partners in Crime," the latest Paramount release in which Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are starred, will be shown all week at Keith's Georgia theater.

Crooks and comedy; lovers and laughter; "pellow" drama and thrills, all combine to make hilarious comedy situations for these noted comedians of the screen. "Partners in Crime," is red-blooded melodrama which without the laughs and nonsense would stand on its merits as good entertainment.

Wallace Beery takes the part of a slow-thinking detective who has an uncanny habit of getting into trouble. Raymond Hatton is cast in a dual role. ## New Denny Film On Capitol Sheet Big Laugh Farce

One of the best real "zag" men in motion pictures is Reginald Denny. He proves it in "Good Morning, Judge," the Universal film in which he opens Monday at the Capitol theater.

Denny's pictures usually have hundreds of new laugh situations, but his new production may be credited with having outdone the others. The audience, respond heartily to the star's light and airy brand of humor and proved it by much audible appreciation.

William A. Seiter, who has directed most of Denny's big hits, wielded the megaphone on "Good Morning, Judge." This alone would make it a success, but the presence of an unusual story and blonde Mary Nolan in the leading feminine role helped to make it outstanding.

This time, the star is again seen as wealthy, young and handsome, but he tells the girl he loves that he is poor and a criminal in order to remain in the mission for homeless, accompanied by men free of charge.

Saturday's offering at the Ponce de Leon will be "In Shadows," a striking Liberty production presenting the greatest American comedian, Lon Chaney, in an impressive role.

Clara Bow's Latest Flaming Youth Film At Ponce de Leon

Featured by Thursday and Friday presentation of Clara Bow's latest and most appealing sweetheart picture, "Wine," when all ladies accompanied by escorts will be admitted free, on Ponce de Leon theater program for the coming week offers a wide diversity of entertainment.

Droll Harry Langdon opens the week Monday with his comical picture, "First Flame," which will give the comedy element an impressive place on the bill. Tuesday brings to the Ponce de Leon screen the popular pair, Richard Dix and Bebe Daniels, in their famous Paramount hit, "Sinners in Heaven." This is regarded as one of the strongest attractions of the week.

On Wednesday Ponce de Leon audiences will see beautiful Esther Ralston in the highly interesting and widely-discussed picture, "Something Always Happens," which is screened in Paramount's usual impressive way.

When the vivacious Clara Bow takes the screen Thursday and Friday in "Wine," the management will carry out the sweetheart theme of the masterpiece by admitting all ladies accompanied by men free of charge.

'MIDNIGHT MADNESS' CURRENT MET FILM

"Midnight Madness," the Metropolitan's feature attraction for the week is adapted from "The Lion Trap," and is the story of a girl, a New York working girl, who, through force of circumstance, and family, has become a vicious gold digger, who swore that with her beauty she would marry a man only for his money, and that a man without money would not interest her.

She imagines herself in love with her bachelor employer, who mentions love without marriage, when she leaves him, to accept a bribe to force information of a sort from an unsuspecting man. To do this she accompanies the man to a night club, and later, under the midnight spell of romantic madness, becomes his bride.

Next day the husband overhears her say that she married him for his money, so he tells her he has nothing to offer. He takes her to the wilds of Africa and there, despite herself, tamed her as has tamed the wilds.

Gorgeous Jacqueline Logan has the role of the gold digger in "Midnight Madness," one of the most polished actors of the silver screen, plays the role of the man, soft in love, but hard as iron when crossed.

Seen and heard this week on the Vitaphone program are several acts of outstanding prominence. The headliner is the very popular May McAvoy, who is not only seen, but heard in the Vitaphone presentation, "Sunny in California." Her versatility amply displayed in the silent drama, Miss McAvoy displays it equally as well in her talking picture. Others on the Vitaphone program are the "College Four," a quartet from Washington State university, in a medley of musical numbers, including the title of "Campus Capers," and Gene Morgan, prime western comedian, and his orchestra. Although following several famous musical comedians in a Los Angeles theater Morgan and his musicians not only equalled their popularity but almost eclipsed it in their avalanche of applause and praise.

A sardonic comedy, tinged with love romance, set against a background of world shaking conflict, and with Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Ina Ray Aubrey as the stars is to be the Tuesday attraction.

The World's Masterpieces of Mystery and Detective Fiction Condensed and Edited into Tabloid Space

ARTHUR B. REEVE---"America's Conan Doyle"

A Complete Detective Story Every Sunday
That Satisfies and Intrigues the Reader

A Detective Story is both a relaxation and a delight.

Such great men as Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Charles E. Hughes, Thomas A. Edison found Detective Stories their favorite type of Fiction, a rest from the stress and strain of great affairs and mighty tasks.

And for all men and women, the mystery always fascinates and compels. The problem, the hidden, the unknown, piques curiosity, arouses interest---because it is something to be solved---to find out about---a question to be answered---a locked door to be opened.

Arthur B. Reeve is the Master Detective Story Writer of America.

For eight years his "Craig Kennedy Stories" were a leading feature of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. His books have sold into the millions.

His Motion Picture Serials were outstanding successes throughout the world.

What Conan Doyle is to English literature, Gaboriau to French, Arthur B. Reeve is to American letters.

Miss Ethel Tison To Wed Mr. Myer, Of Bradenton, Fla.

Mrs. Mattie B. Tison, of Clearwater, Fla., and Cedarburg, Wis., announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Ethel Carlisle Tison, to Melvin Andrew Myer, of Bradenton, Fla., the wedding to take place June 28 at 911 North Fort Harrison, Clearwater.

Miss Tison is the daughter of the late Dr. W. W. Tison, of Cedarburg, Wis., where she was born and reared. After graduation from Cedarburg High school she attended G. S. W. Milledgeville, Ga., graduating in the class of 1923. For the first three years thereafter and prior to making her home in Clearwater she taught school in LaFayette, Ga., and likewise in her home town, Cedarburg, attending summer school at University of Georgia, Athens. Miss Tison is a popular member of the younger set of Clearwater, having taught in the public schools of that city for the past two years.

Mr. Myer is the son of Dr. and Mrs. M. R. Myer, 212 W. Key street, Tampa, Fla. He attended Birmingham Southern college at Birmingham, Ala. Since moving to Florida he has been connected with the United Markets, serving as a manager at Tampa, Inverness, Clearwater and Bradenton.

Mrs. Beall To Honor Mrs. Felton On Her 94th Birthday

Rebecca Felton chapter, U. D. C., will be entertained at an informal reception Tuesday afternoon, June 12, by Mrs. John A. Beall at her home, 815 Myrtle street, N. E., honoring Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton on her ninety-fourth birthday. Shouting honors with Mrs. Felton will be the following distinguished veterans: General D. B. Freeman, general commander of the state of Georgia; General W. D. Harris, general of the north Georgia brigade; General George W. Wells, Colonel Shropshire, past commander of the north Georgia brigade; Colonel Colton S. Lines, of Marietta, Ga., and Dr. Arch Avery, life-long friends of Mrs. Felton.

Mrs. Walter E. Lomax, president of Rebecca Felton chapter, U. D. C., had the distinction of being named "matron of honor" of General Harris' staff of the north Georgia brigade, and attended the recent reunion in Little Rock, Ark., in that capacity. Mrs. Beall will be assisted in entertaining by the executive board of the Rebecca Felton chapter.

Mrs. Leathers Weds Howard P. O'Rear.
Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends throughout the state is the announcement of the marriage of Mrs. Bertha Leathers to Howard P. O'Rear of Rome, which took place Wednesday, May 30, at 5:30 o'clock at the First Christian church in the presence of their families and close friends. The Rev. C. R. Stauffer officiated.

The bride wore a model of sand georgette crepe with slippers to match. A large orchid hat and a corsage of sweet peas and roses completed the costume.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. O'Rear were entertained at dinner by Mrs. W. A. Williams. Mr. and Mrs. O'Rear will make their home in Rome, where Mr. O'Rear is connected with the Southern Railway company.

Donehoo-Chambers Wedding Plans.

Of sincere interest throughout the south will be the wedding of Miss Evelyn Donehoo to Franklin Chambers, which will be solemnized Wednesday evening, June 27, at St. Mark's Methodist church, Dr. W. L. Duren performing the ceremony.

Orris Donehoo, father of the bride-elect, will give his daughter in marriage. Miss Donehoo has chosen for her maid of honor Miss Louise McCulloch, of Greensboro, N. C. Her matron will be Mrs. W. E. Montgomery, of St. Augustine, Fla., sister of the groom-elect, and acting as her bridesmaids will be Miss Rebekah Donehoo, cousin of the bride-elect; Miss Beatrice North, Miss Kathryn Babb and Miss Genevieve Connell.

The best man will be William Anthony Green, and acting as groomsmen will be William Chambers, Fred Saunders, Flake Laird and W. J. Davis, Jr. The ushers will be M. M. Goldsmith, Travis Johnson, Forest Hill and G. P. Carmichael.

Little Miss Julia Montgomery, of St. Augustine, Fla., niece of the groom-elect, will act as the flower girl and Master Eugene Carl Tidwell, Jr., as ring-bearer.

Miss Donehoo will be feted prior to her marriage at a round of lovely parties, the dates to be announced later.

Miss Camp Weds L. L. Boyette.

Mrs. John F. Camp, formerly of Dalton, announces the marriage of her daughter, Lena Irene, to L. L. Boyette, of Norfolk, Va., May 22, at the home of the Rev. John E. Briggs, in Washington, D. C. Only a few close friends witnessed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Boyette will make their home in Norfolk, Va.

Bell-Carroll Piano School Presents Pupils.

The Bell-Carroll Piano school, of which Mrs. Armond Carroll is director, presents Miss Claudine Ward in recital Tuesday evening, June 12, at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Carroll, 300 The Prado, Ansley park. Wednesday evening, June 13, the school will present fourteen students of piano music in recital, including pupils of Mrs. Carroll and of her assistants, Miss Lucile Williams. Music lovers are invited to both recitals.

Miss Ward, who is to receive a certificate denoting completion of the high school course in the progressive series of piano music, is a young pianist of fine musical gifts. Her program will include, in addition to two groups of shorter piano compositions, the Mozart sonata in A major, opus 12, and the Mendelssohn concerto in A minor, opus 25. Mrs. Carroll will be the second piano for the concert.

Pupils taking part in the Wednesday evening recital include Miss Nona Early, Miss Mary Lou Young, Miss Claudine Ward, Misses Margaret and Ina Morgan, Edith West, Lois and Elise Morgan, Mildred Ogle, Betty Taylor, Thelma Bottoms and James Addy, Armond Felder Carroll and Earl Ward.

Miss Cochran and George Rosser Will Wed at Ceremony in July

Miss Margaret Pearl Cochran, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Neal Cochran, whose engagement is announced today to George Pulliam Rosser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis P. Rosser. Photograph by Thurston Hatcher.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Margaret Pearl Cochran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Neal Cochran, to George Pulliam Rosser is of very great interest to numerous friends throughout the south.

Miss Cochran is a very talented and accomplished musician. After graduating from North Avenue Presbyterian school of this city, she continued her education in music at Sophie Newcomb college in New Orleans, and at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. Here, as elsewhere, she won many friends and admirers through her inherent ability and sincere and gracious personality.

She is greatly interested in the progressive development of art and has devoted much time and study to this purpose. The mother of the bride-elect was before her marriage Miss Pearl Holbrook. Mr. Cochran is actively identified in business in this city and is associated with a large corporation of national repute.

Mr. Rosser is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Packard Rosser, Sr. He was graduated from the Georgia School of Technology, where he was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity and was actively identified with athletics and other activities of the school. He is connected with the firm of Sam N. Hodges & Co.

Lindsey - Chapman Wedding Plans Are Announced Today

Of interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Ellnor Evelyn Lindsey and Howard King Chapman, Jr., whose wedding will be an event of June.

The marriage will be solemnized at Epworth Methodist church on Tuesday, June 19, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Rev. Robert Z. Tyler of Emory university will perform the ceremony. Miss Lindsey will be given in marriage by her father, Mr. Paul Leonard Lindsey.

Preceding the ceremony, an appropriate musical program will be rendered by Miss Melba Cheving, pianist, and Mr. Emmette Groover, violinist. Miss Perdita Collins, soloist, will sing "I Love You Truly" and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told." Gustav Lang's "Flower Song" will be played softly during the ceremony. Miss Lindsey will have as her maid of honor, her sister, Miss Gladys Lindsey. Miss Julia Chapman, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Terrie Hagan will act as bridesmaids. Little Miss Catherine Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Thompson, will be the dainty flower girl.

Mr. Chapman will have as his best man Mr. James Carr, and Messrs. Ray Williams and Willard Hay will be his groomsmen. The ushers will be Messrs. Robert Mayo and Terrie Hagan.

Miss Jacquenita Lindsey, younger sister of the bride-elect, will keep the bride's book.

Mrs. Earl Carman was hostess at a matinee and tea Saturday afternoon honoring Miss Lindsey. Covers were placed for the following: Miss Julia Chapman, Mrs. Terrie Hagan, Miss Lucile Johnson, Mrs. R. F. Williamson, Miss Ellnor Lindsey and Mrs. Earl Carman.

Miss Perdita Collins entertained at bridge Saturday evening at her home on Iverson street complimenting Miss Lindsey.

Miss Margaret Stokely To Give Recital.

Monday evening, June 4, Miss Dorothy J. Waldman will present her pupil, Miss Margaret Stokely, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. William Province Stokely, in a pianoforte recital at Miss Waldman's studio at 739 Park drive, N. E. The entire program will be played from memory, opening with the difficult sonata, Op. 10, No. 3, by Beethoven and a prelude of Bach. The G-minor symphony of Mozart leads up to a Chopin group of Valse and the well-known Military Polonaise. Rubenstein's lovely poetic expression of "Romance" has as a foil Heller's Tarantella and Moszkowski's "Scherzino." The most modern composition on the program is the "Indian Cradle Song," by Charles Wakefield Cadman, the eminent American composer.

An unusual feature will be two trios for the piano, played by Miss Waldman and her little sister, and brother, Kathleen and Billy Stokely.

Mitchell-Smith Wedding Is Beautiful Church Event

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Mitchell and Cleon E. Smith, of Graymont, was solemnized Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the Second Baptist church, the occasion being marked by beautiful solemnity and dignity. Rev. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the church, officiated and was assisted by the Rev. Fred F. Rollins, pastor of the Oakhurst Baptist church. Preceding the marriage service an appropriate musical program was rendered by Mrs. Stephen W. Bann, Paul Crutchfield, Sr., and Miss Mary Emma Phillips. The interior of the church was elaborately decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns, foliage plants and baskets of white peonies. At the back of the altar palms were massed in pyramid effect. The dark green of the foliage was relieved by floor baskets filled with long stemmed white peonies arranged at intervals alternating with brass candelabras holding burning white tapers.

Wedding Attendants.

Misses Lydia Ragsdale, Vera Wall and Thelma Maxwell were the first of the attendants to enter. Each of them was accompanied to the altar by a groomsman, including Boyce Graham, Robert H. Davis and W. H. V. Cochran. They wore gowns of the latest fashion, made of tulle, rose-colored tulle, and the costume of the bridesmaids was made of the modish uneven hemline and close-fitting bodice. A fluffy tulle bow adorned the left shoulder of each gown, the bottom of the skirt extending to the bottom of the skirt. They wore satin slippers to match their costumes and carried bouquets of pink roses, vari-colored sweet peas and yellow snapdragons. Miss Ragsdale wore apple green. Miss Maxwell was crowned in delicate yellow. Miss Wall's costume was of pastel blue. Mrs. Robert H. Davis, the bride's sister, was the attractive matron of honor, and her costume was fashioned of palest pink tulle veiling tulle of the same shade. Her gown was fashioned like those worn by the bridesmaids and she wore satin slippers to match and carried a bouquet like those carried by the bridesmaids.

Lovely Bride.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her father, William J. Mitchell, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the groom and his best man, Francis Sledge. The bride's lovely gown of lustrous white satin was made with a close-fitting bodice and the skirt was fashioned with an uneven hemline, which reached ankle length in the back. The wide hem was formed of exquisite cream colored lace, which was joined to the satin with an embroidery of seed pearls. The same delicate lace trimmed the bodice with a V-shaped insert in the front, which was edged with tiny pearls. A graceful train of white satin fell from her shoulders and was covered entirely by her bridal veil of real lace which fell from a lace cap held to her head by tiny clusters of orange blossoms arranged on either side. Her white satin slippers were adorned by tiny orange blossom buckles and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses showered with valley lilies. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mitchell, the bride's parents, entertained at a reception immediately after the ceremony at the home on Ridgecrest road. Mrs. Mitchell wore a handsome gown of peach-colored crepe lavishly beaded in crystals and her shoulder bouquet was fashioned of yellow roses and valley lilies. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Smith assisted in entertaining. The reception rooms of the home were decorated with a profusion of

Miss Kendrick Weds Mr. Kreeger At Lovely Afternoon Ceremony

A beautiful wedding which attracted widespread social interest took place at the College Park Presbyterian church Saturday afternoon, June 2, at 4 o'clock when Miss Frances Kendrick became the bride of Robert Everett Kreeger. The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. G. Patton.

The church was beautiful in the conventional green and white, palms, ferns and Easter lilies being used effectively with candles in silver candelabra.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Manora Conley sang "All For You" and "Because," and Drayton Conley rendered a beautiful violin solo. They were accompanied at the piano by Miss Jimmie Dodd, who also played the wedding march.

The wedding party entered to the strains of Lohengrin. First came Miss Martha Kendrick, sister of the bride, who was taper bearer. She was attended by Miss Peach Gettelle, in shoulder spray of shaded lavender and peach sweet peas. Next came Miss Frances Kendrick, the bride, who was escorted by Mr. Kreeger, who wore an orchid boutonniere with orange child accessories, and carrying pink roses tied with pink tulle. Little Miss Roslyn Ison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Ison, entered with the ring in the heart of a rose-bud. She wore a dainty pink crepe frock with trimming of pastel shades. Scattering rose petals in the path of the bride, little Miss Jennie Feuzer Lyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Lyle, Jr., and little Miss Sarah Virginia Crane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Crane, preceded the bride as flower girls. Little Miss Lyle wore blue crepe, while little Miss Crane wore pink crepe trimmed in point de esprit. Both carried white baskets tied with pink tulle.

The bride entered with the groom. She made a charming picture in her gown of flesh colored georgette with insets in points of cream lace and a satin girdle. She wore a hat and accessories of flesh color and her bouquet was cream roses showered with sweet peas.

John Marshall, Jr., acted as best man, and H. W. Means and W. C. Mizelle, III, were the ushers. After an extended wedding trip in which they will motor to several southern points of interest, Mr. and Mrs. Kreeger will return to Atlanta and make their home in West End.

Davison-Warner Wedding Plans Announced Today

Prominent social interest centers in the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Jane Davison to Daniel Sumner Warner, of Pontiac, Mich., and Daphne Lyle, of Atlanta, which will be solemnized Wednesday afternoon, June 20, at 5 o'clock at the Biltmore, with Rev. L. R. Christie, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, officiating.

Beaumont Davison, father of the bride, will give her in marriage, and her sister, Miss Betty Davidson, will be maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Ruth Osburn, Miss Nan Allen, of Buford; Miss Laura Emerson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Miss Louise Lewis, of Montezuma. Robert Kreeger, of Fort Wayne, Ind., will be the groom's best man, and the groomsmen will be Tyler T. Watson, of Chicago; Donald Goss, of Ann Arbor, Mich.; Edward Castle, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Harry Holland, Jr., of Atlanta. The ushers will be Colonel F. J.

College Park News of Interest.

Miss Manora Conley entertained at a miscellaneous shower Friday evening in honor of Mrs. R. E. Kreeger, formerly Miss Frances Kendrick.

Mrs. J. H. Swann returned from a visit to relatives in Augusta. Miss Elizabeth Richardson is the guest of relatives in Atlanta this week-end.

palms and cut flowers. The bride's table was overlaid with a lace cover and graced in the center by a three-tiered wedding cake embossed in pink rosebuds and valley lilies. Silver candlesticks holding pink tapers adorned the table at intervals.

In the late evening Mr. Smith and his bride left for a motor trip to points in the north. On their return they will reside on Briarcliff road. The bride's traveling costume was fashioned of navy blue crepe and she wore a small hat of dark blue straw trimmed with narrow beige colored grosgrain ribbon.

School of Oratory Summer Term Opens.

Summer terms of the Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression, 402 Wesley Memorial Church building, opens Monday, June 4, with Dr. James F. Watson in charge.

Public school teachers will find here courses arranged to meet their special needs for which the state and city departments of education give credit. Interested parties should confer with Dr. Watson, telephone IRV 0178.

FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

OVERLOOKING rolling green sward stretches bordered with pines, a lake mirroring elms, hemlocks and firs, vistas of wild terrain and distant hills, the Brookhaven Country club is rising amid masses of slate-colored tile, cement and sand. Beneath a grotesque scaffolding it nestles on its commanding eminence as if indigenous to the soil. At its feet Atlanta will swing racket and club; gay bundles of bathing suit and bandeau will parade down the steep green slope to the water's edge; and those who would lay aside the cares of the world for a time will welcome this recent acquisition to the clubs of Atlanta.

Fitness finds its way into all things of real worth. Besides beauty, usefulness and grace, the significance, the "raison d'être" of the structure is emblazoned above the French doors of half timber, opening on both sides of the massive fireplace from the lounge. In the center of a blocked lime-stone panel ornamented with French medallions extending over each door are the full relief heads of a shepherd, his crook over his shoulder and a golfer gracefully poised against his club. The one is the modern golfer, he who has been the cynosure of eyes on both sides of the sea, winning acclaim for his prowess and his nerve. The other is the first golfer, the shepherd of the hills of Scotland, which the architects Burge and Stevens, with appreciation of the significance of the club, have placed beside the sportsman of today. And so we come to the first to play "The Royal and ancient game of golf."

On the rolling hills of Scotland the shepherds with their kilts, their tartans and tam-shaners, found some other use for their crooks beside guiding the sheep through the winding hills. The stones of old Scotland became balls, the crooks were used as mallets, and there in the far-flung stretches of another world, the stalwart sons of the highlands learned the sport of sports with the swiftness with which good news and bad is carried in the land of the Scots, the game found its way to valley and hillside; peasant and prince took it up; and far and wide the fascination which has rallied recruits in the name of play since that time, began to make its appeal to the people in the hills. Scotland became a land of golfers.

The matter progressed. In 1455 so popular had the game become that the Scottish parliament decreed that "golf be utterly erit down and nocht usit." But still the game went on. The highlanders had caught the thrill. Golf balls were bought by the score. Soon the country was notified that on this account "na small quantiti of gold and silver is transported vyerit out of his Hienes kingdom of Scotland."

And so it seems, in truth, that the figures above the French doors at Atlanta's new club are brothers under the skin.

REMARKABLE ATTENTION to fitness of material, accuracy of detail and exquisite blending of colors was shown in the traveling case de luxe made by Mrs. Charles E. Sciple for several spring brides and as "bon voyage" gifts to intimate friends departing for Europe. A black satin bag, possibly eight or nine inches long and about six deep, was lined with rose-colored chiffon taffetas. A strip of taffetas two inches wide fastened at measured distances apart, held in place spoils of black and white silk thread, a package of needles, some cards of small black and white snaps, while in the bottom of the bag lay a black satin-covered emery, topped with gold lace, a tape line, a small pair of scissors, the sharp ends protected by a cork, and a gold thimble topped a cylinder-like receptacle holding black and white cotton thread and big needles.

A cluster of hand-made roses, blending effectively in harmonious effect, rose, blue pink and yellow, decorated the flap, which was edged in gold lace, and finished by a gilt cord. The matching black satin handkerchief case, lined with the same vivid shade of taffetas, was decorated in a spray of gorgeous hand-made flowers, while gold galleon outlined the delicate, sculptured case. The round, tightly stuffed pin cushion held enough pins to carry the traveler on a world-wide journey and was perhaps the piece of resistance of the outfit. Gold lace sport, whose vision, wisdom and un-

BIDDING FAREWELL to Mr. and Mrs. Holland Judkins and their three beautiful children the forthcoming week, gives a tug at the heartstrings of a circle of very devoted friends of this popular couple. Mr. Judkins goes to New York to become executive secretary to John McEntee Bowman, after having directed the destiny of the Baltimore ever since this magnificent hostelry opened its doors several years ago. Intimate friends made merry the hours at the dinner honoring Mr. Judkins last week with Robert W. Woodruff as the central host, and a succession of brilliant toasts were proposed for a sister of the future. When the Baltimore was opened with a brilliant dinner at which assembled the elite of Atlanta society, John McEntee Bowman came to the city to attend this auspicious event, meeting and mingling with the guests, making a very great impression upon Atlantans. At the sixth anniversary of the Westchester Brookhaven Country club at Rye, N. Y., last Sunday, a tablet was unveiled in honor of this notable gentleman with Senator J. Henry Waters, member of the board of governors, making the presentation speech.

The bronze tablet, 26 by 24 inches, bears the following inscription: "To the founder of the Westchester Brookhaven Country club, John McEntee Bowman, exponent and patron of civic progress, whose vision, wisdom and un-

YOUTHELL Miss Miriam Thompson, daughter of Mrs. M. L. Thompson, of Decatur, stands upon the threshold of life following her graduation from Girls' High last Thursday evening eager to take up her responsibilities leading to a successful future. As a reward for the efforts, entailed by a hard course of study, she was awarded the tuition scholarship to Agnes Scott college by the Alumnae association of G. H. S. In competing with two other brilliant and eligible contestants, Miss Thompson made her appeal to the alumnae for votes in the following original verse:

"I come to you as a stranger Hoping to find a friend. For you have in your power and means To help me achieve an end. And if you faint would assist me I shall show you now the way: Be present at the alumnae tea On the twenty-sixth of May. They will vote on the Agnes Scott scholarship then. And my name is one of the three. I assure you I shall appreciate it If you will vote for me."

Observation Class In Music Features Emory's Normal

A unique feature of Emory university's first summer musical normal school, opening Wednesday, June 13, is an observation class of beginners in music conducted during the six weeks of the course by Mrs. S. R. Christie, Jr., of Decatur, for the purpose of illustrating to the music teachers in attendance on the normal how to teach in primary music work. A number of young children will be accepted for this class during the period of the summer normal session entirely without charge. Parents desiring to enter their children should communicate at once with Mrs. Christie, at Decatur 6700-W, including those who have already been in touch with the Emory summer school office.

The normal is being conducted by the Art Publication society, of St. Louis, for the benefit of teachers using the progressive series of piano music, under the direction of Mrs. Arnold Carroll, of Atlanta, a member of the national normal faculty of the society. Mrs. Carroll, it will be recalled, conducted a similar normal in Denver, Col., last summer, and will conduct a second normal at the close of the Emory session at the Braun School of Music, in Pottsville, Pa.

Miss Eleanor Gay Weds W. W. Lee At Brilliant Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Gay, daughter of Mrs. Pearl Moxley Gay, and Walter Wright Lee, of New York, was solemnized at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 2, at All Saints' Episcopal church, the Rev. W. W. Menninger, rector of the church, performing the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a representative assembly of Atlanta and southern society.

The magnificent altar of the church which was banked with luxuriant palms interspersed with Easter lilies held a large vase of Easter lilies, on each side of which were two smaller vases, flanked at each end with tall, slender, cathedral candelabra holding slender white burning tapers, which cast a soft glow over the lovely scene. Sunlight garlanded the altar rail and choir stalls, forming a lower of luxuriant green and white as the setting of the impressive ceremony.

Seated reserved for the members of the families of the bride and groom were designated by white satin ribbons holding clusters of Easter lilies.

Mrs. T. G. Seidel, organist of All Saints' church, rendered a delightful program of nuptial music including "Kamenei Ostrow" by Rubenstein, and "Dorsiel" from Wagner's "Lohengrin." "Lohengrin" wedding chorus was used as the processional and Mendelssohn's wedding march preceded the recessional. During the ceremony she played strains from "The Voice That Breathes O'er Eden," adding a touch of sentiment to the lovely service, this selection having been rendered at the wedding of the bride's sister, Mrs. A. M. Boone, formerly Miss Louise Gay, whose marriage was solemnized at All Saints' June 17, 1925.

The Bridal Party

The ushers who entered the church first in pairs were Elberta Gay, Louise Du Pre Gay, brothers of the bride; Dr. L. M. Vinton, Dr. Newton Craig, Karl Craig, Harry Craig, Albert Craig, and John S. Spelling.

Mrs. A. M. Boone, sister of the bride, who acted as matron of honor, and Miss Annette Gay, sister of the bride, the maid of honor, who entered singly, were gowned alike in charming models of beige georgette, close-fitting sleeveless bodices of satin, gracefully shirred in front, and skirts of dainty ruffled tulle. The graceful uneven hemlines were features of the charming models. An artistic note was introduced through the twisted grille of orchid and apple green satin. Charming picture hats of orchid horsehair braid, fashioned with narrow orchid satin ribbon effectively wired on the large floppy brim in the shape of a four-leaf clover, and offset at the side with a cluster of violets and pansies in deeper shades of lavender and purple, completed the lovely costumes. They carried magnificent bridal sheaths of Perpet roses tied with streamers of orchid-colored tulle.

Little Misses Anne and Susan Garrett, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Garrett, cousins of the bride, who acted as the dainty flower girls entered together, wearing ruffled above-the-knee models of gold tulle, the close-fitting bodices of which were offset with tiers of daintily pointed ruffles. Novelty buttons featured the backs of the dainty little models. Lovely little bolt bonnets of exquisite leghorn straw tied under the chin with streamers of yellow ribbon completed the charming little costumes.

The captivating little ring bearer, Alvin Caldwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howell Caldwell, who carried a single Easter lily, wore a dainty little Oliver Twist suit made with a blouse of dainty handkerchief linen and offset with yellow satin pants. Crisp white ruffles on the round collar and deep cuffs were a feature of the novel little suit.

The Lovely Bride

Miss Mae Berry Is Honored At Series of Parties

Miss Margaret Mae Berry, whose marriage to Thomas Grant Killian will be solemnized in June, is being entertained at a number of delightful pre-nuptial affairs.

Mrs. John Outley entertains at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 9, at bridge at her home on Robison place.

A beautiful affair of Saturday afternoon, June 2, was the luncheon at which Miss Elizabeth Berry, sister of the bride-elect, and Miss Josephine Craft entertained at the Henry Grady hotel. Place cards with hand painted figures of brides and grooms and dainty corsages of sweet peas marked the place of each guest. Covers were placed for Miss Elizabeth Berry, Miss Josephine Craft, Miss Margaret Mae Berry, Miss Mildred Greer, Miss Barker Fudge, Mrs. G. L. Darden and Mrs. W. H. Holmes. The party was entertained at a matinee party following the luncheon.

Violin School Plans Series of Recitals

The Lettingwell violin school announces a series of recitals during the month of June, the first of which will be given at the home of Professor and Mrs. William S. Taylor, 728 Spring street, N. W., Friday evening, June 15, at 8:15 o'clock.

The program will be given by advanced pupils of the school and piano pupils of Mrs. Alma Garrett Ware and Mrs. William S. Taylor, teachers of piano in the school. The second will be a program by the junior class and piano pupils of Mrs. Alma Garrett Ware, and will be given in the pine room of the Ansley hotel, Wednesday, June 20, at 8 o'clock.

Clarke-Price

Mrs. Hugh Kilgore Is Honor Guest

Mrs. H. W. North and Mrs. J. C. Rowden entertained at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Ruth Kilgore, a recent bride. The guests included 25 friends of the hostesses and Kilgore.

Commencement Exercises At the Conservatory

Atlanta Conservatory of Music will hold its commencement exercises in the auditorium of the Woman's club on Peachtree street Thursday, June 7, at 8:30 o'clock. An address and delivering of certificates and diplomas will be made by Dr. Clinton L. Scott. The public is invited.

Among the prominent out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Mrs. T. R. Gregory, of Lancaster, S. C.; Miss Marjorie Hutchins, of Columbus; Mrs. E. M. Bullock, of Columbus; Donald Nichols, of Raleigh, N. C.; and Perry Lunsford, of Covington.

The wedding trip.

Following the reception the young couple left for a wedding trip to New Orleans, whence they will sail by boat for Boston, going from there to New York, where they will make their home at 12 East Thirty-first street.

The bride's going-away costume was a two-piece model of black satin made with modish blouse and pleated skirt, with which she wore a coat of black

Miss Susan Shadburn To Wed Robert Lee Watkins, of Decatur

Miss Susan Shadburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster Shadburn, of Decatur, whose engagement is announced today to Robert Lee Watkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Watkins, of Decatur.

An announcement of cordial interest is that made by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster Shadburn, of Decatur, formerly of Buford, of the engagement of their daughter, Susan Shadburn, to Robert Lee Watkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Watkins, of Decatur.

Miss Shadburn is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shadburn. She is a graduate of Buford High school and Agnes Scott college. She has a wide circle of friends and relatives who will receive the news of the engagement with interest. Mrs. Shadburn is the daughter of Judge William J. Webb, ex-senator, legislator and ordinary of Cherokee county, and the late Mrs. Leola Roger Webb, a descendant of the Roberts and McCannicks, of South Carolina. The paternal grandparents of the bride-elect were the late Henry La Fayette Shadburn, and Mrs. Arminia Light Shadburn, pioneer citizens of Forsyth county. Miss Shadburn is the sister of Miss Sara Shadburn, Miss Louise Shadburn, Miss Helen Shadburn and Miss Dana Shadburn, of Buford.

Mr. Watkins is the third son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Watkins, of Decatur. His paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Harlan Watkins, of Alabama. His maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas McKoy, pioneer citizens of Coweta county. The groom-elect is a graduate of Decatur High school and Georgia School of Technology. He is a member of the Pi Lambda Delta fraternity. Mr. Watkins holds a responsible position with the College Cooperative News Service, of Atlanta. He is a brother of Ralston F. Watkins, Thomas H. Watkins and James O. Watkins, of Decatur.

Tallulah School To Benefit From La Fontaine Revue

The La Fontaine School of Dancing will give a beautiful revue of special dances Saturday, June 9, at 8 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium, under the auspices of the Atlanta Federated clubs. The proceeds from the entertainment will be used for the Tallulah Falls school. Mrs. Norman Sharp, president, and members of the federated clubs cordially invite the public to attend so as to encourage the work for this splendid school owned by the Georgia federation, as well as to enjoy a delightful program. Admission is 50c.

Mrs. Charles E. La Fontaine, director of the school, designed the gorgeous costumes and originated and created most of the dances. The program will be varied with Grecian dances, the boleros, pantomime, tap dances, cunning novelties, charming national dances. Several exquisite numbers, both solo and ensemble, will be outstanding. The most advanced pupils taking part—Sue Downing, Martha Mobley, Mary Gannon, Elizabeth Sheldon, Anna Katherine Hollett. An afternoon of real joy is anticipated. The brilliant event features children from 3 to 14 years of age. ## McCown-Waldrip Wedding Is Beautiful Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Fay McCown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Young, and Harvey Melroe Waldrip, was quietly solemnized at 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 2, at the First Baptist church, the Rev. E. M. Petat, pastor of the church, officiating in the presence of a representative gathering of relatives and friends.

The handsome altar of the church, which was magnificently banked with luxuriant palms and ferns, was ornamented in the center with a vase of Easter lilies and Dorothy Perkins roses, flanked on each side with five branched cathedral candelabra holding slender white burning tapers which cast a soft glow over the lovely scene. The altar rail was decorated with swansons and flowering vines.

The musical program.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Helen Schaid, well-known Atlanta organist, rendered a delightful program of nuptial music, heralding the approach of the wedding party with the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin," and sustaining a dulcet-toned accompaniment throughout the impressive ring ceremony with the strains of "To a Wild Rose." Other numbers rendered preceding the ceremony were "Because" by D'Adda, and "Venetian Love Song" by Neumann. Mendelssohn's wedding chorus was used as the recessional.

The ushers, who entered first, were A. L. Hurdett, E. M. Robertson and H. C. Schroeder.

Miss Grace McCown, sister of the bride, and her only attendant, who acted as maid of honor, entered wearing a charming long sleeve model of shell pink georgette, fashioned with long blouse, artistically beaded at the neck in rhinestones, and accented with a large pink rose added charm to the lovely costume. Her bouquet was a handsome sheath of sweetest roses tied with streamers of pink tulle.

The Lovely Bride

The lovely bride, who entered alone, was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, William A. Satterwhite. She was never more lovely, her exquisite Titian beauty being enhanced by a modish model of navy blue georgette, fashioned with long full blouse and accented with a smart boat collar offset with a bow of the same material. A close-fitting light linen straw hat, slightly tilted, and a becoming model of black georgette, with a jabot, gracefully caught in at the waist, falling from the shoulder to the even hemline.

Miss Ruth Dabney Smith To Present Pupils

REGENSTEIN'S

"56 Years In Atlanta"

NOW is The time to guard against the ravages of MOTHS

Save Costly Cold Storage Charges

Mellon Institute Process of Mothproofing is GUARANTEED PROTECTION

Why pay costly storage charges on your winter coat, heavy suits, fur-trimmed coats, fur coats, rugs and upholstered furniture?

Have them mothproofed by Stoddard's and keep them at home.

The famous Mellon Institute at Pittsburgh has developed a process of real mothproofing... that is guaranteed until the article is again dry-cleaned.

Only Stoddard can give you this service—just nine plants in the whole of America, members of the Mundatechnical Society, sponsored this scientific discovery. Harmless to everything except MOTHS and moth larvae. Odorless! Colorless!

Just 75c extra above the cleaning charge on any article valued up to $50.00. On goods over $50.00 value, mothproofing is charged at 1% of your valuation.

Clearance Sale

Made Possible by Adverse Conditions

COME EARLY AND GET FIRST PICK

A late spring—rain, the national election and other adverse conditions which have made buying slow, is responsible for this stupendous clearance sale that will be a revelation to the women of Atlanta. Such values as presented in these amazing groups of dresses are not the ordinary kind of bargains but truly such rare offerings that you could not resist the opportunity of buying were you to see them. Dress manufacturers throughout the country have suffered and our buyers were able to take advantage of the situation and bring to you these higher priced dresses that are presented in outstanding groups here—all at one sacrifice price of $12.00.
Don't let this opportunity go by, thinking it to be the ordinary kind of a clearance sale, for it is not. It is most unusual. Come and see for yourself.

Miss Elizabeth Branon Weds Mr. Crockett at Home Ceremony

The impressive ceremony which united Miss Elizabeth Branon and James Crockett in marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Avery Branon, on Rosedale road Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Dr. R. L. Russell performed the ceremony in the presence of a host of friends. The beautiful improvised altar which was formed at one end of the living room was of tall palms and ferns. Two pedestal baskets held sprays of white gladioli, lilies and snapdragons, showered with satin ribbons and sweet peas. These were placed on either side of the white fourteen-branched candelabra forming the central feature of the altar. Newel posts holding clusters of sweet peas showered with satin ribbons formed the aisle and semi-circle in which the bridal party stood.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Oliver Coleman sang D'Harlot's "All For You" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mrs. Warren Masser and Schubert's "Serenade" was softly played during the ceremony.

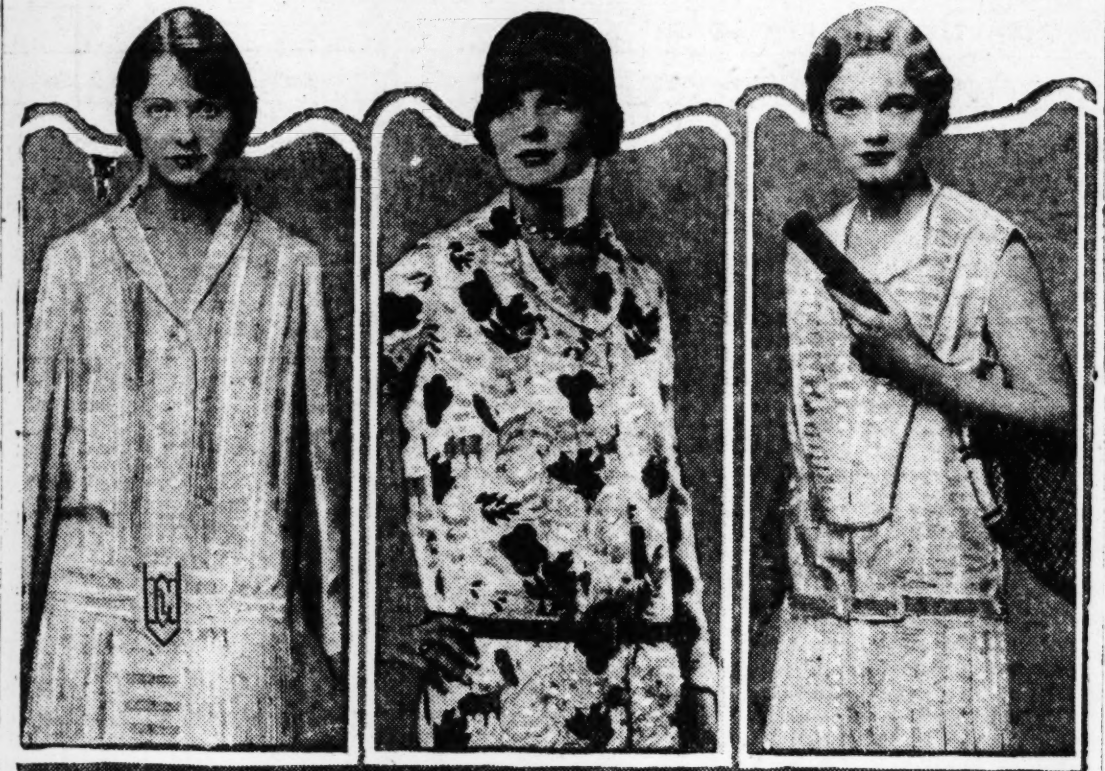

The first to enter was Mrs. George H. Phillips, Jr., and Miss Margaret Barnes carrying the satin ribbons which formed the aisle to the altar. Their charming gowns were fashioned alike of pale pink and Nile green chiffon. Their flowers were wristlets of pastel sweet roses. Miss Louise Crockett, sister of the groom, and maid-of-honor, entered next. Her gown was an afternoon model of shell pink chiffon. She wore a transparent pink hat with accessories matching. Her beautiful showered bouquet was of varied flowers of pastel shades.

The debut flower girl, little Miss Gloria Smith, preceded the bride wearing a charming frock of pink tulle and tulle. She carried a basket of sweet peas. George H. Phillips, Jr., acted as best man. Attractive Bride. The radiant bride entered with her father, Thomas Avery Branon, who gave her in marriage. She was exquisite in her wedding gown of lustrous white satin and lace. The long

Cotton Materials Stress Salient Features Of the Mode for the Summer of 1928

The above photograph presents three charming models wearing sport costumes made out of cotton fabrics, which take a leading place in the sartorial fashions of the summer season of 1928.

BY BESSIE S. STAFFORD.

Salient features of the summer dress trend into an ever-expanding realm of the usage of cotton materials, with the above trio of photographs displaying to a charming advantage its perfect adoption as to sports frocks.

Had you never given thought to including a cotton frock in your summer wardrobe, these models win instant admiration. At Palm Beach the cotton gown received the sanction of the fashionables last winter, and in this winning recognition of the smartest set in America, its prestige is well established with the coming of warmer weather. The pretty girls wearing the three models illustrating this trend are correctly costumed for tennis, golf and bridge parties, and although the material is cotton, it carries all the softness found in silk.

Designer in Gay Mood. The designer was in a gay mood when the middle frock was evolved out of gay printed chintz moire with a skirt of solid material, serving as a many-purpose costume in which to appear at all-day functions. The frock at the left is the accompanying lay-out is of a dainty striped mercerized cotton, made with pleated skirt and a belt finished in front with the wearer's initials. It is a practical example of what is proper for the golf course, and relies upon its perfect cut, style and workmanship to carry it to any daytime affairs. The figure at the right admits of no conjecture as to why the gown she wears was made sleeveless, because the tennis racket is explanatory in itself. Surely, nothing could please a youthful tennis player more than this cotton frock, with touches of smartness added in the belt and mother of pearl buckle, and the graceful turn back collar finishing the neck.

Much-Heralded Renaissance. The much-heralded renaissance of cotton fabrics has literally come into its own, sanctorially speaking this summer, for dainty, fresh costume. The modern maid and matron also slips her feet into shoes made of printed cotton fabrics. Nothing more lovely was ever beheld in Atlanta than the bouffant organza gown worn by the bride, which was made of cotton fabric which are woven to achieve the season's more feminine silhouette, with its decided leaning toward pleats and frills.

Miss Lillian Johnson Honored at Shower.

Mrs. Roscoe Allred and Mrs. Harvey Tims were joint hostesses at a miscellaneous shower at their home on Cameron street Saturday afternoon honoring Miss Lillian Johnson, a popular bride-elect.

Many Social Affairs Planned For Miss Keeney

Miss Margaret Brady Keeney, whose marriage to John Francis Hoffman will be an event of June 30, is being delightfully entertained at a series of pre-nuptial parties.

Mrs. Herbert Brown and Miss Anna Mae Cole will be hostesses at a bridge-linen shower on Saturday, June 2, at the home of Mrs. Brown in Boulevard Park, honoring the bride-elect.

Miss Mildred LaHatte will entertain at a bridge-kitchen shower at her home on Boulevard terrace Saturday afternoon, June 16, in compliment to Miss Keeney, who will be honor guest at a bridge-tee Saturday, June 23, given by Miss Cecile Cooke at her home in Decatur.

Misses Pauline Keeney and Cecil Cullen will honor the bride-elect at a bridge-tee and swimming party at the East Lake Country club, Mrs. Hubert Wood will entertain at a bridge party at her home on Woodlawn avenue on Tuesday evening, June 26, in honor of Miss Keeney and Mr. Hoffman.

The T. C. Girls' club will honor the bride-elect at a buffet supper in the club rooms, the date to be announced later. Mrs. Philip Keeney will entertain at a tulle tea in honor of her daughter Wednesday afternoon, June 27, from 4 to 6.

Misses Frances Egart and Margaret Rivington entertained in honor of several bride-elects. Mrs. Slater Marshall was hostess at a bridge-tee Saturday afternoon at her home on Peachtree road complimenting her sister, Miss Margaret Keeney. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Philip Keeney, Mrs. Allen Young and Miss Mary Brady.

Miss Chamberlain Weds Dr. Dyas At Historic Home in Cartersville

The marriage of Miss Angie Chamberlain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chauncey Chamberlain, and of this city, and Dr. Benjamin Arthur Dyas, of Atlanta, formerly of Oklahoma, was beautifully solemnized Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at "Glen Cove," the historic home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Georgia Tumlin, in Cartersville. A large number of Atlantans motored to Cartersville for the occasion, which was followed by an elaborate reception. Rev. M. A. Cooper, of the West End Baptist church, performed the ceremony, which was preceded by an appropriate musical program rendered by Mrs. J. W. Madden, Mrs. Charles Black and Mrs. George Ripley. Adding an interesting sentiment to the occasion was the fact that the wedding of the bride's mother and father was solemnized in the same room of the historic old home which is numbered among the oldest in this state.

Lovely Bride. The lovely bride was given in marriage by her father, C. C. Chamberlain, who accompanied her to the altar, and the groom was attended by his best man, Jake Chapman, of Atlanta. The bride's costume was an exquisite two-piece model fashioned of delicate yellow crepe. A dainty cream lace collar and cuffs trimmed the modest short coat. A small hat of matching yellow felt trimmed with a rhinestone ornament completed the attractive costume. She carried a large bouquet of Ophelia roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Thomas Benjamin Williams, of Hendersonville, N. C., the bride's sister, acted as matron-of-honor and was a striking figure wearing a gown of flesh colored chiffon veiling satin to match. Her dress was made along the robe de style lines and she wore a wide-brimmed hat to match draped in flesh-colored lace. She carried a bouquet of pink sweetpeas. Misses Evelyn Hardin and Hazel Meeks, of Atlanta, were the two bridesmaids and their gowns were fashioned of chiffon made similar to that worn by the matron-of-honor. Miss Hardin's gown was fashioned of orchid chiffon and Miss Meeks wore light green chiffon. They carried bouquets of pink sweetpeas and their hats were picture models fashioned of hair braid to match their gowns. Miss Georgia Tumlin, of Cartersville, who acted as the junior bridesmaid, preceded the bride and was a dainty figure wearing a frock of pastel blue chiffon. She carried a small bouquet of pink sweetpeas.

Henry Tumlin, of Cartersville, and E. M. Frelich, Jr., of Hendersonville, N. C., small cousins of the bride, acted as ribbon bearers. Both wore smart navy blue coats with white flannel trousers. Ray Williams, of Atlanta, was the only groomsmen.

At the reception which followed the marriage service, the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Tumlin, was assisted in receiving by members of the bridal party and the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain. A profusion of summer flowers gathered from the garden surrounding "Glen Cove," decorated the reception rooms.

Mrs. Tumlin wore a gown of gray lace and chiffon and Mrs. Chamberlain was gowned in orchid crepe. Dr. Dyas and his bride left in the late afternoon for a motor trip to Oklahoma. On their return they will make their home with the bride's parents on Oak street in West End. The bride's traveling costume was a modish two-piece costume made of beige colored crepe. She wore a small tan felt hat trimmed with a rhinestone ornament.

Lecture Subject Is Announced. At the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock the subject of lecture will be "The Three Fundamental Principles for Christian Healing." Robert Bryan Harrison will speak with authority, having used these principles for a number of years. A beautiful musical program will precede the address.

Georgia Garden Club Holds Meeting Next Thursday

The movement to form a Georgia Garden club will have its culmination in the initial meeting next Thursday and Friday at the Biltmore, begun under the inspiration of the Peachtree Garden club, of which Mrs. Robert L. Cooney is president, with Mrs. Charles A. Sisson chairman of the entertainments planned for the visiting delegates. Among the clubs responding are Seven Hills Garden club, of Rome, with Mrs. Thomas Berry, president; Trustees club, of Savannah, Mrs. W. W. Gordon, president; Marietta, Mrs. Mary Jones Turner, president; Savannah Garden club, Julian de Copps, president; Buford, Miss Lizzie Hamilton, president; Thomasville, Miss Irene Davis, president; Macon, Mrs. Randolph Jacques, president; Toccoa, Mrs. J. A. Crawford, president; Griffin, Mrs. Cooper Newton, president; Milton, Miss Annie Clare Bone, president; Washington, Mrs. Joseph M. Toomey, president; Tennille, Mrs. William Brantley, president; Dalton, Mrs. M. E. Judd, president; Barnesville, Mrs. J. M. Rogers, president; Concord, Mrs. T. T. Smith, president; Fairburn, Mrs. W. F. Roberts, president; Cornelia, Mrs. W. W. Chase, president; Cherokee club, of Atlanta, Mrs. Charles D. Orme, president; Druid Hills club, Mrs. Carl Lewis, president, and Primrose club, with Mrs. Edward Cawthorn, president.

Mrs. Bulow Campbell will invite the visiting ladies to be her guests for tea, after the tour of the gardens, Thursday afternoon at her home on Andrews drive. There will be a meeting at the Biltmore hotel at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, June 7, after which a luncheon will be served at $1.50 per plate. In the afternoon the visitors will be conducted on a tour of the gardens. Another meeting at 11 o'clock Friday morning will convene at the Piedmont Driving club.

A tour will be made of Druid Hills gardens, followed by tea at Mrs. Cooney's home, and Friday evening Mrs. Phinney Calhoun entertaining the delegates at a lecture showing slides of southern gardens, in which Ferrell Gardens, the home of Mrs. Fuller Callaway in LaGrange, will take a prominent part. Assisting Mrs. Sisson on her committee will be Mesdames Evelyn Harris, Frank Fleming, E. L. Cooney, W. H. Kiser, Henry Johnson, W. P. Hill, A. E. Thornton, Jr., Hugh Dorsey, Cam Dorsey, Rufus T. Dorsey, John Goldard, Edward Inman, Charles Sciple, Jesse Draper, J. E. Paulin, Samuel Inman and Nellie Hightower.

Hugh Hodgson Plays On Moonlit Lawn

A concert by Hugh Hodgson, the south's own tone-poet, is always of interest. A concert by this distinguished pianist on the moonlit lawn of "Piedmont," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright, suggests limpid, crystalline tones peculiarly suitable to the time and setting of the lovely affair.

The performance will be given at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night, June 5, under the auspices of the young girls circle of Tallulah Falls school, the proceeds to be devoted to a scholarship in the Tallulah Falls High school.

Members of the circle include Misses Jane Davison, Betty Davison, Isabelle Breitenbuecher, Leontine Mikell, Ruth Osborne, Virginia Howard, Frances Howard, Claire Hanna, Sarah Hurt, Lucile Stone, Elizabeth Phillips, Edna Belle Raine, Kitty Park, Hortense Adams, Palmer Dallas, Gertrude Harris, Elizabeth Holleman.

Virginia Torrence, Runa Erwin, Jennie Hodgson, Mrs. Rutherford Ellis.

Mrs. James Hitchcock To Be Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine will entertain at an informal tea Sunday afternoon at their home on West Peachtree street in compliment to Mrs. James H. Hitchcock, of Steubenville, Ohio, who is visiting Mrs. James T. Williams.

Visitors Honored At Piedmont Club

The at fresco dinner-dances on the terrace of the Piedmont Driving club are always popular events of the summer social season. The dinner-dance Saturday evening assembled a large throng of the club members and a number of out-of-town guests for dining and dancing on the attractively decorated terrace.

Mr. and Mrs. John K. Otley were hosts at a large party honoring Albert Heywood, of Worcester, Mass., and his two daughters, Miss Anne Heywood, also of Worcester, and Mrs. William Hann, of St. Paul, Minn. Invited to meet the honor guests were a group of out-of-town guests who were in the city for the Sims-Erbe wedding on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner Jones had as their guests for dinner Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Willett and their guest, Mrs. Sherry, of Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. De Sales Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. George Street, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Fleet, Price Gilbert and Richard Courts.

Dining with Dr. Julian Riley were Miss Catherine Murphy, Mrs. Julia Murphy Whitehead and Esmondie Brady.

Others entertaining groups of friends were Major and Mrs. John S. Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hill, Dr. and Mrs. Phinney Calhoun and E. J. Hardin.

Ann Agricola Hartman To Present 40 Pupils

Ann Agricola Hartman will present 40 of her pupils in an artistic dance recital Saturday afternoon, June 3, at Marist college hall. The program will begin at 7 o'clock. An invitation is cordially extended to all interested in classical dancing.

Among the most beautiful weddings of early summer was that of Miss Margaret Elder to J. J. Haverty, Jr., which was brilliantly solemnized Saturday evening, May 26th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling J. Elder. The lovely bride figure at the left pictures Mrs. Haverty in her wedding robes of ivory-tinted satin, tulle, and real lace. The above group includes the members of the wedding party who are, from row, left to right, Miss Edythe Coleman, Mrs. Claude McGinnis, Jr., Mrs. Watson Matthews, Miss Henriette Nolan, of Miami, Fla., Mrs. M. H. Elder, Miss Annie Lou Hardy, Miss Ellen Newell, Mrs. Russell Bellman and Miss Ida Sadler; back row, left to right, Cecil Sharp, of New York, Hugh Franklin, Jr., of Birmingham, Ala., Frank Pollock, of Birmingham, Ala.; Dana Kierease, of Birmingham, Ala.; M. H. Elder, Robert Haverty, of Memphis, Tenn.; Russell Bellman, Wallace Rustin, of Greenville, S. C., and Clarence Haverty. Master Frank McGaughey, Jr., as ringbearer, is seen in the foreground of the group. The photographs are the work of the Rogers and Farmer studio.

Tech Commencement Holds College Set Interest

Inaugurating the Tech commencement festivities, which will keep the college set busy for the next week, will be the annual senior class banquet Wednesday evening, June 6, on the roof garden of the Atlanta Athletic club. Thursday evening, June 7, the first of the series of commencement dances sponsored by the Tech Interfraternity council will be given, this being the junior prom. Bob Durant, the junior class president, will lead the grand march with Miss Margaret Anderson, assisted by Frank Wadley, vice president of the class.

Friday afternoon Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Brittain will entertain the members of the graduating class at a reception at their home on North avenue. The senior hop will be an impressive event of Friday evening, when members of the senior class will begin a new custom by wearing senior cap and gown in the grand march. Jack Holman, president of the class and prominent member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and many honorary and scholastic fraternities, will lead the march with Miss Jeannette Staples. Mr. Holman will be assisted by Peter Pund, vice president of the class and prominent member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Sophomore American

Saturday evening, the Sophomore American will be given in the college gymnasium. Warner Mizell, president of the sophomore class, will lead the grand march on this occasion with Miss Harriet Wayne and will be assisted by John Lambert, vice president of the class, and Miss Gates Eckford.

Sunday morning, June 10, at 11 o'clock, the Inauguration ceremony will be delivered by Rev. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Second Baptist church. At one minute after midnight Sunday evening, June 10, the Skull and Key society will entertain at a midnight dance at Garber hall.

The occasion to assemble a large number of college belles and beaux. Rudy Brown and his orchestra will furnish the music for this brilliant occasion. The annual graduation exercises will be held Monday morning, June 11, on the Tech campus, beginning at 9:30 o'clock with the grand march from the Tech Y. M. C. A. The faculty together with the candidates for master degrees will lead the procession followed by the members of the class according to degrees to be conferred in each school.

Dr. M. L. Brittain will be master of ceremonies. J. J. Pelley, president of the Central of Georgia railroad, will deliver the commencement address. Former Governor Nathaniel E. Harris will also deliver an address before the senior class. More than three hundred seniors will receive their degrees.

Costume Ball

Bringing the commencement social program to a brilliant climax will be the interfraternity costume ball Monday evening, June 11, at the Tech gymnasium. Walter James, president of the Interfraternity council, will lead the grand march at this colorful event, with Miss Cornelia Orme and will be assisted by Cy Saege, vice president of the council, and Miss Mary Mosley.

A large number of visiting belles will attend the whirl of festivities attendant upon the commencement. Among the fraternities at Tech which will entertain at house parties during the week at the chapter houses will be the Chi Phi, Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Mrs. Candler Honors Visitors at Tea

Mrs. Scott Candler was hostess at tea Saturday at her home on Candler street in Decatur, honoring her guests, Miss Anne Henderson and Mrs. T. B. Dunlop, of Fort Smith, Arkansas.

Pastel flowers in baskets and bowls adorned the beautiful home. Mary Scott and Annie Wilds received the cards at the door. A silver basket of spring flowers in pastel colors formed the central decorations, encircled with candlesticks holding green tapers. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames John Goodman, Henry Earleman, Armand Heulee, Curtis Thompson, Fred Brooks, C. W. Dickman, Willis Blodgett, J. T. Wilke, W. H. Mansfield, E. L. Cain, L. R. Martin, Sam Martin, Grace Harlee, Henry Cassell, C. M. Candler, Sr., D. M. Byrd, T. L. Cooper.

Rice-Nunnally Wedding Vows Taken at Presbyterian Church

The First Presbyterian church on Peachtree road presented a scene of great floral beauty when at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening Miss Charlotte Corday Rice, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Rice, became the bride of Hugh Pendleton Nunnally, at one of the most brilliant wedding ceremonies of early June.

Dr. J. Spole Lyons, pastor of the church, read the marriage service, and witnessing the ceremony was a large assemblage of representative Atlanta society.

Huge Cybodium ferns, palms and other foliage plants adorned the interior of the church, furnishing a rich green background for the white wicker floor baskets filled with white roses, snapdragons and Easter lilies. The choir loft and altar were banked with palms, against which three floor baskets filled with these lovely blossoms stood in relief. Three massive seven-branched candelabra, holding slender white tapers and rising from mounds of white flowers, were placed in front of the flower standards, floor vases filled with Easter lilies being placed at intervals on the floor in front of the pulpit.

Tall clusters of Ascension lilies marked the pews reserved for the members of the family connection.

Preceding the ceremony, Dr. Charles Sheldon, organist of the church, rendered a program of lovely nuptial music.

Wedding Attendants.
Entering the church first were the ushers, John Stewart, Charles Black, Jr., Frank Owens and John Westmoreland.

Acting as groomsmen were Burwell Nolan, of Marietta; Edward Wallace, of Nashville, Tenn.; Z. A. Rice, brother of the bride, and Katherine Elliot.

The bride's attendants included Misses Martha Bell, Edythe Coleman, Ethel Hunter and Lucy Elizabeth Harper acting as bridesmaids.

Miss Elizabeth Putnam, of Orlando, Fla., was the bride's maid of honor and she entered the church alone.

A delectable shade of turquoise green chiffon, possibly taffeta slips of the same color, fashioned the gowns of all the attendants, each one made differently to suit the type of the wearer. Fashionably draped skirts and long lines featured the lovely costumes, which were completed by Dresden shaded garden flowers arranged in Cascade effect and including pink and yellow snapdragons, lavender and pink sweet peas, sky blue delphinium, Columbia roses and white Swainson.

The attendants wore satin slippers dyed to match their gowns.

The lovely young bride entered the church with her father, John W. Rice, by whom she was given in marriage. The groom was accompanied to the altar by his brother, Charles Nunnally, Jr., who acted as best man.

Beautiful Bride.
Softest white satin combined with handsome rose point lace fashioned the bridal robes, enhancing the blonde beauty of the bride to a marked degree. The becoming straight lines of the gown terminated in a flared skirt, banded across the front with a wide insert of rose point lace. The same lovely lace formed a deep yoke in the bodice which was cut in a deep V in the back and outlined with tiny seed pearls, a graceful design developed in pearls and crystals adorning the front of the waist. An elaborately beaded panel, studded in pearls and crystals, extended from the bottom of the yoke in the back to the hemline a long train of falling tulle falling from the shoulders. Her exquisite princess lace veil, worn by Miss Catherine Raine when she became the bride of Marion Watson and brought from Europe by Mrs. John Raine, was arranged in becoming cap effect, banded across the front with strands of pearls and caught at either side of the face with small clusters of orange blossoms.

An arm bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies, showered with white ribbons completed the bridal ensemble.

Immediately following the church ceremony, a brilliant reception was held at the Biltmore hotel. The handsome Georgian ballroom presented a scene of springtime loveliness with its elaborate decorations of palms, ferns, smilax and multi-colored garden flowers in attractive arrangement.

Bride's Table.
The beautifully appointed bride's table was covered with an embroidered cloth of lace and embroidery, and held in the center an immense bride's cake, built in many tiers and decorated with white frosting and flowers. Surrounding the centerpiece was a fringe of valley lilies, white roses, chrysanthemums and ferns, the same flowers forming plateaux at either end of the table. Attractive bridal favors, attached to narrow white satin ribbons, were drawn from the cake by the members of the wedding party.

Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Rice, parents of the bride, and the members of the wedding party were Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Nunnally, parents of the groom.

Mrs. Rice received her guests wearing a delectable gown of powder blue chiffon lace. A shoulder spray of orchids completed her costume.

Mrs. Nunnally was a charming figure wearing shell pink chiffon, fashioned with the modish uneven hemline and circled in velvet of deeper shade of pink and rose. Her flowers were a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Miss Ellen Newell kept the bride's book. Misses Louise Nelson and Ida Sadler served punch from large crystal bowls embedded in mounds of Dresden shaded sweet peas.

During the evening Mr. Nunnally and his bride left for a wedding journey to New York and points of interest in Canada. Upon their return they will reside in Baltimore, Md., where the groom is engaged in business.

Mrs. Nunnally traveled in smart ensemble costume of gray bramecane cloth, the blouse fashioned of gray tulle and lace was a close-fitting model of gray ballbunt.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LX., No. 354.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 3, 1928.

Voters to Decide Heated Contests For 33 City Jobs

Only Two Days Are Left for Campaigning Before Polls Open Next Wednesday Morning.

W. C. JENKINS QUILTS RACE FOR ALDERMAN

W. Guy Dobbs Is Left Unopposed; Chief Interest Centers in Hansell-Donaldson Contest.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

With only two more weeks of campaigning ahead before 21,330 voters of Atlanta march to the polls to select officials for the 33 city positions for which nominations will be made in the primary Wednesday, candidates for the contested posts Saturday night prepared to stage one of the warmest finishes in the political annals of the Gate City.

Withdrawal of W. C. Jenkins as a candidate for alderman from the seventh ward, opposing W. Guy Dobbs, incumbent, left Mr. Dobbs without opposition, thus assuring him of re-election. It also reduced the number of city-wide contests to six—chief of construction, tax collector, marshal, electrician and alderman from the third and sixth wards.

There also are six ward contests—five for council and one for the board of education.

Hansell-Donaldson Race.

Chief interest was centered Saturday night in the Hansell-Donaldson contest for the post of chief of construction, and all candidates made bids for votes at a meeting held at the Atlanta Labor temple.

Clarke Donaldson, chief William G. Hansell's opponent, continued his attack on the record of the incumbent, saying that the "topographical map" at a cost of approximately $500,000 as a useless waste of public funds. He also reiterated his charge that the construction department can't even guess well but was forced to raise estimates of the contract price for depression of the railway tracks incident to the "action" of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts 50 per cent in the final settlement.

"A continuance of his past performance is all that the present organization promises, and so far as I am able to ascertain, they do not want to do it," the speaker declared.

Declares Maps Important.

"Mr. Donaldson is an engineer and knows that the topographical, every line and triangulation surveys to which he alludes are important in proper reconstruction of the Atlanta sewerage system, and that no more will be done," declared Mr. Hansell. "He also knows that the contract for lowering the tracks was based on unit costs and that no more was paid for the work than the contract stipulated."

"There is no word of truth in the statement that I ever supplanted white labor with negroes. My record stands for itself. The maps will make money for Atlanta. The property line map alone will pay for the three many times. United States government engineers are probably the best in the entire world, and the federal government spends more than $1,000,000 every year on topographical maps. They are necessary to proper installation of a drainage system, and the opposition knows it."

Both speakers were cheered by the large audience which taxed the capacity of the hall.

During the day candidates also attended a barbecue at the Grace Methodist church, where they spoke to voters of the fourth ward.

Third Ward Race.

Interest in the race for alderman of the third ward was keener Saturday night than ever before in the present campaign with Councilman Ben F. Huiet and Cecil V. Whiddon both bidding for preferment.

"Mr. Huiet is already a member of city council, if you elect me you will not displace him, we will serve together," Mr. Whiddon stated.

CITY ADVERTISING ADDS $21,000,000 TO LOCAL PAYROLL

New Firms Moving Here During Life of Forward Commission Give Employment to 11,726.

Healthy effect of the Forward Atlanta advertising upon industry in this city is shown in the report of the Forward Atlanta commission Saturday that $21,000,000 in new annual payrolls and employment for 11,726 Atlantans have been brought here during the 20 months of the life of the commission. The steady influx of newcomers continued during the past May, 13 new concerns having chosen this city during that period.

The first five months of this year contributed $5,161,500 to the total of new payrolls brought here, showing that the rate of increment is accelerating, according to George West, chairman of the commission, who pointed out that the monthly average so far this year is higher than either of the first two Forward Atlanta years. "The cumulative effect of the advertising is evident in this, an effect that is well-known to all experienced advertisers," Mr. West said.

"The results from advertising are proportionately heavier as the years pass. The reason for this is that many men are only half convinced in the beginning. It takes a long time to sell them an idea. Hence during the first years of the campaign we expected comparatively little immediate result. But the results were tremendous. And this year's progress is probably unequalled in the history of community promotion."

Every Atlantian Benefits. "Every Atlantian," Mr. West continued, "should realize that he is personally benefiting from this work, and should also feel it a duty as well as an excellent investment, to help sustain so productive a movement. Twenty-one million new dollars a year circulating through the channels of trade in this city of Atlanta's size must be felt by everybody. The business figures show, in many lines, that this money is creating real prosperity, new wealth for its citizens, no matter what business affiliation may be. It is evident to every thoughtful observer that Atlanta is far better off today than she would have been without the Forward Atlanta campaign to stimulate business."

Among those to choose Atlanta during the past year have been the W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing company, of Kansas City, Mo., and the W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing company, of Kansas City, Mo.

McNAB TO PLACE NAME OF HOOVER BEFORE CONCLAVE

Kansas City, June 2.—(AP)—James W. Good, convention manager for Herbert Hoover, announced definite plans today that John L. McNab, of California, would place Hoover's name in nomination at the republican national convention here.

Mr. McNab is an old friend of Mr. Hoover's and their homes in Palo Alto are only a few blocks apart.

In the early part of the Wilson administration, Mr. McNab gained wide attention, when, as United States district attorney at San Francisco, he charged that Attorney General McKelvey had ordered him to delay trial of the Dicks-Cammetti white slave case until the fall of 1913.

One of the defendants was the son of A. Cammetti, who had just been appointed commissioner of immigration on the recommendation of William Jennings Bryan, then secretary of state.

In accepting Mr. McNab's resignation, President Wilson criticized him for charging the attorney general with yielding "to rich and powerful influence."

Adjourned!

EMORY TO HONOR THREE GEORGIANS

S. C. Dobbs, Dr. M. L. Brittain and Rev. J. A. Thomas Will Receive Degrees Tuesday.

Three prominent Georgians will be presented with honorary degrees at the annual spring commencement exercises at Emory university, to be held on the campus at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. The degrees were authorized Friday by the board of trustees in their annual meeting, according to an announcement Saturday by Dr. Harvey W. Cox.

Two of the three are Atlantans, Samuel C. Dobbs and Dr. M. L. Brittain, who will receive the degree of doctor of laws. The Rev. Joseph A. Thomas, of Columbus, will be given the degree of doctor of divinity.

Mr. Dobbs, a former president of the Coca-Cola company and of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, for many years has been a leading figure in business and financial circles of the nation. He also is keenly interested in education, having made substantial gifts to Emory university and to Reinhardt college, at Waleka, where he is chairman of the board. Dobbs hall, one of the Emory dormitories, was built by him and named in his honor.

Georgia Tech President.

Dr. Brittain is president of the Georgia School of Technology. He graduated from Emory in the class of 1886 and was state superintendent of schools from 1911 to 1922.

He was elected president of Georgia Tech. He is one of the most distinguished of a group of Emory alumni who have served as college and university presidents.

Dr. Thomas, also an Emory alumnus and a member of the class of 1884, is now pastor of St. Luke's Methodist church, in Columbus, Ga. He has served many of the more important pastorates in south Georgia and is a trustee of Wesleyan college. Along with the presentation of these degrees 219 seniors will be awarded their degrees in the various departments of the university. At the same time prize awards and senior honors will be announced and conferred.

The first meeting of the commencement week takes place today when Bishop W. N. Beauchamp delivers the baccalaureate sermon in the university auditorium. On Monday more than 500 alumni, representing several classes of the university, will gather. A program has been arranged for the day including a speech by Dr. Goodrich C. White, and the alumni and senior reception Monday night, given by Dr. Cox.

On Tuesday morning former Governor Thomas G. McLeod, of South Carolina, will deliver the baccalaureate address to the assembled students and President Cox will award the degrees.

DRYS SUSPENDED FOR COLLUSION WITH BOOTLEGGERS

New York, June 2.—(AP)—Eighteen United States customs guards on duty at the Chelsea piers were suspended tonight as the result of investigation by federal agents of alleged collusion with liquor smugglers. Other suspensions are predicted soon.

Shy Japanese Co-Ed Returns To Be Bride

School Days Are Ended and Future Ruler Claims Mate.

Chicago, June 2.—(AP)—Her school days ended, a shy little Japanese girl was speeding home tonight to fulfill a romance that began when her betrothed, Prince Chichibu, her presumptive to the throne of Japan, was a college boy at Oxford. With her father and mother, Ambassador and Mme. Tsuneo Matsudaira, 18-year-old Setsu and her brother and sister entered tonight for San Francisco to sail for the Orient.

Late in September the empire of the rising sun will observe a week of feasting and rejoicing while royalty and nobility participate in the ancestral rites that will unite the mikado's brother in marriage with the pretty daughter of the ambassador to Washington.

Three years ago Setsu came to America. She was 15 then. Today she was returning, the graduate of an American school and the proud but reticent bride-elect of a prince. Chichibu is said to have fallen in love with the girl while attending Oxford and to have arranged her adoption by a Japanese peer to disfigure the traditional objection to a prince wedding a commoner.

"He visited our home in Washington when he was in America a year ago," Miss Matsudaira explained. She shyly admitted she did not know when they would be married, but her mother spoke for her. It would be late in September. There would be a trousseau, of course, to be bought in Japan. And a honeymoon. Would the princess come back to America?

"She has been very happy here," Miss Matsudaira said. "Perhaps she will come for a visit. We cannot tell now." The suggestion that her daughter's marriage to the heir apparent would make her an "ambassador of good will" from America brought a quick smile and nod of assent from the Japanese ambassador's wife.

Nothing even remotely resembling postponement was contemplated, they said as they started for Wheeler field, 24 miles away, to inspect the great plane which had borne them through day and night to a safe landing on the first start of their 7,800-mile flight to Sydney.

Flight Is Possible.

Captain Kingsford-Smith, commander of the flight, indicated that there was a possibility that the Southern Cross might take wing to the southward tomorrow. He said that the plane, with 300 more gallons of fuel on board than was carried from Oakland, could easily cover the distance of 3,138 miles to Suva, Fiji. The plane left Oakland with 1,200 gallons aboard, and arrived here with fuel to spare.

Charles Ulm, who, with Kingsford-Smith, pilots the giant plane, explained that his determination to maintain the original schedule was an outgrowth of "criticism in Australia for our long delay in getting started."

Non-Hop Fliers.

"Some of our critics have even been so kind as to dub us the 'non-hop' fliers," continued Ulm, "but we have paid no attention to that sort of stuff and have batted right along."

"We have gone into this thing as enthusiastically as is humanly possible and we are planning 100 per cent performance all the way to our destination," Ulm explained that since the fliers began planning the flight to Australia they had investigated all trans-oceanic air trips, both successful and unsuccessful.

"There was some lesson to be learned from every flight, and we purposed to learn it before we took off on our own account," he added.

Conference Is Held.

A conference was held by Ulm and Kingsford-Smith last night with Edwin H. Bryan, of the Bishop museum here, concerning the islands lying south of Hawaii on the course to Suva, Fiji.

Until 1 o'clock this morning the fliers questioned Bryan and examined all available photographs having a bearing on this stage of their journey, particularly those of the islets of Canton and Enderbury. These coral atolls dot the Pacific 1,822 miles south of Honolulu and 1,216 miles north of Suva. They are directly along the course of the Southern Cross and offer a haven in event of forced landings.

SOUTHERN CROSS TO FLY MONDAY

Trans-Pacific Crew Is Impatient To Resume Australian Flight as Home Folks Nag.

Barking Sands, Kauai, T. H., June 2.—(AP)—The monoplane Southern Cross landed here shortly before 6 p. m. today from Wheeler field, Honolulu, to prepare for its flight to Sydney, Australia, by way of Suva, Fiji islands.

Honolulu June 2.—(AP)—Determination to resume their long flight to Australia "not later than Monday" was expressed today by the four men of the monoplane Southern Cross, who arrived here yesterday after riding through the air 2,400 miles from Oakland, Calif.

Nothing even remotely resembling postponement was contemplated, they said as they started for Wheeler field, 24 miles away, to inspect the great plane which had borne them through day and night to a safe landing on the first start of their 7,800-mile flight to Sydney.

Flight Is Possible.

TAMMANY CHIEF SAYS CLUB CARES NO MORE FOR POLITICS

Senate Committee Gets Numerous Shocks; Told That Smith Is Merely Private Inside Hall.

New York, June 2.—(United News.) The senatorial committee investigating the campaign expenditures of the major presidential candidates, perjured through testimony concerning Governor Smith's affiliations with Tammany hall and Secretary Hoover's relationship with Wall Street today and emerged at eventide as wise as when it began.

George W. Olvany, sachen of Tammany hall, hurried back from a fishing trip to tell the investigating committee that his organization was a benevolent society and had not spent anything at all for the candidacy of Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Big Man—Big Cigar.

A big man with a big cigar, Olvany parked the corona as he entered the ballroom of the Pennsylvania hotel, where the hearing was in progress. He spoke in such a quiet voice that listeners leaned forward to hear him expound the primer of Tammany, in which the governor ranks no higher than a private.

"Our society has not received any contributions for any candidate and never does," said Olvany. "The democratic committee has not made or accepted any contributions. No one has been asked to contribute."

Received Three Letters.

"I have received three letters, one containing a $5 contribution and two containing $1 contributions. I turned them over to the local Smith campaign committee."

As the big, low-voiced sachen continued to answer questions, an unspoken question as to what possible benefit membership in Tammany hall could hold for any aspiring young politician pervaded the chamber. Olvany spoke with great seriousness and the attitudes of his hearers was one of astonishment.

Olvany was firm and careful in drawing the line between the democratic committee, which has headquarters here of rent in Tammany hall, and the Tammany society. He calmly told the senatorial probes that the democratic committee occupied Tammany hall only "by sufferance," leaving to be inferred that Tammany might decide to make the committee seek other quarters at any minute.

Bought Postage Stamps.

"The only expenditures we have made are for postage stamps, answering letters about Governor Smith's record and the history of the Tammany society," Olvany said.

"I know of no political organization known as Tammany. I know of a Tammany society."

MELLON'S WIFE QUILTS NEW HUSBY IN RENO DECREE

Reno, Nev., June 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Nora Lee, of Littlefield, Conn., former wife of Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, has been granted a divorce here from Harry A. Lee, whom she married in New York in 1923. Mrs. Lee was Nora McMullen, daughter of the founder of a great brewing company of Dublin, Ireland, when she married Mr. Mellon in 1900, the wedding taking place at her father's estate in Hertfordshire, England. They were divorced in 1913. They had two children, a son and a daughter, the latter Mrs. David K. Bruce, whose wedding in Washington, D. C., last year was a brilliant social affair.

STRUCK BY AUTO, MAN NEAR DEATH

E. F. Davis, of 182 DeGress avenue, was carried to Grady hospital with a fractured skull and broken leg Saturday afternoon shortly after he had been struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. W. E. Belyeu, of 250 Winter street, Decatur, as he was crossing DeKalb avenue at Hurt street. Staff physicians at the hospital pronounced his condition as critical.

Mrs. Belyeu, who was released on $1,000 bond on a charge of reckless driving, told police that she was driving east on DeKalb near Hurt when Davis ran out into the street with his head down, and was struck by the right rear fender of the car. Davis was carried to the hospital in a Henry's ambulance as Mrs. Belyeu went to police headquarters with Patrolman F. C. Tuck, who preferred charges against her.

Early Saturday night, Davis was removed to Davis-Fischer sanatorium where surgeons operated in an attempt to save his life. He showed slight improvement after the operation, according to hospital attendants.

Neglect Woman Charged.

Her skull fractured and several ribs badly crushed, Annie Parks, 35-year-old negro, address unknown, was in custody about 8 o'clock Saturday night Saturday night after having been struck down by a speeding motor car on Ponce de Leon avenue near Oakdale road about 8 o'clock Saturday night. Police are attempting to establish the identity of the driver, who did not stop his machine after the crash, according to police reports.

The woman was walking across the street when she was struck by a large sedan which was headed east on Ponce de Leon and traveling at an excessive speed, according to statements by witnesses. The car skidded on the wet pavement after striking the woman, turned around several times, ran partially up on a lawn and then roared off toward Decatur, leaving the crushed body of the woman in the street, it is said.

Call Officers Paul Williams and W. M. Hollister estimated and had the woman rushed to Grady hospital. Attaches at the hospital held little hope for her recovery.

Injured in Collision.

Miss Mary Mitchell, of 178 Hurt street, was bruised and slightly lacerated when she was struck Saturday afternoon when an automobile she was driving south on Allen avenue collided with another motor car, operated by J. P. Murray, of 550 Mayland avenue, at the intersection of Allen and Dill avenues. Call Officers Paul Williams and W. M. Hollister investigated both charges of reckless driving were made against both drivers.

In Miss Mitchell's car were Miss Jimmie Mims, of 1507 Morningside drive; Miss Margaret Coyne, of 1151 St. Charles place, and Miss Wynne Reynolds, 1149 St. Charles place. None was injured.

Slightly injured Saturday when the automobile in which she were riding collided with a machine driven by E. Marvin King, Fulton county tuncant officer, four young children of Mrs. A. B. Bailey, of Hapeville, Elbert, Evelyn, Dorothy and Margie, were treated at Grady hospital and allowed to return home. The mother was driving the car at the time of the accident.

Those who are fostering the farmers' protest almost to a man are for Lowden. They regard Hoover with particular disfavour, insisting that he has worked against the farmer in the past and has given support to Coolidge in his rejection of the McNary-Haugen bills.

This impending clash between the Hoover and the Lowden anti-Hoover forces, both over a farm relief platform declaration and a movement is on foot for the coming convention delegates to press on the convention delegates the contention that only a man to their liking can carry the farming states of the west in the coming election.

There is a wide range of speculation as to the outcome. Hoover's supporters appear confident, while Lowden's contend they will have the upper hand before the convention is over. And with it all, "draft Coolidge" talk is heard in many quarters; friends of Curtis of Kansas are endeavoring to make him as a compromise candidate in the event of a deadlock; and forecasts of possible winners embrace a field of "dark horses" which includes Dawes, Hughes and others.

One thing is almost a certainty—the battle will be over two weeks.

'Never Too Late To Learn,' Jacobs Goes Back To School

BY HELEN AND OLIVE PARISH.

"It is never too late to learn, thinks Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, Oglethorpe university president, who will attend a series of lectures to be given by Dr. James E. Roth during the Oglethorpe summer session which opens June 5.

The course to be taken by the university president is on the technical side of literature, and is appreciating the American novel.

Dr. Jacobs is the author of two novels, "Sinful Saddy" and "The Law of the White Circle," and is very deft at the art of brushing up his style, so that his next novel may be written in the newest and most acceptable fashion. Dr. Jacobs, long a champion of free speech and free thought, sees nothing amiss in the unconventional procedure of a college president studying under one of the professors in his own university.

Dr. Roth's course in the novel will be further unique in its subject matter, presenting a thoroughly modern approach to the ultra-modern novel. According to Dr. Roth, most textbooks on fiction are obsolete because they are written in a style as old enough to get into a textbook, it's out of date," says Dr. Roth.

"Instead of studying the records of the past and imitating what has gone before, we will try to find out the present trend of the novel. One of the principal purposes of the course is to sidestep all rubber-stamp formulas, and to induce the students, including Dr. Jacobs, to write unlike all predecessors, without becoming eccentric."

"The world's first novelist, an Egyptian stone cutter, wrote the first fish story, with no models to copy from. The author interviewed a fabulous fish and expected everyone to believe him. It is not necessary to disregard all previous writings, but it is important not to become absorbed in a dead past."

The course will be given six hours a week throughout a 10-week Oglethorpe summer session, and will cover in retrospect the past 50 years of American novel-writing.

STUDENTS RESENT SLAV SURRENDER

Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, June 2.—(AP) Precautions that make Belgrade resemble a city under siege have been taken by Jugo-Slavian authorities in an attempt to forestall further demonstrations of anti-Italian feeling. All public assemblies are forbidden, the populace has been cautioned against walking on the main streets, and pairs of armed sentries are posted in every block of the principal thoroughfares. Students especially are enjoined to remain indoors at noon and in the evening.

King Alexander returned to his interrupted sojourn in the country today and this was taken as an indication that the government believes the storm over the Nettuno treaty, granting Italians right of land ownership on the Adriatic littoral, has subsided. There is plenty of evidence, however, that the public feels more than ever that the cabinet intends to force the treaty through parliament.

This was accentuated today when the government gave out its reply to Mussolini's note. This reply promised full compliance with Italian demands for punishment of officials who failed to suppress the disorders in various parts of the trikingdom. The opposition has stigmatized it as "pusillanimous capitulation" to Italy.

The government today sentenced 36 students to 15 days' imprisonment. This brought a prompt attempt at mutiny from their fellows, but a treble guard of gendarmes around the universities kept them in check. The student body received a telegram from students of Innsbruck university assuring them that the Tyrolians were "solidly with them" in their fight against Mussolini. "The time will soon come when we shall all win our lost freedom," said the message.

In a turbulent session of the national legislature, spokesmen for the peasant party implored the government to try to reach some sort of a compromise with Italy on the most objectionable clauses of the Nettuno treaty. The government leaders, however, evaded the question.

G. O. P. EXPECTING BITTER WRANGLES

hence. The convention gets going a week from Tuesday. Republicans in the past always have striven to avoid an over Sunday adjournment. Even if a deadlock develops, it is a safe bet that all hands will turn a wheel toward getting out of Kansas City before the week-end, and if that happens the republican lineup for the coming campaign will be known to the world at least ten days in advance of the opening of the democratic convention in Houston.

Die-Hards Keep Fighting.

The republicans are not the only ones who have troubles on their hands. Still a bit scared by the drawn-out convention battle at Madison Square Garden four years ago, the democrats will assemble in Houston June 26. Whether their convention will be a get-together or lead to a parting of ways is one of the many political developments the future holds in store.

Smith got off to an early start in the amassing of delegates, many of them tied to him under definite instructions from the folks at home. Even his foes concede that he has a majority, or close to that, in the bag, but they are rallying their forces to keep him away from the necessary two-thirds majority at the Grant park riding circle, while at the lower right is a scene of the Piedmont swimming pool. At the extreme left and in the background is the new band stand at Piedmont. Photos by Walter Davis, Staff Photographer.

Smith's opponents are attempting to strengthen their lines so they would hold against a strong tide toward him, his own men are directing their campaign to win early but to avoid a deadlock, as they see it, would stir up bad feeling; that might work to the disadvantage of the party nominee in the campaign and is one of the things to be avoided.

Smith Beats Reed Four Times.

On the other hand, Smith's foes who say they will fight it out to the finish, see in a deadlock their only chance to block him, and are going along, on the theory that if one develops much of the strength Smith has accumulated would dissipate.

During the past week the last of the republican delegates were chosen. West Virginia furnishing another "favorite son" Hoover battleground.

This time the commerce secretary was aligned against Senator Goff, who got the best of it on the preferential primary voting. Hoover's managers, however, laid claim to nine, possibly ten of the state's delegation of 19, and pointed out that the primary result is not binding on delegates.

On the democratic side, Smith and Reed of Missouri, who has announced that he is in the democratic presidential race to stay, fought it out. Smith getting the best of it on the preferential vote, but Reed claiming a majority of the 16 delegates.

It was the fourth primary in which Smith and Reed were pitted against each other. In none of the three contested republican primaries in which he was entered did Hoover clash with Lowden, although in a number of states which select delegates by conventions, the Hoover and Lowden forces fought it out.

G. O. P. Contests.

Of the 1,100 democratic delegates to the Houston convention, 130, or those from six states, have not yet been named. All of these states are in the south, where the Smith foes are most active, except Indiana and the delegation of 30 from that state who go to Houston pledged to Evans Woolen, an Indianapolis banker.

One of the preliminaries that must be attended to before the republican convention gets under way is the hearing in Kansas City beginning Monday of contests involving 73 delegate seats. All of them except the two from Porto Rico come from the south, which, in the past always has given republican

Great Crowds Throng Five City Parks To Enjoy Initial Swim of 1928 Season

Atlanta's biggest play season opened Saturday with thousands enjoying the occasion. The first dive into Maddox park lake is shown in the top picture at the left. At the top, right, are Misses Martha Perce, L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks and playgrounds; Miss Mearle McEachern, Miss Willie Lee Andrews, John A. White, councilman from the fourth ward and chairman of the parks committee of city council; Miss Verna McNew, Alderman Oscar H. Williamson, of the ninth ward and a member of the parks committee of city council, and Miss Dorothy Taylor. The inset shows Miss McEachern riding one of the bucking water horses at Piedmont park. refuses plenty to do just before conventions. Democratic contests probably will be few and far between. One has shaped up from the Canal Zone, where one set of six delegates is instructed for Smith and the other uncommitted. In the District of Columbia one delegation of six pledged for Smith already has been named, and the "A. Smith" club there is sponsoring a move for the selection of a rival set of delegates.

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—All the 1,080 delegates to the republican national convention where a majority of 645, will be required to nominate, have been selected. Contests have been filed involving 73 seats.

Of the 1,100 votes in the democratic convention, 964 have been allotted, leaving 136 from six states to be designated. Two-thirds of the 1,100 votes will be needed for nomination. The total after each candidate's name in the table below represents delegates instructed, pledged or claimed for him by his political managers, and not the number conceded to him by his opponents. Claims over-ripe in a number of states.

J. Ben Daniel, Steve C. Glass, J. M. Pirkle and L. D. T. Quinby, aspirants for the marshal's post, either spoke or were represented.

J. M. House and Ed. A. Gilliam, opponents for alderman from the 12th ward, vied for honors.

Tax Collector's Race.
Marvin Roome, F. R. Florence and R. A. McMurry, candidates for tax collector, also were present or represented and their cases were laid before the audience.

Mr. Jenkins' formal statement of withdrawal follows:

"In withdrawing my name as a candidate for alderman from the seventh ward, I wish to state to the voters of the city of Atlanta and to the many friends who have pledged me their unwavering support and influence that I do so with great reluctance.

"Owing to the fact of the tremendous increase of business of the firm of which I am employed and the anticipation of additional duties that will fall upon me and the fact that my church and religious duties consume a large part of my time I have reached the conclusion after mature deliberation that even though I feel and believe that I will be elected in the primary of June 6 my time for the next year will be limited. When I next enter the service of the citizens of Atlanta I desire to be in a position to give them by undivided time and attention.

"I want all my friends to know that I am deeply grateful for the support and influence rendered in my behalf and I shall ever hold their loyalty sacred, and that such friendships are priceless and cannot be forgotten."

Atlanta—that is, the populace—Saturday took a dip at the informal inauguration of the biggest holiday of the year—the official opening of the city's five municipally-owned and operated swimming pools and other park and playground recreation concessions.

Despite the advent of cool weather and threatening clouds, youthful and gleeful Atlantans swarmed to the water resorts, and large crowds participated in a swim for the first time this season.

Formalities were dispensed with and speeches eliminated by an edict of Councilman John A. White, of the fourth ward and chairman of the parks committee, however, attended the opening in order to supervise the start of what is declared will be Atlanta's most successful play season.

The large new pool at Maddox Park has not yet been completed, but the old pool has been pressed into service temporarily. The bathhouse, however, per cent, and flour 60 per cent. Sugar showed the greatest gain among exports.

Chinese Using Telephones.
Tientsin, China, June 2.—(AP)—Five hundred telephones have been received here for shipment to Newchwang, Fengtien province, where telephone service is to be instituted. It is planned also to extend the long distance service between Tientsin, Shanghai, and Tsingtao to Chefoo and Lungkow. Service between Shanghai and Nanking started recently.

All candidates have been invited to speak at all the meetings.

5 TO FACE TRIAL HERE THIS WEEK

A trial of interest scheduled this week before Judge Moore is that of Miss Iva Nell Bain, who will be arraigned Thursday on an involuntary manslaughter charge.

Miss Bain is said to be the driver of an automobile which ran down and killed 5-year-old Harry Edwin Garner on April 4, at the Cheshire Bridge road and Piedmont road intersection.

In the indictment, it is alleged Miss Bain approached the intersection at an illegal rate of speed, meanwhile conversing with a companion, which is alleged to have diverted her attention from the road in front of her.

Two trials of wide-spread interest are on the superior court calendar for trial June 12. They are the W. D. Manley case involving the failure of the Bankers Trust company, and the Walter E. Harwell case, in which Harwell is accused of assault with intent to murder.

Manley, president of the trust concern, is under a nine-year sentence imposed in November, 1925. His appeal from this conviction is pending in the supreme court, where it arrived in July of last year.

Harwell, city marshal of Atlanta, is accused of having shot at Steve Glass, his deputy, during an argument in the city hall last March. The bullet went wild.

Preparatory to the trial Tuesday of J. S. Slicer and T. J. Norman, president and treasurer, respectively, of the defunct Colonial Trust company, Solicitor General John A. Boykin Saturday was preparing the state's case against the bankers, who face 17 indictments growing out of the failure of their concern in September, 1926.

The case is set by special order before Judge Virlyn B. Moore, in Fulton superior court. Slicer and Norman are to be tried on an indictment charging fraudulent insolvency, unless unexpected developments alter the state's plans.

FARMER MURDERS FAMILY OF THREE

McAlester, Okla., June 2.—(AP)—A triple slaying in a remote section of the Jack Fork mountains 50 miles southeast of here was revealed today. The victims were Mrs. Myrtle Lee Jackson, 15-year-old wife of Ed Jackson, mountaineer, and two of his children, Orvil, 10, and Abbie, 10.

Officers were conducting a search for Jackson, who it was learned, had been missing since last Tuesday.

The bodies of Mrs. Jackson and the boy were discovered by a prohibition agent yesterday. The girl's body was found today by Pittsburg county officers who went into the hills to investigate.

Neighbors said the attentions paid by the younger Jackson to his mother had aroused the jealousy of his father. The elder Jackson was married about a year ago.

The bodies were found in a corn field which the mountaineer had been plowing. A "moonshine" still for which the prohibition agent was searching was located today by the county officers.

Neighbors recalled hearing shots about 5 p. m. Tuesday, and said Jackson was at liberty on bond awaiting trial in district court on a charge of cattle stealing.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

The Virgin Queen. By Harford Powell, Jr. This is another 1928 book that will be widely read. First, because it is an interesting story and second because the author is a popular writer among the citizens of the world.

Mr. Powell bases his story on the chronicles of two nations: Barabam, who is in the high monkey monk class of America's modern advertising becomes not only tired of writing and talking optimism, but grows serious over the future of his country. So he shakes the advertisement with which his whole system had become saturated, caring very little whether the candy corporations and the home-made bakeries have an attractive page for Sunday's paper or not—the important move is to fly across the deep blue sea. In Warwickshire he has an ageless estate and with his daughter settles down to the solitude of a quiet life out of the reach of the advertiser.

But there seems to be no rest for Mr. Dunn for in some way he is caught in a tangling scheme with the whole British realm. It seems that Shakespeare, accompanied by Shakespeare, steps forward through the veil of the age and in a ghostly voice tells the American advertising man that he has been recognized.

The story is full of satire and plenty of fun and a jolly good time as the reader follows Mr. Dunn from the United States to England. The profession of advertising on which it is based furnishes interest for a gay and entertaining story. (Little, Brown & Co.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.
Don Careless. By Rex Beach, whose stories readers never pass by for they are always full of interest, action and plot. Don Careless is the nickname of Francisco Suarez—as he is known in the Latin republic—the leading interest of the story is his love for Valencia Montes, and the uprising, this lasting for weeks—being the "touch and go" of civil war and martial law. The story is filled with thrills and dashing moments.

Birds of Prey. This is the other story included in this book by Rex Beach. It is also full of thrills, it being an adventure story located near New York. The story goes that a beautiful estate, the property of a Wall Street man, who kept it filled with guests, proves to be almost like a feudal castle of the Middle Ages. It finally is brought to the attention of the district attorney, and he himself becomes a guest there. It is a thrilling story which is woven around several interesting characters. If you want a vacation experience and a trip that Rex Beach has mapped out for you. (Harper & Brothers.)

What Women Fear. By Florence Tiddell. What is it that women really fear? There are a few lines by Rudyard Kipling in the front of the book which should be read before turning to the first chapter, which gives the reader an introduction to the characters, seemingly alive, as they openly gossip about this, that and the other at the Antea club. (Lippincott's Book, Philadelphia.)

To Kiss the Crocodile. A story by Ernest Milton. The introduction is entitled "Myth." The old stories are some of them like high-stories rich gold cups—richly dull with age—fitfully gleaming where the gracious figures of gods and demigods and satyrs, nymphs and fauns catch the flicker of fire. But some of them are empty—of the stories that have never been told. There they stand, the dinner for their emptiness, twined with the golden garlands, brushed by the jigs of ghosts.

Preparation should always be spelled with capital—no man or woman should venture out into the world without preparation for the duties of life—to be received through education and training—then an army should go out to fight the greatest military enemy of the world.

There is no place in the world perhaps where there have been so many boys and girls from the quiet life of the small American town than to Paris and perhaps to London, there to enter the world of music or art, wholly unprepared, and yet expected to devote time to the study that is to make him a star in his profession.

This volume contains the story of the boy who was sent from Canterbury to London into a life for which there had been no preparation. It is a story of something more than following the career of an every day girl or boy whose life is filled with longings of pleasure and perhaps nothing more. (Harper & Brothers.)

Blood Money. A narrative of to-day. By Blair Cunn, who writes, "Russia is ruled today by an oligarchy made up of deported undesirables from the civilized nations of the world. It comprises ex-convicts, neurotics, morons and drug addicts." (S. G. Culler, publisher, Washington.)

Cambrie Tea. By Rebecca Lowrie who writes in the front of her book: "The house of my childhood is not a house of many mansions. It is a house of little rooms, whose doors are ready to swing open at the gentlest touch, sometimes even to swing open of themselves." (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

WHO IS HARFORD POWELL, JR.? Mr. Powell is a well-known citizen. He was born in Philadelphia. He prepared for college at St. George's school at Newport, of which he is now a trustee. He was a member of the Harvard class of 1900. He was president of the Harvard Lampoon and secretary of the Advocate. He won the Lloyd McKim Garrison prize in 1907 and the Sargent prize in 1908.

From the following paragraph you will note that he was a strong believer in diversification: At one time associated with Vogue, then editor of Harper's Bazaar. During the war he was a captain in the air service. He not only organized but commanded the 192nd Aero Squadron at Kelly field, and afterward became post adjutant.

OLD SORES. Since 1850 ALLEN'S LIVERNE SALVE has been used by more than all other salve combined. It is the most powerful salve known. It is the only salve that draws out the poison. It is the only salve that cures. It is the only salve that is safe. It is the only salve that is cheap. It is the only salve that is available. It is the only salve that is effective. ## Plenty of Rain Is in Prospect For This Week

Spring thundershowers, one of the sure signs that wet weather is just about here, are forecast for today by F. von Herrmann, United States meteorologist, while the official weekly forecast from Washington calls for an entire week of showers.

Now is the time when you can expect thundershowers frequently, the weather man said. The showers today are expected to be of the light, passing type, familiar to Atlantans as the variety of weather which always catches one unawares without an umbrella or raincoat.

Temperatures during the week will be near normal or slightly above, according to the weekly forecast. However, temperatures are expected to hover between 65 and 86 degrees, the same as Saturday.

FENCE BUILDING OCCUPIES SOLONS

situation is critical from the partisan standpoint.

Twenty democratic senatorial terms expire next March and only 12 republican terms are left. The burden is on the democrats to hold their own and, if possible, win a majority.

Hope for Smith. Perhaps the strongest hope that is banked on the almost sure candidacy of Governor Smith for president, is that he will be able to save Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Copeland, of New York; Edwards, of New Jersey, and Bayard, of Delaware; perhaps pull through a democratic senator from Connecticut and possibly help Senator Wheeler, of Montana, to get a reelection.

It is not believed that he could aid sufficiently to save Senator Wheeler, of West Virginia; Lister, of Ohio; elect a successor to the late Senator Ferris, in Michigan, or help over a democratic senator in Illinois.

In fact it is going to call for a veritable democratic landslide over the country to secure a party majority in the next senate.

House Otherwise. In the house it may be otherwise. Very few democrats seeking election or reelection to the house are going to depend upon the presidential ticket for success. Almost to a man they are agreed that candidates for the house must, very generally run "on their own," taking into account their individual popular strength and the particular temper of their local constituencies.

For instance, there are democratic members from Ohio and Indiana who tell me that Governor Smith's presidential candidacy would hamper rather than help them in their districts.

Prohibition Question. No matter what he may hold or say on the prohibition question they will have to run as "demonstrators" in order to have any show of reelection. There are probably four-score other democratic congressmen who will have to do likewise.

As congressmen and correspondents make their get-away from here and head toward the conventions, the conviction grows that Hoover will win at Kansas City and Smith at Houston.

At the treasury department I was shown a list of "united-down" delegates outside of New York and Pennsylvania, which demonstrates that the 70 votes of Pennsylvania alone can produce the nomination of Hoover on the first ballot.

Will They Do It? When this intimate Mellonite was asked "Will they do it?" he earnestly and sentimentally replied "they will." Subsequently a Pennsylvania republican congressman from the Pittsburgh-Mellon area, who knows his political onions, said the same thing. Indeed, few informed political observers here doubt that Mellon can nominate Hoover and will do it.

Secretary Mellon quite recently expressed his fixed opinion that most of the "wets" in the country would vote a Smith presidential ticket. He says the plea made to the democratic party that "Smith cannot do anything as president to nullify or destroy prohibition" through the repeal of the Volstead act, which would be a relief, will be a relief to the New York World that the more that idea is propagated by the Smith people the worse it will be for Smith.

Smith Called Wet. Very few persons think of Smith other than as a wet and if he is not to be put out on the wet candidate, he will be the candidate of political mudwings only.

The campaign ahead is developing into one of the largest spring propositions that politics has afforded for a generation. Those who find excitement in election here are finding out that the campaign is the likeliest to be that more money will be wagered on this election than the parties will have to spend on behalf of their national tickets.

A Pullman smoking car rumor that Governor Smith, directly or indirectly, had advanced $25,000 to a democratic chairman in "a sage bush state."

Miller's description of himself as head of the Civic League of Albany, and a man who had given the past 20 years of his life to moral reform work, did not save him from Chairman Steiwer's rebuke that he was "imposing on the committee."

Miller could not remember the name of the state or the name of the recipient of the money after he had received vividly how the "chairman" had moved from a $2 hotel to an expensive one after breakfasting with Governor Smith.

Hague Denies Receipts. Miller said the man who related the story to him on a railroad train en route to Washington was former Governor Sulzer, of New York. The committee made an unsuccessful attempt to subpoena Sulzer.

During Miller's rambling testimony, he said that he was not supporting any particular candidate for president but was "opposed to any candidate who is against legislation to correct the morals of the people."

Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, said he had received nothing for the Smith campaign. He said he had formed a club of 75,000 Smith supporters. Expenses of the club amounted to about $700, he said.

Harris, the Florida Hoover delegate, said he had been solicited for more money because the Florida delegates were unable to pay their expenses to the Kansas City convention. He said he had agreed to finance the expenses of a Mrs. Overman, of Daytona, who did not feel financially able to make the trip. Harris said he had given $6,500 to promote an uninstructed delegation, which had promptly been instructed by the Florida convention for Hoover while his position as delegate was being contested. The senators laughed.

To Quiz Sulzer. After the hearing, the committee decided in executive session to hold hearings in Washington on Monday and Tuesday.

A subpoena was issued for former Governor Sulzer of New York. Witnesses who had been subpoenaed to testify here and did not do so were ordered to appear in Washington.

The committee also decided to request statements from Senator Sackett, republican, Kentucky, and Representatives Brand and Burton, of Ohio, about the broadcast circulation of speeches they had made in congress.

has consolidated its Chattanooga and Macon offices, to serve the same territory for Atlanta. B. Bessley is manager of the new Atlanta office and will be responsible for the sale, in seven southeastern states, of the sewer pipe, fines and other products made by the company.

A metropolitan touch is added to Atlanta by the advent of Brinks Express company, which operates armored cars for the carrying of large pay rolls and other valuable shipments. A. H. Lewis is manager of the Atlanta fleet, which will be in operation shortly.

Atlanta's growing importance as an advertising center is evidenced by the establishment here of an office of the Quality Group publications, representing Review of Reviews, Atlantic Monthly, World's Work, Golden Book, Scribner's, Harper's, Architecture, Country Life, Garden and Home Building, and House Beautiful. Virgil V. Evans, well known in Atlanta publishing circles, is in charge of 12 southern states.

The A. P. W. Paper company will serve five southeastern states from Atlanta in the future, with the establishment here of an office from which its paper towels and other products are to be distributed, under the direction of E. H. Durbin, M. D. Dunbar, associate managers.

The Chicago Association of Commerce has established what is claimed to be the first branch office in alien territory of any chamber of commerce. Colonel F. H. Miller, who will be in charge, with offices in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce building, is established here for the purpose of fostering trade and good will between the two sections.

The St. Louis Malleable Casting company, Southern States Equipment company, Lapp Insulating company, Burney Engineering company and the Hydrol corporation, as well as electrical engineering specialties, will be distributed to the south from Atlanta by the newly-established office of D. W. Steir.

The Textile Electric Sign company, manufacturers of Neon signs, will serve the southeast from its new Atlanta office, of which S. H. McCullough has charge.

Others included in the May increment are John F. Class Health Furniture, Coral Gables company, the National Aniline and Chemical company, the Portable Self-Serving Store and the Star Paper Fastener. The Cuban consulate, announced recently, completes the tally for the month.

RUSSIAN PHILOSOPHER TO LECTURE TONIGHT
Dr. Chaim Zhitlovsky, internationally-known Jewish philosopher and student of political economy, will lecture in Atlanta at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Jewish Women's club, corner of Washington and Clark streets. Dr. Zhitlovsky is on a tour of the United States and is being brought to Atlanta under auspices of the Jewish National Workers' alliance.

One of the leaders of the Russian social revolutionary party, the noted scholar was associated with General Kerevsky in overthrowing the czarist regime and later in Kerevsky's attempt to prevent the bolshevik party from gaining control of the country.

He will speak in Yiddish Sunday on the subject, "Whither Russia." Another lecture will be delivered by him Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock.

STATE HOTEL MEN TO MEET JUNE 7-8

LaGrange, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) What is expected to be the largest and most enthusiastic convention ever held by the Georgia Hotel Association, will be the summer meeting of this organization here Thursday and Friday.

The Atlanta Hotel Men's association will be represented by a delegation of 20 and W. C. Royer, president, will deliver the response to the address of welcome.

Two of the main addresses at the convention will be by Atlantaans, Thomas D. Seals, certified public accountant of Seals & Pennington, of Atlanta, who will speak on Thursday afternoon, on "Hotel Accounting, Records and Audits," and on Friday morning Lester W. Cole, of the Calvin Stanford Agency, will speak on "Hotel Advertising and Publicity."

Another Atlanta who will take part is Preston Arkwright, Jr., attorney for the association, who will discuss "Laws For the Benefit of the Traveling Public Applicable to Hotels."

One of the principal features of the meeting will be the tour through the Valley Rug Mill, of LaGrange, as guests of President Cason Calloway, who make rugs for hotel use.

TWO CANDIDATES TO RUN FOR DEKALB TAX COMMISSION

Decatur, Ga., June 2.—(Special.) Two candidates, both of DeKalb county, have announced for the office of tax commissioner and assistant tax commissioner. They are W. H. Bond, who will make the race for the commissioner's post, and Homer H. Howard, to run for assistant.

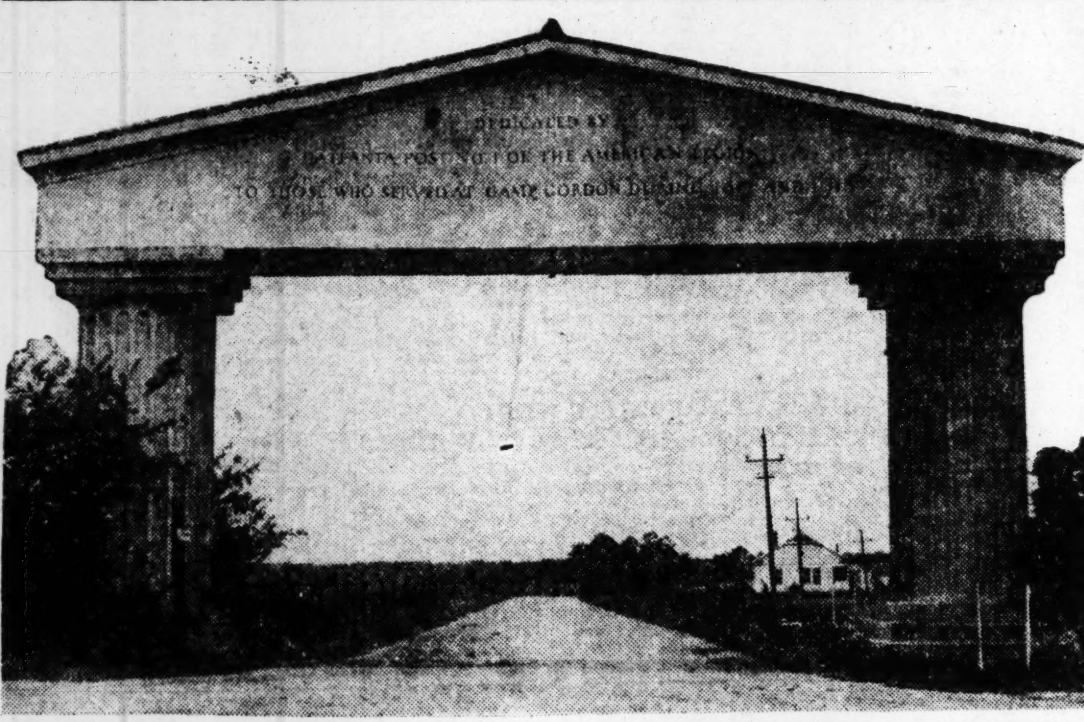

Mr. Bond is a native of Lithuania and has been tax collector of DeKalb county since 1920. Mr. Howard, at present assistant tax receiver, lives at Decatur.

The office of tax commissioner was created recently by DeKalb county, after abolition of the posts of tax collector and receiver.

The Rev. R. A. Edmondson, pastor of the Epworth Methodist church, is in charge of the meetings, which will continue throughout the week, with services at 7:30 o'clock every night. Plans for erection of a church on the site of the tent are being formulated.

Festival Contest Winners In Rotogravure Section Today

In the rotogravure section of today's Constitution are shown photographs of three Georgia girls who won first, second and third honors in the Constitution's contest to select a sponsor for Georgia to serve at the annual Rhododendron festival to be held at Asheville, N. C., June 4 to 9.

Miss Frances Phillips, of Louisville, Ga., winner, is shown in two photographs while photographs also are published of Miss Emma Clinton Thomas, of Atlanta, and Miss Frances Felton, of Montezuma, Ga., winners of second and third honors, respectively. These girls were selected from a field of pretty, popular and attractive girls who won places in the semi-finals.

Miss Phillips, the winner, is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Phillips, of Louisville, Ga. She was educated at Randolph-Macon college, Virginia, and is popular in social circles throughout the south.

The winner of second honor, Miss Thomas, is the daughter of Dr. E. B. Thomas, of Atlanta. She is a student at Lucy Cobb school of nursing at that institution. She formerly was a student at the North Avenue Presbyterian school.

Miss Frances Felton, winner of the third honor, is the daughter of Jule Felton, prominent lawyer of Moultrie, Georgia, and was nominated as a candidate by the Kiwanis club of Montezuma.

The winner, Miss Phillips, will go to Asheville Monday to represent Georgia at the Rhododendron festival. She will appear as one of the guests of honor at the Rhododendron ball and also at a social event which will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cecil, "Biltmore" near Asheville. Sponsors from fifteen other states will attend the festival, which is one of the most colorful events of the North Carolina resort section.

The Constitution conducted the contest at the request of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce. More than 200 nominations were made. The judges were Mrs. Virginia Hoffman Warren, past president of the Atlanta Junior League; Miss Margaret Nelson, president-elect of that organization; and Mrs. Rix Stafford, head of the woman's department of The Constitution.

VANDERBILT ESTATE WILL BE OPEN TO PUBLIC
Asheville, N. C., June 2.—(Special.)—The vast rhododendron gardens of the Biltmore estate, famous country home of the George W. Vanderbilt family, will be open to the public during the week of the Rhododendron festival, which will be held at Asheville, June 4 to 9.

water sports and water pageant, the Carolina carnival, the pageant of the states and the brilliant Rhododendron ball. Railroads and hotels are offering rates to the public during the festival period.

Songs and Dances.
The songs and dances of the mountain folk will be featured as one event of the Rhododendron festival, which will be held at Asheville, N. C., during the week of June 4 to 9.

Groups of mountaineers will compete for the square dance championship of western North Carolina. A huge combined mountain string band, made up of many expert mountain musicians, will furnish music for the event. The dancers will perform on an elevated platform which will be erected in the center of Pack square at Asheville.

The date chosen is the evening of Tuesday, June 5, and over a dozen communities near Asheville will send delegations of picked dancers to compete for the prize which will be awarded to the best group competing in the event.

Work to Be Exhibited.
Songs and dances which had their origin in England before colonial days will be on the program of the evening. The ancient customs and dance tunes have been preserved in pure form by the mountaineers. The mountain songs and dances will be held under the direction of C. H. Bartlett, of Asheville.

The handicraft of mountaineers will also be exhibited during the festival week. Homespun cloth, baskets made from white oak and from reeds, pottery modeled from the native clays of the region, toys carved from the soft mountain woods and souvenirs made from the tough wood of the rhododendron, looked rugs, hand-woven coverlets and scarfs, hand-forged decorative objects made by native smiths and many other products of the mountain cabin homes will be placed on display in the Grove arcade in Asheville during the week.

A feature exhibit will be a handloom and a group of spinning wheels and potters' wheels all in action, and operated by native craftworkers. The various mountain schools and institutions will also enter exhibits of craftwork manufactured by mountaineers. The Cherokee Indians of the reservation near Asheville will exhibit baskets, beadwork and other items made by the Indians.

The events of the festival will include many other items. The coronation of the king and queen, the Rhododendron pageant, water sports, golf tournaments, tours of the rhododendron flowering areas, a Carolina carnival, and the Rhododendron ball are principal events of the week. Thousands of visitors from all parts of the south will visit Asheville during the festival.

SENTENCE OF DEATH FOR NEGRO UPHELD

Tallahassee, Fla., June 2.—(AP)—Roosevelt Rullard, negro, must die for the slaying of Henry Walker, another negro, the state supreme court held today. The court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court for Duval county in Rullard's case. The opinion was made by Louis W. Strum.

The killing of Walker took place in October, 1926. The conviction in the lower court was attacked on allegations of insufficiency of evidence and the overruling by the trial judge of objections of the defense against certain remarks of the prosecution delivered to the jury.

Chicago Party Sails To Seek 'Cradle of Race'

New York, June 2.—(AP)—A Chicago expedition sailed on the Majestic today for a two-year search in southwest Africa for "the cradle of the human race."

Its equipment will include two 50-ton motor trucks, fitted with caterpillar treads for driving over desert sands and refrigerators operated from the drive shafts.

Ethnological, geological, medical and photographic experts make up the expedition, which includes Dr. Will J. Ameron, Chicago dental surgeon and big game hunter, who is financing the expedition; Professor R. L. Mangrum, University of Texas geologist; and Dr. C. Ernest Cade, who headed the Denver African expedition in 1925-26.

The expedition has booked passage from Southampton to Cape Town on the steamer Kenilworth Castle, sailing June 15. From Cape Town the party will travel 1,200 miles northward into British Bechuanaland, the heart of the pygmy bushman country.

Dr. Cade said he believed he may find the "cradle of mankind" in the land now inhabited by the bushmen. The Kalahari desert, where they make their home, is about 1,200 miles northeast of Cape Town. The region has been generally shunned by explorers because of tales of the inhabitants' cunning and cruelty.

Dr. Cade, who has previously visited the bushman country, said they more closely resemble the ape than any known human species.

"Skulls very likely a million years old, more ancient than the ape man of Java, have been found near this region," he said. "From the standpoint of living races, the story we have to tell is just as interesting as the archeological or the prehistoric. The ruins of the pygmy are eight inches longer, proportionately, than those of a normal man."

"This is very significant when we reflect that the gibbous was stretched up as a man with his hands still on the ground and the gorilla half way up with his knuckles still on the ground."

Dr. Cameron plans to study the teeth of the pygmy bushmen in hope that they may throw some light on the evolution of modern man.

FISH PROTECTION AIDED BY COUNTY LOCAL OPTION PLAN

Excellent results have been obtained in Georgia in protection of fish through the use of the "local option plan" under which 100 counties of the state, through grand jury action, have declared a two-month closed season on fishing during the spawning season, according to a statement made public Saturday by the state department of game and fish.

Discussing results the statement said: "This year, through the recommendation of local grand juries, an even 100 counties in Georgia carried into effect the 'local option' law prohibiting fishing in any water some eight months in which fish commonly spawn."

"Last year the law, then a new one, was effective in just about 50 counties and the results were good. The expected reluctance to observe it on the part of the every-day fisherman did not assert itself, but, rather, cooperation in its purpose was almost immediately observed in the majority of these communities. Unquestionably this effect came very largely through inclusion of the necessary recommendation on the part of the grand jury in that body's report to the court in the county. It, therefore, was in the nature of 'home rule' so to speak, a regulation applied locally by the home folk."

CITIZENSHIP ESSAY
PRIZES AWARDED

Completion of the essay contest on "Citizenship," in which Carlos Lynes, of Boys' High school, won the first prize of $10, according to announcement Saturday, is regarded as adding impetus to the study of citizenship in the high schools.

The idea of holding the essay contest was conceived by Mrs. B. M. Smith, chairman of the citizenship department, fifth district council of the P. T. A., and received the support and endorsement of the school officials and a number of pupils entered the contest. The reading of these essays and the final judging of them was done by a committee of which Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, was chairman and composed of the following members: Mrs. Marvin Underwood, Mrs. Samuel Inman and Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, first vice president of the Georgia League of Women Voters.

The winners in the contest were: Boys' High school—Carlos Lynes, first prize, $10; Joe Rankin, second prize, $5. Commercial High—Jerome Davidson, first prize, $10; Isaac Ashendorf, second prize, $5. Special contest for boys of foreign parentage, Paul Witte, first prize, $10; Chris Boorstin, second prize, gold pencil.

Fulton High school—Tony Pierce, first prize, $10; Florence Ballard, second prize, $5.

The donors who made these prizes possible were Mrs. Samuel Inman, Miss Eleanor Raoul, the Atlanta Georgian, Dr. Joseph Jacobs, Sears, Roebuck & Co., G. F. Willis, Commercial High school and the Loftis Jewelry company. Mrs. Smith Saturday expressed her appreciation of these prizes as well as of the splendid cooperation she received from the judges, the teachers in the schools and the interested persons. She stated that a real impetus had been given to the study of citizenship by this contest.

INCREASE SHOWN
SALVATION ARMY

An increase of 404 offers of old clothing, broken furniture, rags and paper made over telephone Ivy 2224 during May as compared to April was announced Saturday by Staff Captain W. H. Range, of the Salvation Army, as the response to the army's telephone campaign for increased support for the men's social service center.

Telephone contributions increased from 1,073 to 1,477 while night's lodgings provided for stranded men increased from 1,476 to 1,976.

The army sends for old material on telephone notice to Ivy 2224 and gives employment in repairing it to men who are temporarily unemployed as a result of illness, accident or other misfortune.

NEW TRIAL PLEAS
SET FOR NEXT YEAR

Waycross, Ga., June 2.—(Special.)—Hearing on the appeal for a new trial for Malcolm Morrow and Homer Simpson, Camden county bandits under death sentence for the murder of A. A. Paylor, captain of the State Bank of Kingsland last February, will be held in Jessup on Saturday, February 3, was announced by counsel here today.

The hearing was set for next February 2 in Brunswick but the change in time is made at the request of counsel in order that more time may be given for the preparation of briefs. The hearing will be before Judge J. H. Thomas, of the Brunswick circuit court, who sentenced the two bandits after they were convicted in Glynn county superior court.

Simpson and Morrow were moved from the Waycross jail two weeks ago after they attempted to break jail here and they are being held in the Chatham county jail at Savannah.

WILD WEST RAIDS
ARE ELIMINATED
IN G. O. P. PARADE

Kansas City, June 2.—(P)—Two more details of the republican national convention program have been settled. There will be no wild west stage coach holdups to startle delegates and the Longfellow club will have representation.

In planning festivities for the evening of June 10, a series of wild west stage coach holdups was arranged as an added attraction for an otherwise orderly parade. A description of how the Indians and plainsmen expected to battle caused committeemen to cancel this event. They believed such a demonstration might have an undesirable psychological effect.

Intention of at least four unusually tall persons to attend the convention was revealed in an announcement by a hotel that it had that many requests for seven-foot beds. The requests came from the east.

COOLIDGES LEAVE
ON "MAYFLOWER"

Washington, June 1.—(P)—President and Mrs. Coolidge left Washington on the yacht Mayflower for a week-end cruising trip down the Potomac. Ambassador Morrow, a white house guest, was among those whom President Coolidge had invited to accompany them.

The other guests were Assistant Secretary of State Oids and Mrs. Oids, the solicitor general of the United States and Mrs. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. MacCracken and Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns.

Booklet Expected To Boost Movement
For Soldiers' Home

Impetus to the movement to establish a branch of the National Soldiers' and Sailors' Home in or near Atlanta is expected to result from distribution of several thousand copies of a pamphlet on the project, which have just come off the press, according to announcement Saturday by Sam C. Crane, who has directed its publication.

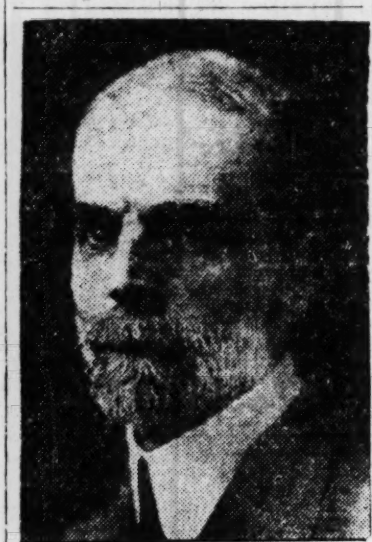

This 40-page pamphlet contains resolutions, letters and editorial comment endorsing establishment of the home for veterans of all wars in this vicinity, as well as other detailed information on the government's undertaking.

According to Mr. Crane, who is secretary of the National Soldiers' and Sailors' Home committee, sponsoring the movement, 4,000 copies of the booklet already have been printed. The pamphlets are to be mailed to all members of congress and various military organizations.

200 Georgians Will Attend
Baptist Meeting in Toronto

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON,
Editor of the Christian Index.

The Baptists of the world are now turning to Toronto, Canada, where, on Saturday, June 23, the fourth Baptist world congress will convene at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, in the large auditorium in Exhibition park. Dr. Edgar Young Mullins, of Louisville, Ky., is president of the congress and will call the meeting to order and preside throughout its sessions until his successor is chosen on Friday, June 29.

DR. EDGAR Y. MULLINS,

The first session of the congress was held in London in 1905. It was organized at the instance of leading Baptists throughout the world who for a number of years had sought to bring together the various Baptist groups throughout the world in a voluntary organization for fellowship and inspiration. The leading spirits in organizing the congress in the United States were Dr. J. N. Preston of Kentucky, Dr. W. W. Landrum of Georgia, Dr. J. B. Gambrell of Texas, Dr. A. T. Robertson of Kentucky and Dr. Robert H. Pitt of Virginia.

When the first congress assembled in London in 1905 they chose for their president Dr. Alexander MacLaren, then world famous as a Baptist preacher. The London meeting was held in Exeter hall. The next session was held in 1911 in Philadelphia. Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur, then pastor in New York city and later in Atlanta, was elected the second president of the congress. The third session of the congress would have been held in 1917 but the world war prevented such gatherings and it was not until 1923 that the third session was held. This session was held in Stockholm, Sweden, and had the largest attendance of any of the sessions, several thousand Europeans being present. Dr. John Clifford of London had been elected president, succeeding Dr. MacArthur, who died before the Stockholm meeting. At Stockholm, Dr. E. Y. Mullins was chosen as president.

Meets Every Five Years.
The congress meets every five years and the fourth session, soon to meet in Toronto, is the second time the congress has come to North America. It is expected that the attendance at Toronto will be even larger than at Stockholm, though the attendance of the more remote European and Asiatic countries will likely be reduced because of the general economic conditions obtaining in those countries. Russia, for example, had a large delegation at the Stockholm meeting, but it is not likely that

BARKER WILL PRESIDE AT SECRETARIES MEET

Benjamin S. Barker, executive vice president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, will leave next Saturday for Asheville, N. C., to preside at the sessions of the convention of the Southern Commercial Secretaries' association.

BENJAMIN S. BARKER.

sociation. Mr. Barker is president of the association and one of its oldest members.

Frank K. Shaw, secretary of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta chamber, and Miss Louise Marchman, of the office staff, also will attend the convention. Mrs. Barker will accompany Mr. Barker. The party will motor to Asheville over the Southern Appalachian highway.

The business sessions of the convention will be held June 10 to 13, though many of the visitors will arrive on Sunday, June 9.

The organization is the oldest association of commercial body secretaries in the United States. It has members representing almost every important chamber of commerce and similar organization in the southern states. Besides President Barker, its officers are R. B. Beal, of Spartanburg, S. C., first vice president; William Holder, of Tulsa, Okla., second vice president; and J. A. Galloway, of Greensboro, N. C., secretary. There are state vice presidents from fourteen southern states.

On next Sunday afternoon the secretaries will be guests of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce on a motor tour and at a reception. On Wednesday afternoon they will be given a luncheon at Grove Park Inn, by F. L. Seely, its proprietor and a former Atlantan. The annual southern products dinner will be given on Wednesday evening at Kenilworth Inn, official headquarters.

The secretaries will discuss various phases of chamber of commerce work, building up memberships, attracting industries, mapping out programs for work and civic development. The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will make an exhibit of the literature used in its national advertising campaign.

ANNUAL BARBECUE
IS SET FOR JUNE 16
BY LAWYERS' CLUB

Plans for the annual barbecue of the Atlanta Lawyers' club on June 16 to be featured by an elaborate entertainment program were announced Saturday by Ernest C. Bell, chairman of the entertainment committee. The affair is given each year to create good will and fellowship among Atlanta attorneys. In addition to the members a large number of guests, prominent in civic affairs, are invited. The barbecue is regarded as the outstanding event on the calendar of the Atlanta Lawyers' club.

Among guests who have signified their intentions of being present at the outing are Governor Hardman, Judge Searcy, of the Flint circuit, and Judge Hulseboson, of the Stone Mountain circuit.

Three Mines Closed.

Pittsburgh, June 2.—(P)—The Bertha Consumers Coal company today announced the closing of three mines in an effort to solve the problem of over-production in the bituminous industry. The action was in line with the policy of the Consolidation Coal company, which announced recently that some of its mines would be closed down and work concentrated at other plants.

BOND COMMISSION
OF KNIGHT TRACT

The city bond commission has approved purchase of another important parcel to be included in the site of the new million-dollar city hall. It was learned Saturday. The parcel of real estate, known as the Knight property, cost the city $75,000, and is located at Central and Trinity avenues. The commission also approved the several construction projects, including the allocations of $10,000 for the Chosewood park sewer, and $50,000 for the Andy park sewer system. C. Pittman's bid of $18,792 also was approved, and this firm will install the Browning street sanitary sewer. G. Lloyd Precher, architect for the new city hall, was authorized to draw plans for library shelving in the various new buildings.

The Air Waves.

BY THE DIAL TWISTER.

The atmosphere of summer will be appropriately introduced by the Stromberg-Carlson Minstrels into their first summer program Tuesday evening from 6 to 6:30 through WSB and the Blue Network. Besides "In the Good Old Summer Time" and "Down on the Farm," other old favorites will be sung by the male quartet and played as violin and vibraphone solos.

The program comprises the following numbers: "Treasure Chest of Memory," sextet; "In the Good Old Summer Time," quartet; "Down on the Farm," quartet; "Old Black Joe," vibraphone; "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet," quartet; "Janita," quartet; "Andantino," violin; "Secrets," quartet; "The Old Oaken Bucket," quartet; "Smiling Through," quartet.

The Ipsan Troubadours have the honor to announce the marriage of Sweet Lorraine on Wednesday evening, June 6. The wedding will take place at 7 o'clock at WSB and associated stations of the Red network. Music will be furnished by the Ipsan Troubadours, whose string section will play the pre-ceremony "Oh, Promise Me," and whose ensemble will provide the "Honeydew March." After the reception, the bride and groom will leave for their honeymoon "Down in Old Havana Town."

The Troubadours will tell the story of this musical romance in the following numbers: "Smiling Through," Lorraine; "The Man I Love," "Dawn of Love," vocal specialty; "The Bells Are Ringing," vocal specialty; "I'll Be Doggone Happy When the Preacher Makes You Mine," "When We Are M-A-D-D-L-E-I-E-D," "My Heart Kept on Speaking of Love," "Oh, Promise Me," (string section), "Forever and Ever," "Honeydew March," "Down in Old Havana Town."

"Love's the Things," a WLS production, featuring Miss Eugenie DuBois, prominent Broadway actress, Harry Roman, and Miss Frances Watson, will be the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation feature over WLS Monday night between 9 and 10 o'clock. Miss DuBois recently appeared in support of Lionel Atwell in his tremendous success, "The Outsider." She was also a feature of the original cast of George M. Cohan's "So This Is London," and until her visit to Atlanta was one of the principals of Robert Mantell's famous Shakespearean Repertory company of New York City. Preceding the play, Paul and John, "The disciples of harmony," will give their usual request program.

Lovers of old-time fiddlin' music will have the opportunity of hearing Earl Johnson and his Dixie Emmentainers, who will share the hour with Bruce Wagner, singer with ukelele, Wednesday at noon. Saturday morning Paul and John, "The disciples of harmony," will entertain the Junior R. F. D. club members.

The star lists of Broadway, played by the two Kings of Syncopation, Phil Ohman and Victor Arden, and sung by the inimitable quartet of the String Singers, will feature the special "Guest Program" of the Seiberling hour Tuesday evening. Aerials should dance, loudspeakers should howl, and even radio sets be thrilled to their very batteries when the great revelers of the piano open this Seiberling musical jubilee. Radio fans seldom get a chance to hear such a combination of talents. And to make certain that joy will be unconfined, the singers have selected a program that should stir feet wherever there are feet to stir. If it has a climax, it is a brand new arrangement of Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue," which will be sung by the Seiberling quartet to the accompaniment of two pianos under the rhythmic fingers of Ohman and Arden.

The broadcast of the Emory Glee club over the NBC network, with Byron Warner as guest soloist, will come to Atlanta through WSB. It was announced Saturday in New York. The Blue Chain will be hooked in on the network Thursday at 4:30 o'clock, Atlanta time.

Brunswick Traveling Representatives Meet Here

Traveling representatives of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company, covering the states of Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina and Florida, have been in attendance at the quarterly sales conference conducted by the local distributing branch of the Brunswick company. Those in attendance were M. B. Duke and A. J. Allen, operating in Georgia; A. L. Branch, Jr., and J. T. Neisler, operating in Alabama; George W. Laurie, of Florida; and Max I. Golden, of South Carolina.

The local branch reported favorable activities throughout the territory under its supervision, and plans are under way for one of the most successful years of the company. Special features of the conference included "Record Sales Talks," by E. D. Eads, of the record promotion department, and "Collection and Credits," by R. T. Sims, local credit manager.

All southeastern sales activities are under the jurisdiction of P. W. Lantz, Atlanta branch manager, and F. S. Binger, district sales manager.

Plans have been made to open the broadcasts at 11 a. m. to continue until adjournment, each day. While no definite arrangements have been made for night sessions, if there are any, they also are expected to go on. Scheduled programs are arranged to meet all contingencies.

After the convention numerous radio addresses by various candidates are expected to be added to the interest in the campaign.

Reception was under unusually favorable circumstances. The PCJL Quorum preceded his identification with "hallo" and gave the wavelength as 31.5 metres. When speaking in English he asked that American listeners send a written report on the quality of reception, more especially on the subject of fading, of which there was very little.

A new outfit weighing 85 pounds is being tried by the government's aeronautics service. So far the range seems to be a little under 2,000 miles for telegraph and about 600 miles for telephone. These distances are considered too short, but for the moment the principal effort is to make sure that the transmitter is kept in the air and get work satisfactorily.

KHJ, Los Angeles, reports the receipt of letters from Tahiti, South Seas islands, and Rotorua, New Zealand, saying that signals from that station had been picked up there. The Tahiti fan used a superheterodyne, while the other set was a five-tube.

Investigation has determined that listeners recognize the station to which they are listening almost as often from the voice of the announcer as the call letters.

Where three stages of audio amplification are used it is advisable to about 200,000 ohm variable resistance across the secondaries of the first two transformers. These will aid in suppressing distortion and oscillation.

WMAQ, Chicago, began service over a new 5,000 watt transmitter June 2. The operating plant is located at Elmhurst, 17 miles from Chicago. The opening program is to continue over seven hours.

Band concerts by the Goldman band in New York city are to be broadcast on a wider scale this year. The first is to be on June 17. Both WJZ and WPAF and stations have made preparations to put the features on the air.

Often the fan desires to test the practicability of inside antenna. The simplest way is stretch a wire across several rooms and tune in. Such an aerial, as a rule, lowers the volume, but is excellent for local reception.

With a good receiver some distance may be logged. After the test satisfies the listener that the aerial will perform with average results, it may be placed behind the moulding. Insulated wire, such as lamp cord, should be used.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the need for a proper ground connection. The experimentally inclined have found that often two or more grounds increase the strength of distant signals almost as much as does another stage of radio frequency. One of the best grounds may be made by burying a sheet of copper several feet under moist earth, care being taken to make a connection to the metal which will remain constant over a long period.

Associated Press Radio Editor. New York, June 2.—(AP)—The world is moving toward television—how fast only time will determine.

Much must be learned and done before this newest form of radio art can be brought into step with the sound broadcasting. Yet scientists are working long hours in an effort to perfect the radio moving picture, added to a certain extent by amateur experimenters.

Like other forms of radio, the amateur is taking an active interest in television. At every opportunity he is contributing his small part toward the ultimate result. Parts may be available within a short time for the home experimenter, and if he takes to moving picture transmission as he did to sound broadcast the day that television is as much of an actuality as music from the air may be much closer than present developments seem to indicate.

While the picture transmitting apparatus is somewhat complicated, the receiver is comparatively simple. It generally is attached to an ordinary sound set. It contains receiving tubes and a light sensitive tube which changes the electrical impulses into light rather than sound.

Below is a diagram of a simple receiver.

Seek Six Exclusive Channels To Carry Foreign Programs

EUROPEAN BROADCASTS AVAILABLE NEXT WINTER

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—Progress made in radio indicates that European programs will be available to America next winter. Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, chief broadcast engineer of the Radio Corporation of America, has informed the Federal Radio Commission.

Contending that the early assignment of short wave lengths is necessary for international broadcasting would be exclusive, not only for the United States, but for the world.

"International relay broadcasting channels are useless if their frequency assignment is not an exclusive one inasmuch as they must reach distant stations with a clear signal," Dr. Goldsmith said.

"If the commission is not prepared to give an exclusive assignment on these six requested frequencies, the Radio Corporation would necessarily desire to alter its requests for international relay channels by moving them from the so-called broadcasting into the bands open to point to point services. In these service bands it is understood that the assigning of exclusive frequencies on a world-wide basis is an accepted principle."

Relay broadcasting is a point to point telephone service requiring an almost perfect channel, at least 20 kilocycles wide, for both the modulation side bands. Dr. Goldsmith says. The frequencies requested are 17,700, 18,340, 17,710, 17,710, 9,540, 9,510 and 6,010 kilocycles.

election of this nature in Georgia requires that a majority of the registered voters must be polled and that in order to carry such an election two-thirds of those voting must be in favor of bonds.

EDITED BY RICHARD CLARK

67 GRADUATED AT STATE STREET

Sixty-seven sixth grade children of State Street school were given certificates Thursday morning at Barnett church, J. W. Maddox, school commissioner of the fifth ward, making the presentation.

A committee from the P. T. A. was in charge of decorations and the pretty interior was a bower of roses when the big class began its procession. Mrs. G. W. Cranford, president of the P. T. A., playing the grand march.

The following program was presented: Miss Mamie L. Pitts, principal of the school, presiding; prayer, Rev. George W. Sheffer; "State Street, I Love You," class song; salutatory, Columbus Gentry; boat song, class; delivery of certificates, J. W. Maddox; valedictory, Clifford Nesbit Bullard; presentation of prizes to Roy Beavers, Aubrey Dye, Ford Hulsey and H. Penn, Jr., who completed six years without an absence; farewell song, "How Can I Leave Thee," class.

Ponce de Leon Sixth Graders Give Program

The sixth grade of the Ponce de Leon school held their graduation exercises at the school at 10:30 Friday morning.

The stage was decorated with baskets of daisies, the handles being tied with green and white bands.

The sixteen girls were dressed in pastel colors and carried old-fashioned bouquets of pastel sweet peas and ferns.

The exercises opened with a prayer, after which the salutatory was given by Elise Foster. Louise Trotti read the girls' class history, which was loved by Harry Danforth giving the boys' class history.

Mrs. Julian Harris, sixth grade teacher, played the accompaniment for the class song.

The class poem was read by Mary Ruth Harrell. Ruth Parker read the girls' class prophecy and Steve Braumlett the boys' class prophecy.

Another class song was sung after which the will was read by Albert Benham. Mary Florence Lasseter read the valedictory after which the certificates were presented by H. B. Adams of the board of education.

School Leaders Address Class At Moreland

Commencement exercises of Moreland school presided over by Miss Olivia Taylor, president of the graduating class, were held on Thursday morning in the school auditorium. R. H. Whiting is vice president and occupied a place on the stage. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, in a short address, urged the children to guard their health during the summer and to return to school in the fall, with dental and medical certificates.

He also urged joining the summer reading circles. Miss Postell, superintendent of elementary schools, spoke to the boys and girls of the value of the summer months, if spent in a wholesome manner. Reading good books, said Miss Postell, "is the big tool that modern life demands."

George J. Powell, president of the board of education, then delivered 81 certificates of promotion to the eighth grade boys and girls who enter Bass Junior High school next fall.

The stage, with its decorations of spring flowers, was a beautiful setting to the exercises which followed.

A party to the graduating class concluded the entertainment.

We had a large number of visitors for open house day last Friday and everybody had a happy time.

High four-one had a lovely exhibit of cotton, wool, silk, rubber and leather, correlated with the study of their book, "How We Are Clothed." All of the grades had programs in their rooms.

Mrs. Faver's high five enjoyed a lovely picnic in the park last Friday and everybody said they had a fine time.

Mrs. Elsas, of the Junior Red Cross, came to see us and brought with her a wonderful exhibit of articles sent by children of America through the Red Cross. There were all sorts of interesting things, many of them made by the children themselves. The embroidery, the wood carving, the wooden shoes from Holland and the woven shoes from Belgium were very interesting.

The high six children are thrilled over going to junior high school but there is a little sadness mingled with the joy for we hate to leave our teachers and friends at Moreland where we have been happy for the last six years.

White Rabbit Visits Spring Kindergarten

The children of Spring Street school have had a very fine and progressive year and hope that everybody will stay well and be at school next year.

High six students were graduated Thursday. Mr. Hancock was the speaker and delivered the certificates. All children of the class were graduated, numbering 47.

High five has been very much interested in their studies during the year and are sorry to leave.

High four is very proud of John Wallace, who has been neither absent nor tardy the whole year.

Billie Carroce, of high four, left last week for a trip abroad. His class hopes he will have a nice trip. High three had a very enjoyable picnic last Friday at Brownwood. The grade wishes to thank the mothers who took them to and from the picnic.

Jane Kershner, of high three, has been neither absent nor tardy the entire year.

Sara Dunbar and Marion Browning, of high two, have been neither absent nor tardy this year.

High two won the prize for having the P. T. A. picture most. They had it every time but one.

The kindergarten had a white rabbit to visit them.

A Message From Superintendent Sutton

June 1, 1928.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

How happy you are when vacation has come. I can see you in a thousand places in Atlanta, playing on the streets, going to the swimming pools, riding into the country and enjoying your happy vacation days. I wish to thank each and every one of you for the thousands and thousands of things which you have done to make the Atlanta public schools a success this year. The entire school system is operated for your benefit and we have been delighted that you have felt that it belonged to you. Schools are not run for parents or teachers, but they are conducted for you as boys and girls of the high schools and elementary school. I congratulate you on the fine year's work which you have completed, and I trust that this summer will bring to you all the happiness which you desire. Let me suggest to you several ways in which you can spend your leisure time:

1—We must spend much of our time out of doors. You need the sunshine and the fresh air, the good exercise that comes from outdoor activity.

2—Let me insist that you do not play and run all the time. There must be rest periods. There must be times when we sit down and read or work with our hands. The boys have an opportunity to do all types of construction work and the girls to sew and to assist in household work. So often our boys and girls exercise too much. You must remember that you have been sitting in class rooms and being quiet a part of each day and it will not help you now to run and play the entire day. A little rest each day will make you enjoy your play all the more.

3—In the third place I wish you to see to it that you safeguard your health. Keep up the rules and regulations which have been laid down for you during the year at school. Eat the proper food; eat it regularly. Do not eat candy and trash between meals. See that your teeth are brushed, your nails are cleaned, your bodies bathed and all the health rules which you have learned are carefully followed. I wish you to come back to us stronger and healthier and better.

4—In the fourth place, I beg of you that you learn to read and enjoy reading. I hope every single boy and girl will read at least one good book each week of vacation. Many schools are forming reading clubs, and the Carnegie library is working to assist you with your reading program.

5—In the fifth place, I might suggest to you to avail yourselves of the many opportunities to visit the country, and to visit places of interest during the summer.

Last of all I wish to say that every boy and girl must visit a good dentist and a good physician during the summer and have examinations made, and bring us in September your certificate for perfect teeth and your certificate for good health.

Yours for a happy vacation,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Elementary Supervisor Sends Pupils Message

To pupils of upper grades:

Vacation is nearly here! It is a splendid time to do the big thing you have been longing and planning to do for the past months.

While you are in the mountains, on the farm, at the seashore, or enjoying other places, remember that all will be interested in hearing how you are spending your summer.

What newsy letters could be written to your family and friends who are not with you? How your classmates will enjoy your most thrilling experience? Your happiest day? Your description of a wonderful waterfall, a glorious sunset and other happenings which you will be eager to relate when September comes? A well-kept diary of a stay at a camp—an automobile trip—a tour by train—or a month on the farm would be most exciting for your reading table next year!

Of course, pictures, postcards, folders, pamphlets and other material about historic places will be of interest and very helpful.

Perhaps some of you will have the opportunity of seeing some of our big waters, high mountains and broad plains. Those who do not have this

Red Cross Juniors Attend Recent Peace Conference

Members of the Atlanta chapter of the American Junior Red Cross, invited to attend the Georgia conference in Athens, held June 1 and 2, were present at the final session of that body in its meeting at Athens Thursday, May 23. Both junior members and adult workers were in the party which heard Colonel Raymond Robins address the conference Thursday evening.

While the active interest of the conference was involved in the establishment of a world court for the adjustment of international difficulties, the Junior Red Cross members received a few insight into the possibilities of the work forming an important feature of the worldwide movement for peace. Through its widespread activity in foreign lands, the Junior Red Cross is working at the corner of the globe, the Junior Red

INMAN MOTHERS TO HOLD MEETING

Mothers of S. M. Inman pupils and friends interested in the work of the summer reading clubs will meet Tuesday, June 5, at 9:30 at the school. Final directions for the summer program will be given at this time.

Mrs. T. D. Albright, principal, will be present, as will Miss Winifred Lovett and Mrs. R. R. Ritchie, to answer questions and to help with details. All P. T. A. members interested in the work are urged to be present.

STUDENTS AT MARIST TO GRADUATE MONDAY

The twenty-seventh annual commencement exercises of Marist college will be held at 8:15 o'clock Monday night at the women's club auditorium.

The program will include conferring of diplomas and award of scholastic and class prizes. The candidates for graduation this year are Lewis R. Brine, James McK. Darby, John E. Fain, James A. Harvey, Jr., John N. Lyle, Herman H. Lewis, Eugene A. Murphy, Jr., Russell R. Timmons, Richard H. Voorhis and Harold E. Williams.

RAILROADS SEEK SUIT REHEARING IN TRANSFER CASE

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—The Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, Missouri-Texas, and the St. Louis-San Francisco railroads, which recently lost in the supreme court the controversy with the Baltimore & Ohio and other eastern railroads over the payment of transfer charges across the Mississippi at St. Louis on west-bound traffic, today asked the supreme court for a rehearing.

The court set aside the order of the commerce commission requiring the east side lines to pay the charges.

JOHN GARY SCHOOL PUPILS GRADUATED

The closing exercises of the John Gary school took place Friday, May 25. There were present mothers of pupils and members of P. T. A. Little Miss Etheridge won the volleyball presented by Mrs. W. S. Miller for attendance to class during the year and a book for highest average in the second grade.

John Ellison received a book presented by Mrs. W. B. Smith for gaining the highest average in the school work, first grade. Ethel Cooper for second best attendance and Dorothy Sarratt, a book for second best class average.

Members of John Gary P. T. A. will hold the regular monthly meeting during vacation months, the first meeting to be on June 7 at 9 a. m. Plans are being made for ice cream and garden party at the school. Also, the ladies under the direction of Miss Dahlia Baker will prepare a play to be given in the early fall on the return of Mrs. Ethel Cooper from a European tour.

MT. VERNON SCHOOL GRADUATES CLASS

The graduating exercises of the Mt. Vernon school took place Thursday evening, May 24, at 7 o'clock in the auditorium. Richard Daum, president of the class, presided.

The principal address was delivered by R. L. Ramsey, elementary supervisor of the Fulton County school system. Mr. Ramsey was at once an inspiration to the seventh grade but to the entire audience.

Mrs. C. F. Craft, president of the P. T. A., delivered the spelling medal to Evelyn Barnett, of the sixth grade. Mrs. Craft's own medal was delivered to Willie Mae Herndon, of the sixth grade, for having made the most improvement during the year.

Keep in mind the mascot of the school, presented a medal to Mary McWaters, a pupil of the fifth grade, for four years' perfect attendance.

Nell Hudgins, who was the mascot of the class, delivered her medal to William Pharr, a pupil of the seventh grade, for having made the most improvement during the year.

Certificates were delivered to the class by Judge Samuel Adams, a member of the Fulton county school board. The following received certificates: Charlie Joe Brown, Doris Bulce, Josephine Cox, Richard Daum, Louise Elzey, Catherine Huggins, Jack Hubert, Clifford Ivis, Mary Landers, A. W. Mashburn, Lois Moody, Philip McWaters, Edith Owens, William Pharr, Joe Whitehead, Ernest Youngblood.

P. T. A. ENTERTAINS J. C. HARRIS CLASS

A farewell party was tendered the graduates of the J. C. Harris school by the members of the Parent-Teacher association at that institution. A popular comedy selection especially for this occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by the honorees.

Following the motion picture refreshments were served.

On Tuesday the executive board gave a luncheon in honor of the school faculty. The principal, Mr. Thornton, was honored at this occasion.

Junior Humane Group Presents Gift to Hospital

The Junior Humane society of the second grade at the J. C. Harris school has been very active this spring. They raised enough money to present the Atlanta Humane society with a bird bath which will be placed in the grounds of the Humane society hospital. These boys and girls are from six to eight years old and have made the money by selling the grass, running errands for members of their families and various other methods.

Some time ago the Humane society offered prizes for the best stories written by grammar school children of acts of kindness they had done for dumb animals. The boys' prize was won by James P. Barron, and the girls' prize by Harriet Wilkie, both members of the second grade, Sam Union school. Their teacher, Miss Sarah Blittick, is an active member of the Atlanta Humane society.

HARRELSON OUTLINES POLICIES, PRINCIPLES

Promising his constituents, if elected, a business-like, economical and honest administration of finances and affairs of the school department, J. Ira Harrelson, candidate for school commissioner of the fourth ward, to succeed Dr. R. M. Eubanks, Saturday issued a statement in which he is predicting his candidacy, subject to the city democratic primary Wednesday.

Mr. Harrelson said: "I believe that taxes levied for school purposes will be cheerfully borne by citizens of Atlanta if they are used for a wise investment in the education of the children of the city."

"I elected, I shall use the power and authority imposed in me by the people of the ward and city to safeguard the city against the avalanche of unfavorable publicity because of financial crises in the school system. I believe that proper attention to allocation of salary accounts before other appropriations are made would do much to solve the problem and eliminate any just cause of criticism. I mean no reflection on any member of the board or on the administration officials in making such a statement."

Mr. Harrelson is the son of a South Carolina farmer. Since coming to Atlanta a few years ago, he has been associated in the practice of law with the firm of Hooper & Hooper and Paul Etheridge. He is prominently connected in local fraternal circles and civic organizations.

MEREDITH, MEMBER OF WILSON CABINET, IS CRITICALLY ILL

Des Moines, Iowa, June 2.—(AP)—E. Meredith, local publisher and secretary of agriculture in President Wilson's cabinet, is critically ill at his home here, his personal physician announced today.

Mr. Meredith, it is understood, is suffering from high blood pressure and resulting complications. Several weeks ago he returned from Johns Hopkins at Baltimore, where he had been under observation.

STATE EXTENSION OF AIR MAIL SEEN

Air mail service for seven Georgia and two Alabama cities will be discussed by John K. Ottley, Jr., Atlanta representative of Pitcairn Aviation, Inc., and H. J. Graves, chief clerk, district No. 1, railway mail service, on a tour of the cities this week, it was announced Saturday.

Cities which will be visited are Macon, Cordele, Tifton, Valdosta, Newnan, LaGrange and West Point, Ga., and Fairfax and Opelika, Ala. Definite hours for air mail, near the hour of train departures in the cities listed, will afford excellent connections with the Atlanta-New York air mail service, Graves points out.

Ottley and Graves have arranged for conferences with postmasters, chambers of commerce and others interested in extending the scope of the Atlanta-New York air mail service.

Jews To Contribute Today To Buy Land in Palestine

Girls of the Junior Hadassah and Young Judaea organizations will canvass the homes of Atlanta Jewry today to raise funds for purchase of land in Palestine to be used for Jewish colonization. The occasion marks annual flower day of the Jewish national fund, and will be directed here by Miss Rae Rosenberg, chairman of the Junior Hadassah, J. N. F. committee.

Individual contributions obtained through sale of the flowers will be collected in cities throughout the nation and used to support the work of the J. N. F., which is the oldest Palestine activity of the Jewish people. Inaugurated with penny contributions in 1902, the fund today has land holdings in Palestine worth several million dollars and consisting of 75,000 acres, settled with more than 40 colonies.

In addition to purchasing the land from the Arabs for a permanent possession of the Jewish people, the J. N. F. improves the soil, making it adaptable for colonization, through drainage and installation of water systems. Within a few years, 800,000 trees have been planted and maintained at a cost of $1.50 a tree. It is on this organization's land that the Hebrew university and several Hadassah hospitals are located.

Girls who will participate in the event are Frances Hollman, Lillian Singer, Frieda Isaacoff, Lillian Reisman, Jennie Klein, Sarah Taratoot, Gertrude Tontak, Gladys Shuman, Regina Ungar, Sadie Kessler, Dora Gordon, Ruth Lange, Charlotte Vigner, Belle Klein, Ann Minsk, Sara Gershon, Sophie Belfor, Mae Ungar, Bee Cohen, Ray Miles, Rose Schreiber, Cecil Rice, Gertrude Wald, Fannie Kohnstein, Mollie Bressler, Jeannette Zimmerman and Sylvia Levine.

Publisher Dies.

Pass Christian, Miss., June 2.—(AP) George Farrell, 41, publisher of the Pass Christian Tarpon, died here today.

ADAMS TO SPEAK TO ALLEN LEAGUE

Dr. M. W. Adams, president of Atlanta university, will address the Allen Christian league at 6 o'clock tonight in the Cosmopolitan A. M. E. church, corner of Vine and Foundry streets, according to announcement Saturday by Henry Strickland, president of the league. Dr. Adams will talk on the life of Daniel A. Payne, sixth bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal church.

DIABETES EXPLAINED

A Book explaining in simple language some of the causes, effects and symptoms of diabetes, and describing Dr. Stein-Callenfels' "Eksip" treatment, which allows you gradually to eat what you need, is being published by M. Richartz, Dept. 138, 220 West 42nd St., New York. Any sufferer from diabetes can have a copy of this book FREE by writing, immediately to the above address, enclosing stamp.—(adv.)

Human Better Olympic Broad Jump Record at Grant Field

Jacket Star Jumps 25 Feet to New Mark

Eubanks, of Oglethorpe, Places Well in Olympic Tryouts Held at Grant Field.

BY WHITNER CARY.

Edward Hamm, broad jumper extraordinary of Tech, and Snitz Snyder, the shifty hoof mover of Auburn, might just as well prepare to see Boston and the Olympic tryouts in a while as a rany distance runner from North Carolina, by the name of Elliott, will likely also see the New England village at the expense of the Olympic committee.

This highly satisfactory situation was brought about at Grant field Saturday afternoon in the Olympic tryouts for the southeastern district. Mr. Hamm, without undue exertion and amid the cheers of several hundred well-wishers, sent his body through the air for a distance of 25 feet. As the present Olympic mark is 24 feet 11 1/4 inches, held by Hutterston, it can be seen that the Tech star busted this mark by exactly three-quarters of an inch. The speedy and antelope-like Mr. Snyder made his invitation secure by galloping the 400 meters in the sensational time of 48.3 seconds, which is but nine-tenths of a second under the mark. Mr. Elliott had to fame came from the ease with which he negotiated the 1,500-meter run in 4 minutes 14.10 seconds. He could probably have clipped two seconds off this mark had he had strong competition.

Needless to say these three athletes walked off with their respective events.

Eubanks, of Oglethorpe, furnished the only double win of the day when he annexed the 400-meter hurdles and the high jump.

O'Dell, the Clemson star, cleared the bar in the pole vault at 13 feet. This performance was impressive and may get him a shot in the Boston tryouts.

Anderson, of Georgia, with a hurl of 164 feet 8 inches took the javelin throw.

Horse Guards To Meet Fort If Sun Shines

Old Rivals To Meet on Polo Field Today If Weather Permits.

Since wet grounds and polo do not go together it is very possible that the scheduled match this afternoon between the Fort McPherson team and the Horse Guards outfit of Atlanta will be called off because of the moist condition of the parade grounds at the fort.

however, for if Old Sol comes forth this morning with enough vehemence and by casting his smiling countenance upon the warriors, the two teams ground up the fort, then the two teams will ride forth for another exciting game.

After many years of defeat at the expense of the guardsmen, the soldiers at Fort Mac avenged themselves against their old-time rivals and turned in a brilliant 11-4 win last afternoon. The victory gave the entire team the necessary inspiration and if the two teams clash this afternoon it is very probable that a nip-and-tuck affair will result.

During the week the hard-riding players representing the polo ability of Uncle Sam's Fort McPherson triumphed over a strong team from the city of Atlanta with two consecutive victories to their credit it seems that the infantrymen have shoved off for a series of wins.

But, on the other hand, as there are two sides to everything, the guardsmen were rather humiliated at their loss last Sunday and have been diligently practicing all week for their next encounter with the fort horsemen. So, if it is possible for the two teams to clash this afternoon it is a sure thing that the guardsmen will enter the fray with a spirit of vengeance, a determination to force the infantry to repent for their upset of last week.

taking for granted that the weather will permit, a large crowd of polo enthusiasts are expected to be present for the match this afternoon. There has been much interest shown in the games played in the past and whether or not the spectator be thoroughly familiar with the minute details of the game it is a sure fact that he will get much "kick" and excitement from the hard-riding tactics of the polo players as they dash madly over the field in pursuit of the

Battled Tilden Americans to Victory in Cup Matches

Japanese Net Stars Routed At Chicago

U. S. Will Meet Winner of European Zone Matches for Right To Play France.

Chicago, June 2.—(AP)—Paced and inspired by the brilliance of Captain William T. Tilden II, of Philadelphia, George Lott of Chicago, aided in advancing America's chance to win the cherished Davis cup, symbolic of international tennis supremacy, by sweeping the American zone finals from Japan.

The American zone victory was clinched by the redoubtable Tilden and the youthful Lott of Chicago when they combined to crush the Japanese stars, Captain Toshiro and Abe, in straight sets in the doubles, 6-1, 10-8 and 6-2. The play marked the third straight triumph in the final play as the Americans swept the zone of Indianapolis the two opening singles yesterday.

Two more singles matches will be played tomorrow and when the Americans can afford to lose both, Tilden desires to win these, keeping his team's record in this year's Davis cup, unblemished. The Americans now have defeated China and Mexico five times in the Davis cup, and the zone winner on June 9 to play the European zone winner for the right to challenge France, holder of the Davis trophy.

Today, as yesterday, it was American experience and dash against Japanese agility and steadiness and the fort Tilden threat and that was in the second set when they forced Tilden and Lott to give before they could break through for a set victory.

The smashing drive of the American's play told on the Japanese. The first double fault just when they were near a game victory.

Just a Good Workout. It was little more than a workout for "Big Bill," like a patient schoolboy, he walked about the court, backing up Lott, and when a ball was needed, he crashed the ball with all his force and a point it was.

Lott also played a magnificent game, and the Tilden not count him, and the Tilden not count him, and the Tilden not count him.

The Japanese played a smooth game, but lost a chance to win the second set when Abe double faulted twice.

Matsuda, Japanese ambassador to Washington, and his two daughters, witnessed the final two matches and congratulated the Americans. He is en route to Japan, where his daughter Seiko, is to marry Prince Chichibu, brother of the Japanese emperor.

In tomorrow's singles matches, Tilden will meet Yoshioka and Junior Conn will meet Yoshida. Tilden and Conn will play tomorrow.

Hunter to Join Squad in London. New York, June 2.—(AP)—Announcement by the United States Lawn Tennis association of sailing today for the American Davis cup team which eliminated Japan today, disclosed that Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., would join the team at London, thus setting at rest rumors that Hunter had declined to join the team.

Headed by the newly appointed manager, Samuel M. Peacock, of Philadelphia, the American team will sail for London on the Ile de France next Saturday, June 9. Before leaving for Paris, Hunter, the former champion, will participate in the English zone Davis cup matches at Wimbledon, beginning June 25.

For seeding purposes, the following in Wimbledon competition: Men's singles—Tilden, Hunter, Hennessey and Lott.

REALTORS TO GET RADIO INVITATION TO CONVENTION

Realtors throughout the nation have been asked to tune in on a program to be broadcast from Louisville, Ky., Saturday night, June 9, dedicated specially to the 21st annual convention of the National Association of

The program, which starts at 8 o'clock, central standard time, and ends at 9:30 o'clock, will be broadcast through WHAS, the radio-telephone of the Louisville Times and the Courier-Journal, and is expected to act as verbal invitation to the convention to the 40,575 members of the national association.

Arranged through the Greater Louisville Savings and Building association, the program will be sent out that organization's extension stu-

The program is to consist of a variety of music ranging from jazz to classical selections. Stunts of various natures are being arranged for one and one-half hours' radio broadcast.

Orchestras, vocal selections and the greater Louisville ensemble have leading parts in the program.

MASON TIRE LAUNCHES NEWSPAPER CAMPAIGN

"Gentlemen: The Mason Tire and Rubber company, convinced that its Hylastic Balloon tires are the best tires ever offered the public by any organization, has decided to tell their wondrous to the public in the greatest newspaper advertising campaign in its history."

Enthusiastic cheers from Mason branch managers from all over the country—from New England to California—interrupted the speaker, W. A. Cluff, president of the company. "Splendid!" ejaculated the Boston man. "I'm selling more Masons now than ever before, and with such a campaign to help me, I'll make a record even you, Mr. President, will be proud of. Won't I, John? And won't you? And down the line he went with a fiery response from every man."

The occasion was the final day of the sales conference of Mason representatives and factory men—scores of them—a few days ago in one of the great halls of the Hollenden hotel at Cleveland. They had all previously inspected the great plant at Kent, Ohio, where the famous tires are made (even the cord fabric—for everything that enters into a Mason tire, from start to finish, is under supervision of Mason experts) and were listening to the president's address.

"Gentlemen," added the president when he was allowed to continue, "most of you have been with us for years and know the superiority of Mason Hylastic Balloons over other tires as well as I. That is why you are here and why you are so enthusiastic. You know the long years of experimentation which led to their superiority, if I may use the phrase. I dare say no plant in the country is more careful not only of the tire plant—but we are the only tire company to have its own textile mill to make our cord fabric right on the premises—tested and proved and watched by experts from morning to night and night to morning. We do everything at Kent, in fact, but grow the rubber. That is why there can be no lack of perfection in Mason Hylastic Balloons—in the thousands of them that we turn out at Kent. Is it any wonder that we have the numerous testimonials of unparalleled mileage? Many of them you have sent us—from city and country—from districts with paved roads and districts where paying is unknown—from mountain districts and valley districts—by men who have subjected them to all kinds of trials and tests. The story is the same—the result the same. Mason Hylastic Balloons invariably deliver due to the famous Hylastic cord construction which gives to every Mason tire an unusual regional strength, and to the big, broad tread with powerful shoulders which takes wear evenly and therefore slowly."

"I need not go further with technical construction at this time or speak of the other famous Mason products. You know the story. But one other thing besides our advertising campaign will interest you, being to the lowest cost of rubber of which we have taken advantage these superlative tires can even be offered to the public at prices that will never be expected and never hoped to get Mason quality. With this wonderful tire, with its marvelous performance under severe tests with its unparalleled mileage records, with these prices and this advertising campaign, I expect this to be, Mason's banner year. I thank you."

Besieged Woman Says She Fights On Sex' Behalf

London, June 2.—(AP)—In a luxurious 12-room mansion in Hyde Park, Mrs. Katherine Routledge, author, explorer and wealthy society woman, today held the fort against an order of court which arose out of differences with her husband, Kenneth Routledge, her companion in many adventures. "I am doing this as a protest in behalf of women," she explained to an interviewer whom she herself admitted since she has dismissed all her servants so that they might not become involved with the law. The interviewer was admitted only after Mrs. Routledge had carefully scrutinized his card, which he passed through a panel in the door, and satisfied herself that he was not an officer of the law in disguise. "The administration of the law seems heavily weighted against women," she continued. "All my property was sequestered by an order from a high court because I had not paid a sum of less than 100 pounds for storage in warehouses of property belonging to my husband. The order apparently empowers the forcible entry of my house, but nobody yet has attempted this."

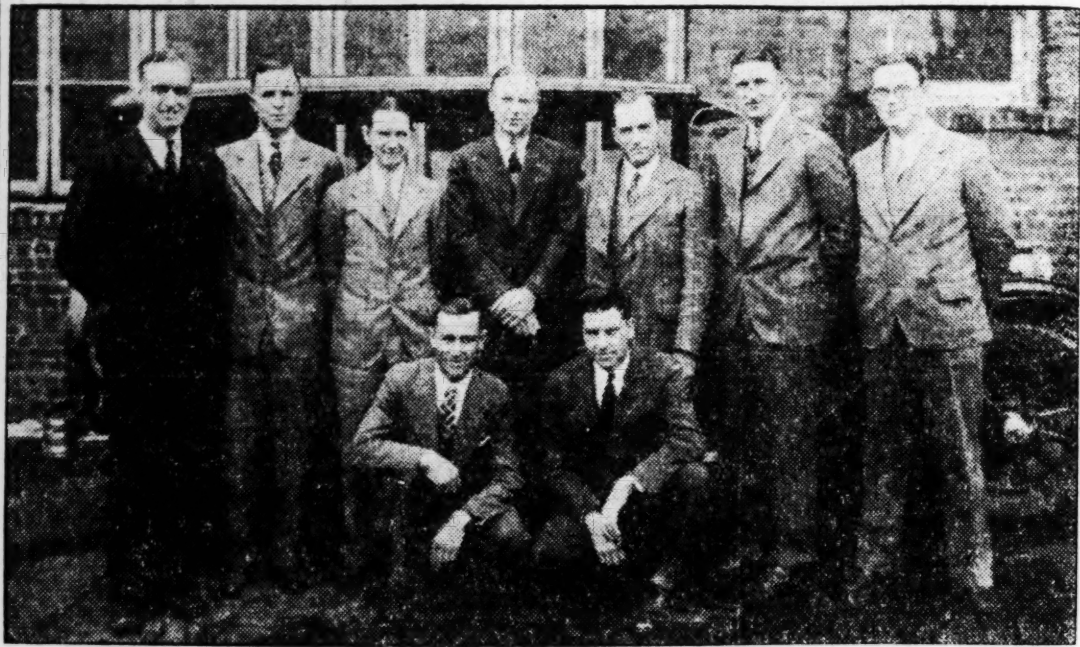

She explained that the trouble arose from the separation of herself and her husband last summer. The house and nearly all its contents are her property. After the separation was agreed upon she sent her husband's books and personal belongings to various warehouses. Then the question arose as to who should pay the warehouse charges. Routledge demanded his property, she said, but refused to pay the charges. She also refused and the warehouse people declined to surrender them without payment. Litigation followed and the court ruled that she must restore her husband's goods. She still refused to pay the charges which would release them. The court then issued the order of sequestration.

Mrs. Routledge determined she would not comply with it. She dismissed the servants and does all her own housework, slipping out at odd times to make a few necessary purchases since she does not permit even the milkman to call.

She said her treatment was due to the fact that she was a woman and that she had taken the present course to call attention to the unfair way women are treated. She declines to employ an attorney, having the greatest mistrust of them and said she would be her own attorney.

Mrs. Routledge accompanied her husband on several expeditions to islands in the Pacific. The most notable of these was to Easter Island, where they spent three years trying to solve the mystery of the famous statues carved in the lava there, the island being of volcanic origin. They became involved in difficulties with the natives and the timely arrival of a Chilean warship in 1916 prevented serious trouble.

'Pinkies' Used Car Sales Staff

They are solving the used car problem for D. C. "Pinkie" Black, Buick dealer for Atlanta, but of course, with the help of Mr. Black's fine reconditioning policy. Last month they sold and delivered 159 used cars, which we believe to be a record for sales organizations in any section of the country to shoot at. Mr. Black has associated with him in his used car department some of the foremost automobile men in the south and their records are always marks for other dealers to shoot at. Standing, left to right, they are Elmer E. Ellis, Sam Burkhart, Charles W. Temple, D. C. Black, W. W. Neely, Arnold O. Mitchell, used car manager. Kneeling, left to right, Charles A. Steen and Frank Garman.

NO BASIS FOR PROBE, SAYS CHAIN STORE HEAD

Interest in many quarters of the retail world is centered in resolutions offered in the senate and the house of representatives calling on the federal trade commission to investigate the activities of chain stores with a view to determining whether they are in violation of the anti-trust laws. Commenting in The New York Times on the proposed investigation, John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, said that in three states—North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia—legislation has already been enacted which imposes an additional tax on chain stores as such. In Maryland, he added, a law was passed forbidding the ownership of more than five stores in the county of Cumberland by one person or corporation. This legislation, Mr. Hartford further said, has all been recent, and while the interests back of it have attempted to secure similar laws in other states, the attempts have been unsuccessful.

The North Carolina and Maryland statutes have both been held unconstitutional by the lower courts of those states," he continued. "Suit has been started to test the Georgia law. The case has not yet come to trial, but meanwhile the court has granted a temporary injunction restraining enforcement of the statute pending the trial. No attempt has yet been made to enforce the South Carolina law."

Legislation Passed Unsound. "The court decisions thus far rendered confirm our views that this legislation is economically unsound, as well as illegal. For example, the Maryland court, in an elaborate opinion, has pointed out that chain stores are in no way against public policy, but, on the contrary, are a benefit in reducing the cost of distribution from the producer to the consumer and thereby lowering the cost of living."

"With respect to the resolutions recently introduced in congress proposing an investigation of chain stores by the federal trade commission, our position would naturally be that we have nothing to fear from such investigation, and our only feeling about it is one of doubt as to whether such action should be taken without some good reason therefor being apparent. If sufficient reasons appear to justify an inquiry into the industry as a whole, however, our company would welcome it."

E. C. Sims, head of the J. C. Penney Co. Inc., also commented in The Times on the proposed investigation along lines somewhat similar to those he followed in an address before the annual convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce. He stated that the whole chain-store situation is now ripe for the kind of study which the chamber, through its division of domestic distribution, is equipped to make. He went on to say that many of the state legislatures at their coming sessions will be asked to pass laws hostile to chain stores.

Campaign of Protection in Order. "These stores will be asked to pay a tax or a license fee simply because they are part of a chain," Mr. Sims continued. "Independent stores do not enjoy exactly the same kind of business that does not exempt from such tax or license. Chain stores and the public at large will be looking to the chamber of commerce for impartially presented information with which to carry on a campaign of protection for themselves and their customers."

Atlanta Chiefs of Georgia Furniture Body Direct Drive

The two widely-known Atlanta furniture leaders, elected president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the Georgia Retail Furniture Dealers' association, will direct a campaign of intensive education of furniture salespeople to be conducted by the state association this year. The program was inaugurated by the retiring president, T. C. Dickson, of the Myers-Miller Furniture company, of Atlanta, and will be carried to completion by President Hicks, who is Atlanta manager of the Sterchi Furniture company, and Secretary-Treasurer Satterwhite, who is vice president of the Satterwhite Furniture company. Closer relationship between salespeople and purchasers of home furnishings is the aim of the educational program.

NEGROES ARE HELD FOR POSSESSION AND SALE OF "DOPE"

A black bag which came into the possession of Robert Sims and Tom Pitts, negroes, contained a little bottle full of a powder which the twins believed to be poison, so they threw the bottle away, according to the story unfolded Saturday by federal narcotics agents. Someone told Sims and Pitts that the bottle contained "dope," and was extremely valuable, so they recovered the vial of poison, a derivative of opium, and attempted to sell it for $20, the narcotic agents charge. In a hearing before United States Commissioner E. S. Griffith Saturday Sims and Pitts were held for the federal grand jury under $2,000 bond each on charges of possessing and offering to sell narcotics.

FULTON COUNTY SUMMER SCHOOLS WILL OPEN JUNE 11

Summer schools of the Fulton county system, including nine grammar grade centers at convenient points

throughout the county and a high school division at Fulton high will open June 11 and close July 20, it was announced Saturday by the county board of education.

The grammar schools will be conducted at College Park, Chattahoochee, Central Park, E. P. Howell, E. Rivers, Grove Park, Hapeville, Lakewood Heights and Hammond. A nominal charge of $2 for one subject, $3 for two and $4 for three subjects will be assessed each pupil to help defray the cost of the six weeks' session, it was announced. This year as last, for all delinquents of the system, for outsiders a slightly higher schedule will prevail.

SCHOOLS OF ROME CLOSE FOR SUMMER. Rome, Ga., June 2.—(Special).—The city schools dismissed at noon Friday for the summer vacation. Commencement exercises for high school will be held Wednesday morning at city auditorium when the largest class in the school's history will receive diplomas presented by C. Lewis Turner, vice president of the board of education. Honor pupils announced by Superintendent Quigg include: Miss Lucile Anderson, who was chosen by the class to give the valedictory; Cecil Gilbert and Mildred Esserman. Pupils making the honor roll, throughout the year, in the senior class were: Martha King, Terba Pinteluck, Celia Jessor.

SPEED WAGON SALES AGAIN IN THE LEAD

For the third time in the past six months the Reo Speed Wagon in April outsold all other makes of trucks—even the smallest and lowest-priced vehicles—in King county (Seattle), Washington, according to figures just received by the Reo Motor Car company from Lampung Motor company, the Reo distributor in Washington.

According to the official registration figures, there were registered a total of 19 new Speed Wagons, which constituted over 22 per cent of all the new commercial vehicles registered. The significance of Reo's rapidly growing popularity is seen in the figures themselves, which are as follows: Chevrolet, 13; Federal, 1; Ford, 12; G. M. C., 6; Graham, 5; International, 4; Mack, 2; Pierce-Arrow, 2; Reo, 19; Republic, 0; Ruggles, 0; Star, 0; Studebaker, 0; Whippet, 2; White, 1; Willys-K, 1; Yellow, 0; miscellaneous, 18. Total, 85.

Incidentally, Reo's 19 Speed Wagons registered in April compare with 1 in April, 1927—an increase of 1,800 per cent.

And just by way of showing that Reo's popularity in the Pacific northwest is not by any means confined to the Speed Wagon, the official registration figures show that Reo registered a total of 24 new Flying Clouds and Wolverines, an increase of 54.5 per cent over the 22 registered in April, 1927.

BAPTIST WOMEN TO MEET TUESDAY AT FORSYTH, GA.

Forsyth, Ga., June 2.—Bessie Tift college will be the mecca of Georgia Baptist women when they gather in Forsyth Tuesday for their annual state convention.

The convention will open Tuesday morning, though delegates will begin arriving Monday afternoon and these will be taken in charge by the local organization for an automobile tour of the city. The convention will close Thursday afternoon with a short business session.

This is the fortieth anniversary of the organization of Baptist women's project and in recognition of this the organization has been well arranged and the meeting will be presided over by the president, Mrs. W. J. Neal, of Carverville, who has headed the organization for the past 18 years. The same arrangements have been made this year as last, for all delegates and visitors to stay at the college during room, and eat at the college dining room.

Palace on Wheels for Maharajah

"When West Meets East" might well be the title of the picture above. The maharajah of Tonk purchased a Willys-Knight great six chassis and then ordered the construction of a special body, the maharajah giving the recommendations as to size and fittings. It is his custom to travel in a reclining position so the interior was fitted to provide comfort for the royal traveler. He also specified that sufficient room be provided in the interior so that two of his wives might also accompany him on his various trips through his empire. Entrance to this veritable palace on wheels is from the rear while leather seats on either side of the entry door accommodate two armed guards.

The maharajah of Tonk rules in a native state in Rajputana. Immediately on the delivery of the Willys-Knight, the maharajah ordered two additional Willys-Knight great sixes.

OFFICERS NAMED BY LOCAL BRANCH OF TRENCH RATS

The annual election of officers of the Atlanta division of the National Order of Trench Rats was held Friday night at the city auditorium. New officers of the division are: O'Leary Ray, who succeeds L. S. Bellinger as "golden rodent," or head of the organization; Captain Joyner, "silver rodent," or vice president; Jesse Hall, "blue rodent," or second vice president; Scotty Williamson, "red rodent," or secretary; Glen Emery, "holy rat," or chaplain; M. J. Wager, "bulonic plague," or sergeant-at-arms; A. C. Gray, "black plague," and Charles E. Lumpkin, "iron claw," members of the degree team.

The Trench Rats fraternity is the shrine of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and the institution is said to be remnant of the endless caverns of dugouts on the fighting fronts in France. The local division will unite with those of

Remarkable Record In Used Car Sales Reported by Crowder

One of the most remarkable records in used car sales ever run up by an Atlanta sales force was reported Saturday by R. C. Crowder, manager of the used car department of the Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company, dealer in Dodge Brothers automobiles and Graham Brothers trucks.

During the month of May, Mr. Crowder reported, his department sold and delivered 146 cars, or nearly five used cars per day. Mr. Crowder expressed gratification at the splendid work done by his staff and the high reputation of the Lambeth-Eskridge company.

"In addition," he said Saturday, "our feat was made possible by reason of a big newspaper advertising

ATLANTA'S SECOND "PIG 'N WHISTLE" SHOP IS OPENED

Atlanta's second "Pig 'n Whistle" sandwich shop now is open on Roswell road at Buckhead. It was announced Saturday by H. T. Hagan and J. Terris Hagan, of the Pig 'n Whistle Sandwich Shops, Inc. The first "Pig 'n Whistle" shop was opened early in April on Peachtree road near the Seaboard bridge and has proved unusually popular with Atlantans.

The Buckhead shop, second of the local chain, will afford the same service in roasted sandwich meats and cold drinks that the Peachtree road shop has made popular. Three other shops are slated to be opened here in the near future.

The Hagan brothers operate a highly successful chain of Pig 'n Whistle shops in the east.

LOCAL AND NATIONAL ASSOCIATIONS AFFILIAT

One of the most progressive steps ever taken by the Atlanta Automobile association was the action taken recently at a big membership meeting, subscribing to an association membership in the big National Automobile Dealers' association, with headquarters in Chicago, Ill. This membership entitles every member of the Atlanta Automobile dealers' division to be placed on the mailing list of the National Automobile Dealers' association, to receive all information and beneficial literature issued by the national, and also entitles the office of the Atlanta Automobile association to all information of every kind issued by the national, and also entitles the members of the allied automotive trade lines division of the local association.

The National Automobile Dealers' association represents the industry in all matters affecting it from a national standpoint. It was largely responsible for the recent repeal of the 3 per cent sales tax on automobiles by the United States congress, thus saving purchasers of automobiles yearly many millions of dollars. The national association also maintains a research department, through which it keeps all of the latest and most approved methods of automotive merchandising. Of course, all of this information is available to its members, and is of great benefit to them. The Atlanta association, through this action, has placed itself in line with the leading automobile associations in the largest cities of America, and is able to render a still greater service to its members.

CHRYSLER GETS CREDIT FOR HIGH COMPRESSION

In any story of how high compression engines are revolutionizing the trend for America's great motor industry, the names of Walter P. Chrysler and Fred M. Zeder, "must stand high and come first," says the New York Sun, "for the head of the Chrysler organization and its vice president in charge of engineering pioneered the way to new fields of motor car performance with the Chrysler high compression engine."

"They are the men," continues the Sun, "who get the credit in all automobile circles for leading the industry to high compression in 1925 after having achieved 1927's outstanding engineering feat in building engines of greater efficiency."

Zeder has been living and thinking high compression engines for years. And Walter Chrysler, himself a human high compression engine of great power, has never had any greater interest in his business life than the automobile engine, although he has proved himself a genius in the fields of automobile organization, finance and sales. So when Chrysler or Zeder talks high compression he speaks as a recognized authority, and the automobile world listens and listens just as it does when those high-powered Chrysler "step out" on the road.

Discussing these new engines, their performance and their distinctive advantages, Mr. Zeder says that "the new power plants, by utilizing modern high compression fuels, have made possible a quality of motor car performance never before realized. Power, speed, acceleration and hill climbing ability beyond any previous attainment are being enjoyed this year as the direct result of the combination of high compression engines and high compression fuels. Chrysler, pioneering in this field, we may say, has again resulted in benefits to motorists generally."

Marking the latest step in a movement to keep pace with the growing demand for its products, the Chevrolet Motor company announced here today that construction will start shortly on a mammoth Chevrolet assembly plant in Kansas City. This follows closely on the opening of a similar plant in Atlanta to the southeast.

When completed in October, the Kansas City plant will be the largest automobile factory in the southwest and will represent an investment of more than $2,500,000. Like the Atlanta plant, the Kansas City factory will have a capacity of 350 cars a day, providing Chevrolet with facilities for the production of more than 1,250,000 cars annually. The new factory will serve western Missouri, Kansas, North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Colorado.

W. S. Kauffman, president of the Chevrolet Motor company, declared today that the opening of a plant in Kansas City has been made necessary to relieve the St. Louis and Janesville factories, where the demand has been "taxing production facilities and making it necessary for both plants to work overtime for the last three months. It is a further step in the company's program to insure a regular flow of cars in line with the exceptional public demand, he said.

Twenty-eight acres in the Leeds district have been taken over for the various building, which will include the main Chevrolet-Fisher assembly unit, an office building, parts and service building, driveway stand, loading dock and power house. With the exception of the office building the units will all be of one-story, non-inflator type roof construction, allowing for the maximum amount of light for workmen. Nearly one half of the large Chevrolet-Fisher assembly unit will be occupied by the Fisher Body corporation for the building of bodies for all Chevrolet closed cars. This close association of the world's largest and foremost automobile body builder will enable Chevrolet to provide the same type of service available in other Chevrolet assembly plants throughout the country. Buildings will have a total of 410,000 square feet of floor space.

Work will be provided for 1,500 people and the pay roll will exceed $50,000 daily. Following the Chevrolet policy of recruiting workmen from the respective communities in which its plants are located, local help will be employed almost exclusively, with the exception of a few technically trained men heading the various departments. This plant will be equipped with the latest appliances for the efficient manufacturing of automobiles similar to those in use in other Chevrolet plants throughout the country. Edward Shaw, at present general superintendent of the Chevrolet assembly plant in Flint, will assume management of the plant.

The sales department, now operating in the Kansas City zone location, 19th and Grand avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, will be removed to the plant as soon as the plant is ready for occupancy, and Mr. Paul M. Neese will be in charge of the work of the sales and service department. Appointment of a resident controller will be announced at a later date.

Plans were drawn by Albert Kahn, Detroit architect.

The plant will be served by the Missouri Pacific railroad, and the Kansas City-Southern, with space allowing for the storage of 300 freight cars.

Completion of the Kansas City project will provide Chevrolet with nine assembly plants throughout the

Frank North Named General Manager for Martin-Nash Co.

It will be a source of real satisfaction to the hundreds of Atlanta motorists who regard Frank North, not only as an automotive expert but as a personal friend, to learn that he has been promoted by H. H. Martin, president, to the general management of the Martin Nash Motor company.

At the entrance of the United States into the world war, Mr. North, well known to the country as a captain in the motor transport branch of the army. Having finished his job overseas he returned to civil life and, about six years ago, became associated with Robert H. Martin, president of the Martin Nash Motor company, as service manager, later being made manager of the used car department.

His wide experience and excellent work in this capacity won for him the position of sales manager in Atlanta, where he made a host of friends, as much by his pleasing personality and unquestionable integrity as by his expert knowledge of automotive problems.

Mr. North was later made manager of the Birmingham warehouse of the Martin Nash Motor company. After doing good work in that capacity, Mr. Martin felt that he was more valuable in Atlanta and reappointed him sales manager here.

His latest promotion to the position of general manager is a mark of well-earned esteem and will be a matter for congratulation from everyone who knows this capable citizen and his likable personality.

R. H. Martin describes Mr. North as "a man who makes friends for himself and this organization wherever he goes."

Reo Flying Cloud Flattens Pittsburgh's Highest Hills

Proving the claims of its makers that it possesses year-around performance today, a 1929 Reo Flying Cloud recently climbed the three highest hills in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in high gear—a feat heretofore recognized by all motorists as practically impossible.

According to factory officials, the Flying Cloud, a stock sedan carrying the driver and one adult passenger and with a starting speed of less than 20 miles an hour, went over the top of the Negley avenue hill, which rises 16-14 feet in every 100, at a speed of 20 miles per hour.

The Tokio street hill, a quarter of a mile long and with a grade of 19-14 per cent, was next. The Reo Flying

Cloud went over this hill, not once but many times, at 16 to 18 miles per hour, a feat which caused Harold Blanchard, technical editor of Motor to exclaim: "I never expected to see the day when I should watch an automobile climb a 19 per cent grade in high gear."

Next, with two passengers, the 1929 Flying Cloud glided over the top of Heberton hill at 47 miles per hour and with six full-grown men at a speed of 42 miles per hour.

Following these tests, the Reo Flying Cloud was driven 70 miles per hour on the straightaway, proving, officials believe, that speed on the level has not been sacrificed in the 1929 model to get hill-climbing power.

SEEK ALUMINUM AUTOMOBILE TAGS

If tests now being made prove satisfactory, more than a million dollars may be saved in postage by the various state governments through supplying automobile license tags made of aluminum instead of steel.

This possible economy was first called to the attention of state highway commissioners through the adoption of aluminum for that purpose by Brazil and Japan.

Aluminum weighs just one-third as much as steel, and the material is plenty strong, as is attested by its use for automobile crank cases, pistons and bodies. It is also rust proof.

New Type Air-Cleaner On Graham-Paige Cars

An entirely new type of air-cleaner, depending on the adhesiveness of "oil-wetted" woven metal sponge for its effectiveness, is one of the advanced features of the new Graham-Paige cars. The cleaner is said to be of unusually high efficiency, removing virtually all solid particles from the air.

In the Graham-Paige installation, the new type filter is mounted above the carburetor. The housing is of sheet metal, having openings top and bottom that are several times the area of the carburetor intake. Loosely packed in the housing are many yards of flat copper ribbon, matted into a spongy mass. A large surface is thus exposed to the air, an dove the entire surface is a film of heavy oil.

When the air is drawn through the cleaner, it goes through innumerable restricted passages with countless changes of direction. Any particle of solid material in the air must come in contact with the oil film of the matted ribbon, and be held there.

So great is the surface exposed to the air that it is not necessary to clean the filter more than two or three times a season, or about every 5,000 miles. The cleaning operation is easily performed. The entire filter is detached by removing one knurled nut, and is then washed in gasoline. The filter element is re-oiled by dipping it in engine oil.

The efficiency of this new type cleaner remains high until the filter element has become laden with dust throughout the spongy mass. Even then, it does not restrict the flow of

Radio Audience Grows.

Washington, June 2.—(AP).—Another increase in the power of the broadcasting station at Riga, Latvia, which was doubled some time ago to 3,000 watts, is expected this year. A. W. Kiefer, U. S. consul, reports. During 1927, when the doubled power was on, radio listeners in Latvia increased from 10,518 to 16,049.

Strong short wave signals from the companion station 2XE of WABC, New York, are reported in several letters received from England. 2XE uses a wave length of 38.5, with 250 watts power.

and on the new type of license plates the background could be left in its natural state, with only the figures and letters colored. This does away with a background of enamel, effecting still further economies.

The experiments are being watched with much interest, not only by state highway engineers, but by automobile clubs who offer delivery service to their members in those communities that have adopted the "come and get it" method of delivering license plates.

Gum-Dipped TIRES

HOLD ALL WORLD RECORDS

for Speed, Safety and Endurance

How has it been possible for Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires to sweep aside all the old records in every field of motor-ing and set up an entirely new standard for judging speed, safety, endurance and mileage? Such outstanding perform-ances on all types of cars and commercial vehicles, on brick, board and dirt speedways as well as under the same everyday driving conditions that every motorist meets, could only be brought about by the most advanced tire engineering the world has ever known. Never before in history have such feats been accomplished, because never before have there been tires so perfectly designed for each motoring need—with such balanced construction from beads to tread—with every part of the tire engineered to function perfectly in the service for which it is built.

THE ONLY TIRE THAT HAS ITS CORDS DIPPED THROUGH A RUBBER SOLUTION

Here is a single cord from a Firestone Gum-Dipped Tire untwisted to show how it is composed of small cords and strands. It takes millions of cotton fibers to make up these cords for a tire, and each must be thoroughly insulated with rubber to prevent friction and heat, in the carcass—the greatest enemy to long tire mileage. Firestone engineers found that by dipping the cords of the tire carcass in a rubber solution, every fiber of every cord is saturated and insulated with rubber, adding the greatest flexibility and strength, and unifying the whole structure of the tire. Gum-Dipping made the Full-Size Balloon Tire practical by adding the extra strength for the extra flexing strain. That is why Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloons—the original low pressure tires—have held outstanding leadership for more than five years.

THE MOST DURABLE AND LONGEST MILEAGE TIRE

The amazing mileage of Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires results from the scientific-ally designed tread which is engi-neered to the contour of the Balloon Tire carcass—it flexes uniformly with the carcass at every point of contact—it is compounded of the toughest, most wear-resisting tread rubber possible—this tire does not weave or sway under load. It does not rut wear and because of the center ribs and provision for rubber displacement, wears more evenly and longer than any tread in the world.

THE SAFEST TIRE

Experienced race drivers will not trust their lives or risk their chances of victory on any other tires. Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have enabled drivers to make higher speeds, with safety, than ever before possible. Imagine the terrific strain, pressure and flex-ing imposed upon Gum-Dipped Tires when Ray Keech recently broke the world's record at more than 207.5 miles per hour. Yet following the race the owner of this car wrote that the tires were in perfect condition.

The tread of the Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloon Tire is sci-entifically designed for low pressure giving the greatest amount of yield freely and cling to the road. This is the result of its great flexibility, permitting the tire to permit this tread to flex freely with the new Gum-Dipped carcass.

non-skid when it comes in contact with the road. Notice the narrow rider strips and small non-skid projections which permit this tread to flex freely with the new Gum-Dipped carcass.

A Firestone Gum-Dipped Tire That is Supreme for Every Class of Service

For Light and Medium Weight Cars

This tire is designed and engineered to the needs of the light and medium weight car. It is therefore extremely flexible, of limited ply construction, made un-usually strong by the extra process of Gum-Dipping and uniformity in cure. It is gen-erously over-size and will give you greater comfort, safety and economy than any tire in the world of heavier and more bulky construc-tion. Do not decrease your speed, increase your gasoline consumption or wear out your tires prematurely by putting a heavier tire on your light or medium weight car.

For the Heavy Car

Firestone has also designed a special tire with extra plies of cord fabric and heavier and tougher tread, especially for heavy cars. Naturally, this tire requires additional air pressure, and while the carcass is Gum-Dipped and flexes uniformly under load, yet its degree of deflection is less because of its heavier carcass, thicker tread and necessary higher air pressure.

For Commercial Cars, Trucks and Buses

For motor vehicles of still greater weight and carrying capacities, the carcass is made still heavier, using from six to fourteen plies (depend-ing on size) of cord fabric and a thick heavy tread. This tire is also Gum-Dipped by the special pro-cess and makes this tire more flexible and durable than any other tire in its class, yet it is engineered especially for commercial vehicles. This is the best tire that money can buy in its class, but if you want comfort, safety and economy of operation on passenger cars don't use this thick, heavy tire.

Coast-to-Coast Truck Record

"Cannon Ball" Baker, in 1927, drove a 2-ton GMC truck, fully loaded from Atlantic to the Pacific—3,693 miles in 137 hours and 36 minutes. This fastest and longest truck run on record was made on Firestone Gum-Dipped Heavy Duty Pneumatics.

Endurance Record

In 1927, three Studebaker Commanders, (two roadsters and a sedan) on Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloons made 25,000 miles in less than 25,000 min-utes. The roadsters finished in elapsed time of 22,968 minutes, or an average speed of 65.31 miles per hour; sedan finished in 24,200 minutes, or 61.98 miles per hour.

At Atlantic City, April 23, 1928, two Studebaker Dictator Roadsters, on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, finished 5,000 miles in less than 5,000 min-utes. The first roadster finished in elapsed time of 4,751 minutes, or an average of 63.13 miles per hour; the second finished in elapsed time of 4,892 minutes, or an average of 61.312 miles per hour.

FIRST PIERCE-ARROW TRUCK STILL WORKING

Bright and early every morning a Pierce-Arrow truck swings into its accustomed berth at the loading dock of the Iroquois Beverage corporation, of Buffalo, is piled high with barrels and boxes and then goes about its work, making many round trips daily and covering a high mileage.

There is nothing unusual or distinctive about its appearance to mark it as being different from the hundreds of Pierce-Arrow trucks operating on the streets of Buffalo. However, it is one of the oldest, if not the oldest commercial vehicle in the United States in daily operation—for this truck is the original 5-ton truck built by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company, having been in continuous service since May 28, 1911.

For, shortly before this date, 17 years ago, Pierce-Arrow had completed the manufacture of its first truck, unique in that it applied the principle of worm drive to the propulsion of a commercial vehicle. Critics throughout the country laughed and scoffed, stating that the use of this principle was unsound.

So the original truck was started on its famous demonstration run from New York to Boston on May 28, a run that effectively silenced all criticism of the worm drive and demonstrated to critics that the use of this principle in a truck was not only sound but extremely efficient.

The demonstration run developed into a series of unusual tests—the Pierce-Arrow truck being called upon to reverse over obstructions, climb steep, circle pillars and even travel six miles over railroad ties. It was closely watched at every point on its trip by representative operators and when it finally rolled into Boston it was rewarded by universal acclaim.

After being used for some time as a demonstration truck by the factory the truck was sold to the International Brewing company, of Buffalo, eventually coming into the hands of the Iroquois Beverage corporation, where it has served faithfully for many years.

Although no accurate record of its mileage has been kept for several years, it is estimated that this truck has seen over a half million miles of service. It is in first-class mechanical condition and still retains the majority of its original mechanical units.

An official of the Iroquois Beverage corporation stated recently that he expected that the truck would still be able to repeat its original performance in 1931 when it will have reached its twentieth birthday.

RESTAURANT MEN ORGANIZE; JOIN MERCHANTS' BODY

A new retail trade association has been added to the number of others that have been organized and have affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants association. This new trade association is known as the Atlanta Restaurant Owners and Managers association. The organization meeting was held last week and was attended by 30 of the leading restaurant owners and managers of Atlanta.

Permanent officers elected were: J. R. Nix, president; E. B. Venable, vice president; Miss Frances Wike, treasurer; C. V. Hollenstein, executive secretary.

Problems affecting the restaurant business will be taken up immediately by the association. Meetings will be held every Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, the next meeting being called for Wednesday, June 6. With the object in view of bringing into the association every restaurant of standing and responsibility, the following membership committee was appointed immediately by the president: J. L. Ludwig, chairman; William H. Walton, E. L. Fisher, Miss Bessie Young, and J. H. Finks.

ATHLETIC STUNTS TO FEATURE OUTING

The athletic stunts and games which the committee on arrangements for the annual outing of the Atlanta Automobile association have scheduled for the afternoon of Friday, June 15, at East Lake Country club, have already attracted quite a bit of attention from many of the men, ladies and children who attend these annual outings in large numbers. Quite a number of races and stunts have been arranged, particularly for the young boys and girls, with suitable prizes to be awarded to the winners. Relay races, swimming contests, horseshoe tournament and other similar events will fill up the afternoon for those who do not care to play golf or participate in the ladies' bridge party in the clubhouse.

The golf tournament, as usual, is one of the big features of the occasion, and a large number who expect to enter have already filled their applications, in pairs, with O. J. Coe, of the United Motors Service, who is in charge of the tournament.

The ladies' bridge party at the clubhouse in the afternoon is being directed by Mrs. C. V. Hollenstein, and entries can be made with her by telephoning WAshington 9397, or by dropping her a reservation at 335 Sixth street, N. E.

A large number of prizes are being secured by the committee on arrangements, and these prizes will be divided up so that all of the events will have some kind of a suitable award.

Promptly at 4:30 o'clock a large crowd, which this year is expected to number fully 1,000, will gather on the grounds for the service of a special course dinner, after which an entertainment will be provided at the clubhouse, followed by a dance, for which one of Atlanta's leading orchestras has been secured.

Through the generosity of a large number of the members of the association, who have contributed to special fund raised for the purpose, the cost of the outing has been reduced considerably this year, enabling the committee to cut the cost of tickets in half. This year, the price will be only 75 cents as against a charge in former years of $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00. From the president down to the office boy.

T. P. Hicks, of the Autocar Sales and Service company, is general chairman in charge of the outing this year.

his newly-appointed place as major in the aviation corps of the Tennessee national guard, was one of the leaders in securing a temporary airport at Memphis, Tenn., for the national guard, Saturday by Lt. A. Witherspoon, vice president and manager of the local Havery Furniture company.

Mr. Havery has been active in aviation circles for some time, having been a pilot during the world war. After returning to his country he continued his interest in aviation, and in one time had charge of advertising for the entire chain of Havery stores.

The proposed airport at Memphis will cost about $100,000 and will serve the city for the three-year period required. By that time it is hoped that a suitable place will have been secured for a permanent airport. It was at the recommendation of Major Havery that Armstrong Field was chosen as a temporary airport.

Grain Shortage Brings Moscow To War Bread

Moscow, June 2.—(AP)—Under a government ruling necessitated by the shortage of wheat available for export, Moscow bakers will sell semolina bread only. Wheat flour no longer is sold to the public.

Joseph Stalin, chairman of the communist party, interviewed on the difficulties faced by Soviet Russia in the grain situation, said that it was not due alone to the incompetence of officials in charge. Despite the fact that the grain crop the year reached pre-war figures, Soviet Russia's production of marketable grain fell to half its pre-revolutionary figure, and the Russian grain export is only one-third of that before the war.

All this, Stalin believes, results from the passing of the estates to large landowners and the farms of wealthy peasants which before the revolution produced the bulk of Russia's grain exports.

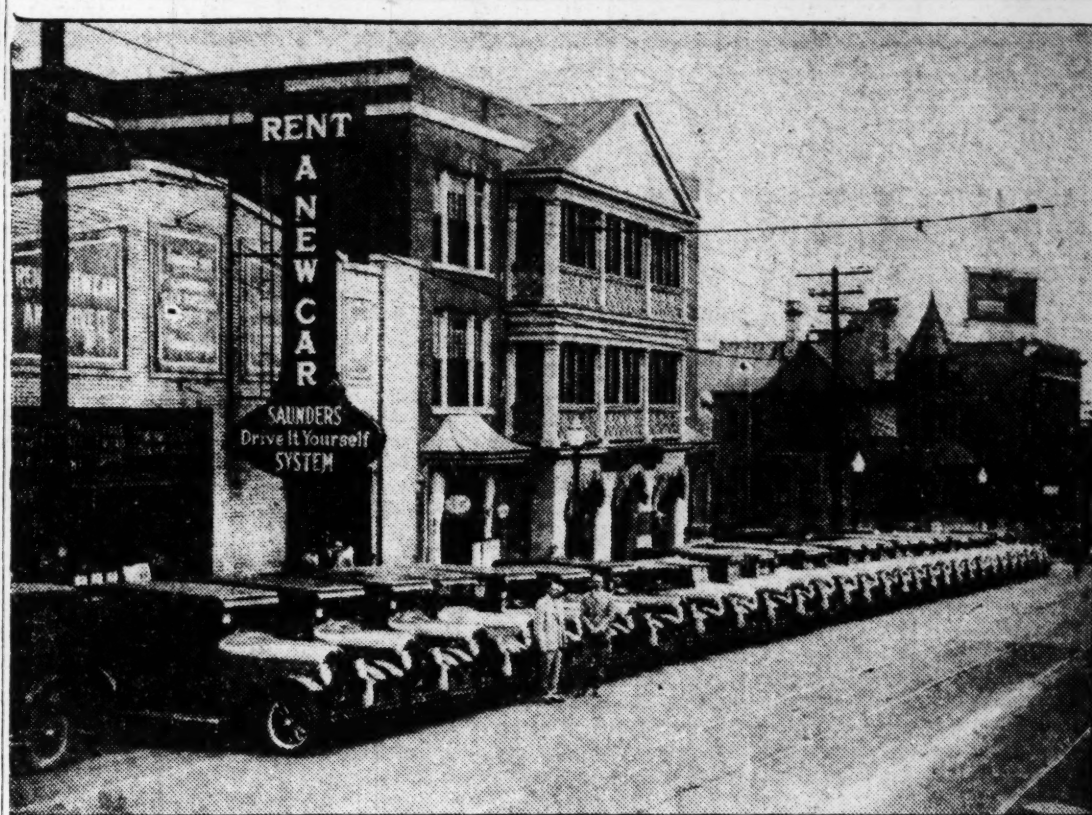

The communist leader said that the remedy was in the intensive organization of collective farms, units which must take the place of the old large estates. Available figures show that collective Soviet farms already produce 47 per cent of marketable grain while the small individual farms yield only 11 per cent of grain fit for the market.

Many prominent figures in the diplomatic and fashionable world were present.

Twenty-Eight Chryslers Delivered by Harrison

Here's a lot of cars. Yeah, twenty-eight of 'em, and all Chryslers, too. And it shows J. M. Harrison, president of the J. M. Harrison company, delivering to Saunders Drive-It-Yourself system here, their new fleet. This is said to be one of the largest single pleasure car deliveries heard of in southern automobile circles. Mr. Harrison operates one of the finest used car sales organizations in this section of the country and is looked upon as a real authority on used car merchandizing which, however, has nothing to do with this pot, for in addition to his extensive used car business, he is metropolitan dealer for Chrysler cars, under Harry Sommers, Inc., local distributors.

Fuel Pump Plays Big Part In Studebaker Records

Pumping gasoline to the carburetor for 5,000 miles of continuous operation at an average speed of more than a mile a minute is a test that no fuel feed system would ordinarily be called upon to deliver during the entire life of a car.

This was the comment of A. M. Babich, research engineer in charge of fuel pump development for the AC Spark Plug company, in discussing the recent remarkable speed and endurance of two fully equipped Studebaker Dictators that ran 5,000 miles at 63 and 61 miles an hour respectively at the Atlantic City speedway on April 29-30.

This achievement, Babich said, recalled the notable 25,000 miles of continuous running in less than 25,000 minutes by three stock Studebaker Commanders at Atlantic City a few months ago.

"Studebaker experts," he said, "spent a considerable period of time before they decided on a fuel supply system that would match the inherent stamina of their cars, and since its original test the AC fuel pump has been used as equipment on all Studebaker cars."

Another sensational record that established 12 new speed records for fully equipped closed stock cars, was made on April 29-30 by a Studebaker President model. This car traveled 2,000 miles in 1,554 minutes at an average speed of 77.12 miles an hour for the entire run.

"A used car properly bought is half sold when you buy it," said Conrad Baker, used car manager for the LeRoux Motor company, distributors for Whippet and Willys-Knight cars. "There isn't a car in our used car stock today that is over 30 days old, considering the fact that we have been trading extensively in new Whippets and Willys-Knights, owing to popular public acceptance on these new models, which is indicative of our sound merchandising principles. A careful check is made of the mechanical condition of every car before it is traded in. An itemized report of the condition of every car traded in is turned over to our shop and no car is placed on our showroom floor until it has been completely checked, assuring us of an immediate sale at a reasonable price and also assuring us of a satisfied customer."

Country in Prosperous Condition, Reports Rickenbacker After Tour

Prosperous conditions throughout the United States as a whole are reported by Captain Eddie V. Rickenbacker, who has just returned to Detroit from a tour of 102 cities in every state of the union during the past 89 days. He finds marked signs of progress in every section south of the Mason-Dixon line and east of the Mississippi, with the state of North Carolina a particularly bright spot and with Florida on the eve of new developments in car business.

Those of its recently so-called "boom" period.

While he finds the low economic point of the country in the Mississippi valley, he forecasts for that section spectacular developments as soon as safe and sane legislation for flood control becomes effective there.

Mr. Rickenbacker, who is assistant manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company in charge of LaSalle sales, made his tour of the entire country to confer with Cadillac-LaSalle distributors. The prosperity which he now finds general throughout the country he believes is based upon numerous factors of every kind for transportation and communication. He expects these conditions to be intensified in the immediate future by further improvements. These will be evidenced, he states, in transportation by rail, air and water, and in communication by mail, telephone, telegraph and radio, including television.

"I believe the southeastern section of the country will show a distinctly outstanding percentage of improvement during the next ten years," Mr. Rickenbacker states. "Much of this will be traceable to the building of improved highways, following the lead of California and many other sections of the country."

"The state of North Carolina is an outstanding demonstration of what effect improved highways have upon general economic conditions. Those in charge of the destinies of that state have seen fit to bond the state for the building of public schools and wide, paved highways. Knowing that the two will bring an influx of population which will pay for the improvements. As in many of the southern states, here millions of northern capital are being invested in textile mills and other forms of manufacture and there has been a big development of hydro-electric power."

"We believe that by the year of 1950, with the development of great super-highways, there will be 50 million automobiles in the United States. Some people find it hard to visualize such a condition. But one can today see that very condition in existence in California, where there are one motor car to every one and seven-eighths persons. If the same ratio held throughout the country there would now be not the actual 25 millions which we now have, nor the 50 millions which we conservatively estimate for 1950, but 65 million cars."

"During my recent trip I was able to visit and transact business in 102 cities centered in every state of the union in 89 days, traveling entirely by automobile and railroad. This is a direct proof of the time-saving value of our present methods of transportation and communication. Even ten years ago such a trip would have been an impossibility."

BRITISH WARSHIPS TO VISIT U. S. PORTS

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—British warships will visit a number of American ports this summer and fall. The British ambassador has informed government officials here that cruisers will visit two New England ports and that on Pacific coasts will stop at several California cities and also visit the Panama canal zone.

The Dauntless and Heliotrope will visit Bar Harbor, Maine, from August 4 to 13, and the Dauntless will be at Portsmouth, N. H., October 8 to 12. The Dispatch will be at San Diego, Calif., from August 6 to 8, San Francisco, September 15 to 21, and Los Angeles, September 22 to 25, besides two stops at the Panama canal zone July 28 and 29 and October 4 to 7. The Durban will go to San Diego from September 4 to 8 and the canal zone from September 20 to 22.

"I want," he continues, "every motorist who asks for Woco Pep to get Woco Pep. 'The king of motor fuel,' and I want him to know that he is getting it before he pays for it. The reputation of the Wofford Oil company and that of our dealer organization is too valuable for us to take chances of gasoline bootleggers selling the motoring public a substitute and using Woco Pep prestige to sell it with. Now, everybody can see Woco Pep in the pump. It's red—'For your protection.' By buying Woco Pep from a Woco Pep pump and watching the color, there's no chance of anyone getting anything but the original Woco Pep, with all of the good qualities for which Woco Pep is famous."

The change in the color of Woco Pep has been broadcast all over the state by an extensive advertising campaign. It has been announced over the radio. There are red signs on every Woco Pep pump and there are hundreds of Woco Pep stations all over the state.

TO PROTECT USERS OF WOCO PEP

If you are one of the thousands of motorists who rely upon Woco Pep to give you a quick start and a steady, trouble-proof trip, you must have noticed that this famous motor fuel has changed color in the past few days.

According to Wiley Moore, president of the Wofford Oil company, distributors for the state of Georgia, this change in color was made necessary by frequent attempts on the part of unscrupulous people to sell weak, second-run gasoline as genuine Woco Pep.

"Red—For Your Protection," is the keynote of the entire campaign, and Mr. Moore assures us that it means exactly what it says. No change has been made in Woco Pep except in its color. It is still the same, perfect benzol blend motor fuel which is used in greater quantities than any other product of its kind in the state of Georgia. Its extra mileage, instant pick-up, remarkable pep and power and perfect combustion have not been affected in the least by the change in color.

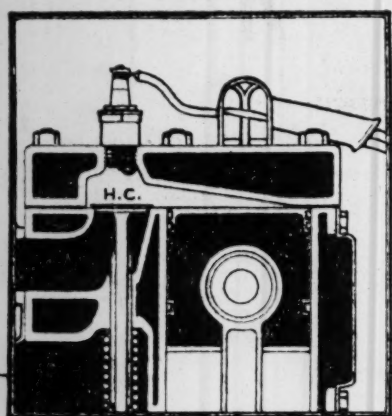

It is typical of Mr. Moore and his organization, among which is numbered hundreds of splendid dealers throughout the state, that they should take such vigorous steps to protect the interests of Woco Pep users. Mr. Moore never does anything by half. Having a good product—one so good that it is being imitated—he is determined that every user of that product shall get exactly what he pays for.

Mr. Moore claims—and thousands of motorists in this state will agree with him—that Woco Pep is the finest motor fuel ever sold in Georgia. Its past performance has made it the leader in its line and, as Mr. Moore says, "The better your product and the more popular it is, the more people there are trying to ride in on its popularity."

"I want," he continues, "every motorist who asks for Woco Pep to get Woco Pep. 'The king of motor fuel,' and I want him to know that he is getting it before he pays for it. The reputation of the Wofford Oil company and that of our dealer organization is too valuable for us to take chances of gasoline bootleggers selling the motoring public a substitute and using Woco Pep prestige to sell it with. It will take you only a short time to get three new subscribers to The Constitution, because everyone knows that The Atlanta Constitution is Atlanta's outstanding newspaper. Besides helping you earn your "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS," the people who sign the agreement or contract for you are receiving the news of the world, interesting reading articles and features for every member of the family for six months.

Start out right now! It's more like fun than work. Get a contract book, secure from good, reliable, financially responsible subscribers, "signature of each," bring or send it to The Constitution office. After the subscriptions are verified and found "O. K.," the wagon is yours.

Read These Instructions Carefully:

Out-of-town workers must turn their coupon book of subscriptions, after it has been filled out with the required number of subscriptions, each signed by the subscriber himself, over to the local Constitution dealer for his acceptance of the new subscriptions.

Newsdealer will indicate his acceptance by writing on the back of the subscription agreement "O. K., accepted by me," and sign his name. Then the book with required number of accepted subscriptions to be sent to The Constitution.

COASTER WAGONS will be shipped by express (collect) to out-of-town workers. Those who live in Atlanta and suburban towns will get the wagons at The Constitution office.

WEDNESDAY
JUNE 6th, 3:00 P. M.

28 ACRES fronting on Wieuca Road 1,600 feet, located between Peachtree and Roswell Roads, known as the Bruce Mill property, a beautiful home overlooking Wieuca lake. This property has been subdivided into tracts ranging from three to ten acres and we consider this the best opportunity the buying public will ever have to buy acreage in this well known and highly dignified section.

AT 4 P. M. on the same date we will sell 422 feet, fronting Wieuca Road opposite the above; also at the same time we will sell two lots across from the home site, fronting Wieuca Road
1,600 feet. Signs on property.

WIEUCA ROAD needs no introduction to those who are familiar with North Side property.
All you need to do is to make investigations.
Drive out and look this property over Sunday afternoon. Our representatives will be on hand and explain details of the sale and also show you the property.

Terms will be reasonable.

Quality Pays!

It's quality that makes the modern automobile give pleasure and satisfaction after thousands of miles of service. It's quality that makes a good suit of clothes look well after months of hard wear—so with shoes, or rugs, or furniture, or phonographs. And it's quality that gives our customers the utmost in pleasure and permanent satisfaction in home ownership. We won't build on any but a quality basis — for we know that quality pays —

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Mrs. M.D. Corbitt New Manager of Rankin - Whitten

Appointment of Mrs. Matilda Dick Corbitt, pioneer woman real estate executive in Atlanta, as manager of the newly established public relations department of Rankin-Whitten Realty company, was announced Saturday by officials of the prominent concern.

Probably the most widely experienced woman in all divisions of the local realty market, Mrs. Corbitt is especially well equipped for this public relations work and the handling of high-class apartments and homes, both for sale and lease, in which she will specialize. One of the first women in Atlanta to engage in the realty and sales end of the business, her success is well known.

The Rankin-Whitten Realty company are outstanding as agents for the large north side apartment houses and homes, having 30 different apartment buildings under their management.

Their business success and constantly increasing clientele is indicated in the long established activities of the concern, having steadily maintained a liberal policy toward clients it is particularly with this in mind that Mrs. Corbitt has been put in charge of the public relations department to cement the friendly relations already existing with their many customers and to increase their numbers. J. H. Whitten, in speaking of this new department in his business with Mrs. Corbitt at his head, stated that this was necessary to keep in line with the progress of Atlanta and the growth of their business.

TO LAUNCH SIGN REMOVAL DEMAND

Beginning Monday, a concerted effort to enhance the beauty of Atlanta vacant property by removal of all "for sale" signs will be launched under the auspices of the Atlanta Real Estate Salesmen's association, according to announcement Saturday by C. A. Blanchard, publicity chairman.

In a statement setting forth the benefits that will accrue to all persons involved by elimination of property signs, J. Clayton Burke, president of the salesmen's association, urged property owners in Fulton and DeKalb counties to cooperate with the association and other organizations that have pledged their support to the movement intended to make Atlanta more attractive.

"Displaying of signs on property that is for sale is not an advantage to the owner, but a distinct disadvantage," Mr. Burke asserted. "Throughout the Florida boom there were practically no 'for sale' signs visible on the property there, yet everyone knows how rapid the turnover was and that the absence of these signs was not a hindrance to quick sale or enhancement of property values," he said.

"It should be borne in mind by the property owner that where 'for sale' signs are in evidence the prospective buyer gets the impression that the property is in distress and is apt to refuse to negotiate unless a sacrifice price is made."

Mr. Burke urges property owners to insist that brokers who list their land for sale do not depreciate its value by placing signs upon the premises and that the signs now on the property be removed. In an address before the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs last Thursday, Mr. Burke set forth the advantages of a city free of unsightly property signs. He told of the necessity of looking up the "advertising Atlanta" campaign by making the city itself attractive to visitors.

The movement is fast becoming a city-wide affair, as well as gaining popularity in the two counties embraced by the salesmen's association. Aside from the various societies aiding in the movement, support has been pledged by Mrs. R. J. Little, chairman of the clean-up Atlanta campaign. The week beginning Monday, June 4, has been designated by the salesmen's group as "sign removal week."

A meeting of the association will be held at 7:30 o'clock Monday night, in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce building, when further plans will be perfected for carrying on the policies of the organization. Brokers and property owners are invited to attend.

Where Atlanta's Heaviest Construction Activity Progresses as Hundreds of Workers Labor Steadily

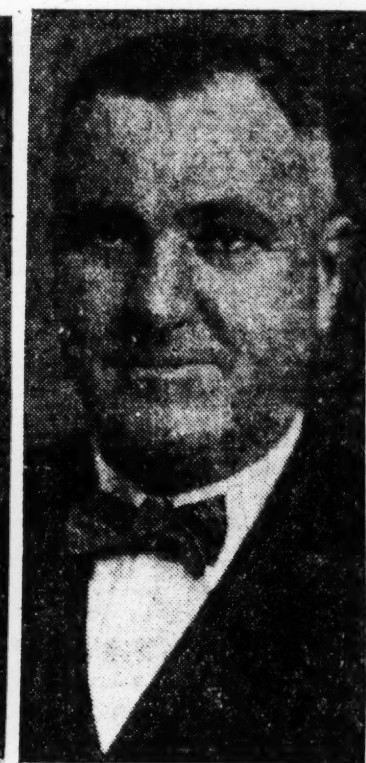

City's largest building projects advance steadily under hum of construction activity. On the left is seen the foundation for the stores that will line the front of the huge Shrine mosque being erected on the northwest corner of Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue. The scene on the right shows another story being added to the Southern railway development on Madison and Mitchell streets, completion of which will give Atlanta's south side what is said to be the largest office building in point of capacity in the southern states.

Holtsinger-Lummus Auction Garden Hills Lots on Friday

COLONEL F. M. HOLTSINGER.

Sale of 40 home sites and other property in Garden Hills, one of Atlanta's most beautiful residential sections, is planned for next Friday and Saturday, according to announcement by Colonel F. M. Holtsinger, popular auctioneer of Holtsinger-Lummus Auction company, one of the longest established concerns in this section.

W. A. LUMMUS.

Garden Hills is in the heart of Atlanta's fast growing north side residential area. It has witnessed steady improvement over a period of many years, with erection of distinctive homes and ornamentation of grounds, that has caused notable enhancement of property values. Street improvements, including water and sewage piping and all preliminary developments, have been laid and paid for, removing all obstacles in the way of continued rapid home construction.

BROOKWOOD HILLS IS ACTIVE SCENE

Activity in Brookwood Hills, Atlanta's fast-growing northside subdivision, is approaching the midseason peak. It was indicated in an announcement Saturday of construction projects and a list of residential and home-site sales by Lawrence Burdett, of the Burdett Realty company, well-known developers of the subdivision.

Sales aggregating more than $122,000 were reported by Mr. Burdett. The spring construction program in the beautiful Brookwood Hills section reveals 14 homes now being erected. All of these residences are to be occupied by the owners as soon as completed.

In addition to this construction work, concrete paving and sidewalks are now being installed on the north end of Huntington road, connecting with Wakefield drive at the swimming pool. Brookwood Hills is one of the most completely developed subdivisions in the city, successive units of the property being opened up as development of the first sections is completed.

The list of recent sales of Brookwood Hills property announced Saturday follows:

The house . . . whether it be home or rental property . . . is badly depreciated in the eye of the public when the roof is bad.

Re-roofing is our specialty. We carry the most complete stock of roofing materials . . . roll or composition shingles, in the Southeast.

Our workmen are expert and understand at a glance just what the requirements are. In fact, each job is practically "tailor-made."

There are some who do not find it convenient to pay all cash. To such people we are in position to divide payments over a long period to suit.

Paint has a hard mission to fulfill. You insist it must look well, wear well, cover much surface, and cost just as little as possible.

Very exacting requirements for paints that are not equal to the Tripod standard of quality.

BY STANLEY W. PRENSHIL,
 Associated Press Financial Editor.
 New York, June 2.—(AP)—Speculation for the advance was resumed with considerable violence in today's brief session of the stock market. Enormous buying operations in stocks in which William C. Durant has a large interest led many houses to characterize the session as a "Durant market." Nearly two score issues were elevated to new high ground, with the gains ranging from 1 to 8 1/2 points. The trading was unusually brisk for a half holiday session, the day's sales aggregating 1,738,300 shares.

Money Market High.
 Wall street recently had recovered from the shock of seeing call money posted at 6 1/2 per cent, the highest price in seven years, for the second time within a few days. Sentiment leaned to the theory that credit conditions would become easier when the month-end settlements were over and the way and the dividend and interest checks returned to the banks, but further credit restriction measures were looked for in some conservative quarters.

The Rise in the Durant Stocks
 was construed in many quarters as an indication that the outside public was still willing to buy stocks sponsored by powerful market interests. Several of the monthly bank interest, however, called attention to the dangers of speculation and urged caution in the purchase of securities at current levels.

G. M. C. Is Favorite.
 General Motors was one of the day's favorites. Getting off to a slow start, the stock suddenly shot forward in the last half hour of trading and ran up over 6 points to 200, the final transaction being the sale of 5,000 shares at the top price. Hupp reached new high ground at 65. Chrysler and Dodge Brothers preferred were heavy on profit-taking. In the accessory group, Eaton Axle, Martin Parry, Briggs Manufacturing and Stromberg Carburetor reached new high ground.

Copper Suddenly Came to Life and the leadership of American Smelting, which advanced more than 5 points to a record at 201 1/2. Anaconda climbed more than 2 points to within a fraction of the year's high at 74. Magma, Kennecott and Cerro de Pasco each advanced about 2 points.

Rumors in Radio.
 Unconfirmed reports that the Radio Corporation would sell its communications business to International Telephone and enter into a merger or some close working arrangement with Victor Talking Machine company brought about an advance in all three stocks. International Telephone soared to a new high at 105 1/2. Radio 107-8 and Victor 109-10, after establishing a new record high at 224, closing a point below that figure for a net gain of 3 points. Victor closed 6 1/4 points higher at 99 3/4, touching 101 1/2. Western Union, which is reported to be meeting heavy radio competition, sold down to a new low at 150.

Heavy Buying of Gimbel Brothers, believed to be the account of the Sears-Robuck interests which recently acquired representation on the board of directors, sent that stock up to a new high at 55 1/4. American many other issues to reach new high ground were American Beet Sugar preferred, Burns Brothers B, Case Threshing Machine, Fox Film, Paramount-Famous Players, Detroit Edison and Frank G. Shattuck.

Rails Held Steady with trading quiet. Except for a jump of 10 points in the Union Pacific, the railroads were moved within narrow and irregular limits. Sterling cables ruled unchanged around $4.88-3/8.

Chrysler and Dodge Merger Recentered First Real Step in Elimination of Automobile Companies—Three Concerns Now Dominate Field.

BY R. L. BARNUM
 New York, June 2.—(Special).—With Wednesday a holiday this has been a short week but from a street viewpoint it has been an unusually interesting one. Returning to full five-hour sessions and Saturday trading in the first week of June and a half hours last Monday that the stock market had returned to sanity. In the last half hour last Monday, however, call money which had again opened at 6 1/2 per cent jumped to 6 1/2 per cent, the highest rate since July of 1921, and the resulting expression in Wall street, "the stock market fell out of bed."

A continuation of the heavy wave of selling was expected Tuesday but instead the market opened higher and resumed its advance stimulated by the Chrysler-Dodge merger. There was some easing in call money but time money worked firmer. This last named development, however, was completely overshadowed by the Chrysler-Dodge merger. At the close of the week many Wall street people had their mind on the money market; the average man in the financial district here, however, was still discussing the automobile merger, its possible outcome on the companies involved and the industry as a whole.

First Real Step.
 Wall street is agreed that the merger of Chrysler and Dodge is the first real step in the long-discussed elimination of automobile companies with three big companies dominating the field, General Motors, Ford and the new company to be taken over by Chrysler and Dodge. This will make for stabilization in the industry. For the longer lead ahead, however, some Wall street people can see a repetition of what has happened in the past quarter of a century in the steel industry.

What has been going on in the automobile industry the past few years is very much like the situation that existed when J. P. Morgan formed the United States Steel Corporation. To end ruinous price cutting the newly formed steel corporation took over all of the important plants in the country. For years there was peace, harmony and profits. Such conditions, however, resulted in a steady growth of small independent companies such as Bethlehem. When the steel corporation was formed, Bethlehem was not only a small independent company but a very sick one, not expected to live.

True Competition.
 Today Bethlehem and a number of other large independents have brought about true competition with each other and the steel corporation. As a result of the better understanding in the steel industry created through the American Iron and Steel Institute there is not the same degree of ruinous price cutting that existed in 1900; but it is equally true that only this week the chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute pointed out to the members of that organization that the quarrel between the two companies is the result of the fact that because of overproduction facilities and lack of efficiency the return today on capital invested in the steel industry in this country is smaller than in any other important line.

Thus it appears that while the automobile industry is likely to gain temporary stabilization by this week's mergers, and other automobile mergers, likely to follow, in the end there will be a return to fundamental competition among all industries, the personnel of individual companies will be forced for a time a widespread merger movement in any industry eliminates competition.

Companies Too Big.
 Under such conditions, however, some companies get too big and suffer increasingly from poor management, thus inviting competition or merger. As of May 1 the total value of listed securities was $54,818,925,850 and total brokers' loans $4,907,782,589. The total value represents a gain of about $2,500,000,000 in one month. While the value of brokers' loans to the stock market, there never has been a time when expert opinion in Wall

Chicago, June 2.—(AP)—Bullish crop reports from the northwest carried wheat all hereafter this season carried wheat prices sharply upward today, with buying much larger than witnessed of late. Estimates were current that the 1928 Canadian wheat yield would be 8,000,000 to 14,000,000 bushels under the 1927 total.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 1 1/2 to 1 7/8, and higher. Corn finished 1 1/2 to 1 7/8 up, oats at 1 1/4 to 3 1/4 advance and provisions varying from 5s decline to a rise of 2c.

About the most explicit details of adverse crop conditions in spring wheat territory came from a leading authority who wired that deterioration of wheat throughout the section surrounding Clark, S. D., is rapid except where local showers occurred recently, and that even such strips are becoming dry, with the greater part of the acreage turning yellow.

Corn and oats rose with wheat. It was estimated that farm reserves of corn are 85,000,000 bushels less than the previous month's showing, and that farm reserves of oats were diminished 38,000,000 bushels. The Smith-Vinso bills, which failed of passage in congress, and which provided among other things for the creation of a central committee, limitations of contracts and deliveries in the south as well as in New York.

The petition, which probably will be acted upon by the board at its meeting next week, points out that while the bills are in many respects not less harsh and that some provisions are unnecessary to prevent market manipulation, practical cotton men, using them as a working basis, would adopt certain provisions and put them into prompt operation, thus placing the exchange in a favorable position to handle whatever legislation is introduced next fall made to conform more exactly to business methods.

The petition sets forth that sentiment is almost unanimous in favor of establishing a control committee and limitation, while demand for southern delivery on New York contracts is said to be more insistent and widespread than ever before.

"It must be recognized by practical cotton men, however," the petition continues, "that the immediate effect of accepting the first two without the latter two would be to place the exchange in a position to handle a large proportion of our business to other exchanges who do have deliveries in the south and are thus able to deliver on their contracts, and no cotton contract can possibly survive such a condition."

It is requested that the amendments to the by-laws incorporating these changes be put to a vote of the membership and that if approved they be placed into operation as soon as practical a second contract governed by the new by-laws and the membership continued as long as the membership desires.

It Is Not Enough That He Should Carry a Burden—He Must Carry It While Walking on a Tight-Rope

Advice to Millionaires

By Arnold Bennett

HERE are some letters the receipt of which may bring about a very severe ordeal. An accountancy clerk in a store—let me call him Mr. Peterkin, for that might have been his name—was having a hasty breakfast by artificial light in the tiny sitting room of his small flat when Mrs. Peterkin suddenly broke off from brushing his overcoat because she heard the fall of letters through the front door. She returned to the room, reading as she walked a letter addressed to herself, and negligently dropped onto the table a letter addressed to Mr. Peterkin. Which letter Mr. Peterkin negligently opened. He was thinking of the matter under discussion between them, namely the possibility of his being dismissed from his situation through no fault of his own.

The letter was from a firm of solicitors. Mr. Peterkin read: "With reference to the sudden death this afternoon of your second cousin, our client Mr. Claud P. Peterkin, of which you have no doubt heard"—
"I say, Sal," said Mr. Peterkin, "that skinflint Claud Peterkin has gone and died."

Mr. Peterkin continued to read: "—we beg to inform you that he died intestate, and that as you are his only next-of-kin the whole estate will come to yourself. We had an interview with our client only yesterday morning, when he talked about making a will. Perhaps you will favor us with an interview. We may state that the deceased's estate was much larger than is generally supposed. Its total valuation for probate will certainly exceed £1,000,000."

There is nothing unprecedented about such a letter. Similar letters have been received by all sorts of simple and poor persons. Similar events are a commonplace of the newspapers.

Now Mr. Peterkin is all at sea. He believes, but he cannot realize. He knows what a million looks like on paper—the figure 1 followed by six naughts—but he does not know what a million is. In a week he begins to know. In a month he knows much more and better. . . . Scrip is his. Properties are his. Responsibilities are his. But he is still quite at sea. He completely does not know what to do. He only knows what not to do, namely, remain a clerk in a store. He is accustomed to industry; he likes the work. Why, therefore, should he not stick to work? Well, there is one sole reason; but a very good one. It would be entirely absurd for a millionaire to remain a clerk in a store. He would be laughed at, and rightly. He, therefore, becomes an idler on the face of the earth.

Or take the instance, less dramatic but more ordinary, of Mr. Paul. Mr. Paul owns a business. The business has had its ups and downs, and more than once Mr. Paul has feared the worst. But gradually the business has settled itself into a growing success. And at one year's end Mr. Paul discovers that he has made really a lot of money, and that the prospects for the coming year are that it will immensely surpass the year just concluded; and so on.

Mr. Paul must enlarge his borders. He has available money which he does not know what to do with. He foresees a future of opulence. Circumstances and figures and bank balances compel him to believe what he has always been afraid to believe, namely that he is a rich man and will steadily develop into a richer man, and a richer man and yet richer one, and soon even a millionaire. The chickens are hatched and he can safely count them. No longer need he consider expense.

And as with Mr. Peterkin so with Mr. Paul. Mr. Paul is quite at sea. They are at sea, too, in the same boat. They know how to earn money, the one on a small scale, the other on a scale relatively large. But they possess no skill, because they have no practice in the difficult art of expenditure—I mean spending money without making fools of themselves, or not spending it without making fools of themselves. For the newly rich may turn out to be mean, or parsimonious. Yes, the thing happens, and more frequently than you might suppose.

The lamentable trait may show itself right at the beginning of the affair. Any person with a well-poised mind will celebrate the accession to wealth by a burst of extravagance and usually by a burst of extravagance at table. A magnificently foolish banquet and general spree! He will do this, not because it is logical or unavoidable, but because it is natural and human, the result of a deep instinct. And in his foolishness he will be wise. Beware of the man who says: "Why make a fuss? We will go on just as usual." Feel sorry for him! He is unhuman. And let him beware of himself. The chances are that he is already on the terrible road to the desert of meanness.

Not that riches are invariably a temptation to meanness. Far from it. But riches may disclose a tendency hitherto hidden. A poor man, who has to reckon every penny and every cent, is bound to be careful, and may be pardoned if in the judgment of his friends he is over-careful. A man whose business is not yet solidly established ought to be careful; he is to be excused if he saves every penny and every cent in order to put them into his business. He may be mean without suspecting that he is of a mean disposition. But when the need for parsimony is past, and the habit still continues, then you may rely on it that either he is the slave of habit or he enjoys saving for its own sake. With many saving is a passion—one of the strongest passions. They will save and save, and if they are not saving they are unhappy.

And wealthy men will practice saving to excess for another reason—the fear of being overtaken by poverty. Poor, these same men accepted risks with blithe equanimity. Rich, they exist in a permanent state of being afraid. They are afraid even of revolutions and the total destruction of the civilized fabric of society—of the awful moment when money will not buy bread nor purchase immunity from a violent end at the hands of an infuriated mob. Nevertheless they will persist in adding money to money, against the day when money will be futile. It is very funny—to all of us who are not rich.

I might describe the contrary case of the profuse, extravagant, reckless and thriftless man who by a series of follies or ill-judged generousities can and does squander even a vast fortune before you can say "knife." There have been such men, and there will be again. But the aforementioned examples of the extremes of human nature are less interesting and certainly less profitable to study, than those of the normal.

I have likened the case of the poor man who suddenly inherits a million to the predicament of being all at sea in a boat. There is no great danger in being at sea in a boat, provided the boat is not too small and the sea not too rough. The trouble, however, with this particular boat is that it has no rudder. Purpose in life should be the rudder of the boat. Before he inherited, the man had a clear and important purpose, which purpose directed the major part of all his activities.

His purpose was to make enough money to live on and to provide for old age. He tried to amuse himself; he had notions about duty to his family. But his principal preoccupation was always the very difficult task (in a competitive world) of getting money out of other people. In a moment, in a day, by the perusal of a letter, or an interview with a lawyer, his purpose is utterly destroyed, his ambition annihilated, the whole trend of his thoughts most forcibly and sweepingly twisted round. He may be likened to a child who has received a marvelous and complicated toy which he simply does not know how to play with. He wakes up in the morning with the most desolating of all questions in his soul: "What am I going to do with myself today?"

You may say that he should devote himself to the administration of his fortune. But in the first place he will be obliged, at the beginning, to leave the bulk of his job to others, for the reason that he does not know enough about it to do it himself. And in the second place the administration of one's fortune is not and ought not to be a whole time job, or a principal job, for any normal, commonsense man. It is a secondary enterprise. The primary enterprise is to spend one's income with wisdom, in such a manner as to obtain the finest results. The income must be spent; it cries aloud to be spent. To allow it to accumulate would be the passive policy of a coward, an idler, and a fool. And your normal man is none of these.

You may say that a millionaire ought to be a philanthropist, and that in philanthropy there is an unlimited field for dissipating income. There is. But to be a philanthropist without being fatuous is by no means so easy as the innocent may imagine. To succeed in the role takes years of apprenticeship; for years the ingenuous millionaire, unable to differentiate between honest claims and dishonest, may well be the dupe of cranks, mad men, mad women, and individuals whose sole secret aim is directly or indirectly their own aggrandizement.

Again, the best intentioned philanthropy, especially philanthropy in the narrow sense and on a big scale, may produce social consequences the very opposite of what the philanthropist intended. And again, the unhappy millionaire may have no natural taste for philanthropy.

Then you may say: "Let the fellow travel." Useless! Travel, except to the born explorer and observer, cannot be a purpose in life. It is as sensible to tell a man to be a traveler as to tell him to be a poet. Besides, travel is too cheap. Or you may say: "Let him improve his mind." Precisely the same objections will apply to this suggestion. It is not enough, save for the born student; and anyhow it is too cheap.

What is the unhappy millionaire to do? I can only inform you as to what he actually does. He gives himself several homes; he engages a cohort of servants; he eats too much—till his doctors order him to eat nothing. And probably he becomes the capitalist behind some business, with the object of increasing an income which is already too unwieldy for him to handle.

The man who makes a very large fortune in business is infinitely less to be commiserated than the man who "comes into" a very large fortune or acquires the same by one or two lucky strokes of speculation. For however rapidly he may have made his fortune, the process was gradual, and he has had the chance of accustoming his back to the horrid weight of money; his habits have been altered little by little.

Nor have riches driven him from his usual activities. The necessity for work may have vanished, but circumstances have not suddenly deprived him of the opportunity to do the kind of work which he probably enjoys doing and unquestionably knows how to do. A man whose sure income is a thousand a week cannot decently stay in a situation worth at most a thousand a year; but a man whose sure income is five thousand a week can continue at the head of a growing industrial or commercial enterprise without feeling self-conscious or incurring the risk of sneers.

Nevertheless the latter, if he persists in a course of conduct which inevitably leads to increased wealth, is only laying up trouble for himself and postponing the day upon which he must come to terms with his destiny. It has been said that money attracts money. True! A self-made millionaire—if he is not an idiot, which he rarely is—will have to reconcile himself to a burden which yearly grows heavier. But the mere incubus of the burden will sooner or later induce him to give less time to the task of adding to it and more time to the task of bearing it. Although millionaires may work hard, and still harder, even unto death, they do not, when age comes upon them, work as hard at their business as they once did, because the exacting profession of being a millionaire absorbs more and more of their energy.

Millionairism ought to be a profession; it must be if it is to take its fair share in the vast labor of the scheme of evolution.

THE GEORGIA MOUNTAINEER.

Where Phoebus' smiles are first displayed
And blood-warm kisses freely laid
On Nature's cheeks,
There dwells a people proud and plain,
Of hardy stock and pure of strain,
Among the peaks.

There are no mansions, money bought;
No man-made cities: God has wrought
The sun-kissed hills
In fashion such—Oh rugged land!—
To keep it safely from the hand
That beauty kills.

A stranger wand'ring through their trails
Will find a comradeship that fails
Not to ensnare:
The world's small gestures pass them by
As meaningless, as lone and high
They're anchored there.

Their ingrained honor stands four deep;
A word's a thing to hold and keep Forever true;
A man's a man for what he's worth;
No discount's made for wealth nor birth;
Their creed's to do.

If I should stand in danger dire,
And pluck and nerve I should require,
I do not know
Of one on whom I'd sooner pin
My faith to come and stick and win
With blow on blow.

Their father's father's fathers went
And roused the red man from his tent
And built a home;
Their world's a world their forbears won;
Their day's a day from sun to sun
Neath God's blue dome.

Use 'Em--and Lose 'Em By Thomas Kingston

OR the first time John Merton had an office of his own. Until his promotion he had done his work at a desk in the large general room. When there were letters to be dictated he pushed a button and any one of the four stenographers answered the summons. Now he was to have a secretary to aid him with his larger duties.

"We pay thirty a week," his chief told Merton. "The office manager will inquire of the agencies and send to you any likely applicants, or you can pick a secretary from among the girls in the outside office, if any of them has seemed unusually competent. As a rule I like to promote people already in our employ. It helps the morale. But suit yourself."

Merton settled to consideration of the four girls who had done his letters before he came to this seat of the mighty.

He decided on Miss Crampton. She dressed quietly, her voice was pleasant; she was an excellent stenographer; she didn't ask for attention, just did her work. Yes, Miss Crampton would do.

He lifted the receiver and broke the news to Miss Eggleston. The office manager was a dried kernel of a woman who also had a poor opinion of her sex from long years of trying to make expert clerks and stenographers out of raw material. She held that Ziegfeld had an easy job; all he needed was beauty while she had to look for brains—try and find them! But Miss Eggleston nodded approval into the telephone as she listened to Merton.

Miss Crampton came in at once. Merton gave instructions concerning a new card index system for keeping track of small orders and told her to ask for any supplies she might need. She listened with quiet attention and a little later Merton had momentarily forgotten her as he went through the mail which she swiftly opened and arranged for his reading.

At 5 o'clock he found that he had done an excellent day's work. On his desk lay the crisp pile of typed letters dictated early in the afternoon. It was closing time, but Miss Crampton waited without trace of impatience for him to sign his correspondence. Then she took the letters to her own desk to make ready for the mail clerk.

"I'll take care of these, you need not wait," he said without looking up.

There was no response. Merton swung about to find Miss Crampton looking out across the hills. He said again, "You needn't wait, Miss Crampton. I'll take care of these letters."

The girl flushed slightly as she turned, and for the briefest moment Merton had a glimpse of a young woman very different from the remote and efficient Miss Crampton of office hours. The color in her cheeks, the widened eyes still in the spell of a world outside office walls; these had for the moment transfigured her. Why, she was beautiful! But instantly the glory had departed. It was the coolly remote Miss Crampton ried and that finished him. Had a chance at the San Francisco branch. Wife didn't want to go so far away; all her friends in the east. Tom passed it up. Now he was in a rut and there to stay. Yes, women played the devil with a man's game.

An unusual pressure of business

And he drew her down into his arms, where she lay like a tired child.

who answered, "I'd rather wait, if you please."

Merton understood that. The girl, he thought, was as interested in her new job as he was in his. Good stuff. She was sure to be a great help. She finished the letters at half past five. Merton lingered after she had gone.

It was pleasant to sit in the quiet office and cast up mental accounts.

Yes, he'd done well and there was more ahead. Next year he might be sent to London to buck up the office there. Lucky he hadn't married. There was Tom Thorpe. Steady old hack. Was with the company before Merton and doing well, but he mar-developed in November. Milton Hughes, the second vice president who handled the South American trade, had a misbehaving appendix and the doctor said he would be laid up a month at least after the operation. Merton had to take over Hughes' work. At times he found himself almost swamped under the mass of detail and he knew he would have been overwhelmed had it not been for Miss Crampton. She understood his regular work nearly as well as he did and almost without his knowing it she began to handle all but the most important matters as a regular part of her day's work.

They were at their desks early and on many evenings the light in Merton's office made a little square of radiance in the black face of the building long after the night watchman had come on duty.

He took to cutting down lunch time to ten minutes; a dash to the nearest cafeteria for a cup of coffee and a sandwich. The eating place was crowded, the food unappetizing and finally he decided he'd be better off without lunch. So he kept on at his desk.

Miss Crampton had also cut lunch time to a minimum. But she never went entirely without eating and to all appearances she was standing the strain better than was Merton. His nerves were getting edgy and the end of one particularly exasperating morning when everything had gone wrong found him snappish over the telephone and ready to quarrel with any one who gave him half a chance. Once or twice he was curt with Miss Crampton, but she appeared not to notice and he had the grace to feel ashamed. At 1 o'clock he rose wearily.

"I'm going to knock off for half an hour," he said. "Think I need some air and a cup of coffee or something to straighten me out." He paused and added, "Sorry I've been such a bear today."

He was reaching for his overcoat when Miss Crampton stopped him.

"It's all slush underfoot and beginning to rain," she said. "Don't go out. Just open the window a moment and do a deep breathing exercise. Keep your back turned and don't look around until I say you may."

She spoke with brisk authority and Merton stared. But somehow he liked being ordered about by Miss Crampton. He felt the strain relax and even managed a laugh. He did his breathing exercises faithfully and was contemplating some mild calisthenics when Miss Crampton told him time was up. On his desk was a white square of napkin, a plate with three sandwiches and a cup of hot tea. Miss Crampton's desk was similarly equipped.

"Lunch is served," she announced.

It seemed to Merton that it was the first food he had enjoyed in weeks. There was more tea in the thermos and when he had finished he lighted a cigarette with a deep sigh of content. He tried for words—a phrase to express his surprise and gratitude. It had been a long time since he had been "looked after" in this way by a woman. It was—Miss Crampton forestalled him.

"I'm delighted that my plan seems to have worked," she said smiling. And then at once she was the cool, impersonal Miss Crampton as she went on. "Please understand me, Mr. Merton. I have a very business-like motive in all this. If you go on as you have been going these last weeks you'll break sooner or later. That will be as bad for me as for you—probably worse.

"If we can handle the two jobs successfully it is sure to mean promotion for you and if I have done my part I shall expect to share somewhat in the result. I propose that we lunch here every day until conditions are normal. It's no trouble to get the things and we save time and have better food. We'll make it a kind of training table.

"And one thing more: you know what I'm doing. Don't you think we could have a stenographer in two or three times a week to help with the letters and filing? If we are going to win the fight we'll have to organize."

It was herself that she was looking after; he was only a cog in the wheel of her ambition. He sat so long thinking that he found Miss Crampton looking at him curiously. He tried to be as businesslike as she.

"You're quite right," he said. "We must organize. I'll see about stenographic help at once, and I'll be most grateful for the lunches. Of course, you must let me pay my share."

He was so stiff about it that Miss Crampton smiled.

Things moved smoothly for the next ten days. Merton found that he was looking forward to lunch hour with the anticipation of a small boy. They talked of books they had read, plays they had seen, and in general explored each other's likes and dislikes over a wide field.

Once or twice Merton tried more personal topics, but Miss Crampton avoided them with easy skill that made the avoidance hardly perceptible. Yet the stone wall was there. What was it, Merton asked himself, that he had first liked about Miss Crampton? O, yes. There was nothing personal about her contact with the men she worked for—she did her work like a man and asked no favors. Now he wasn't so certain that this was a virtue.

But it wasn't until Merton spoke to his chief—old Gannon—about more salary for Miss Crampton that he really woke up. The older man listened carefully to his recital and Merton warmed up as he went along.

Gannon smiled. "Go slow, young man. You sound more like a lover hymning his mistress than a business man discussing salaries and employment policy. I know about Miss Crampton. We'll give her a raise, but we won't put her on an assistant manager's salary, and what's more, being your secretary is the best job she gets here."

Merton interrupted to protest, but the older man rode him down.

"Don't misunderstand. I know just how able Miss Crampton is. But she's a woman and a mighty attractive one. Probably she's saving up now to marry some nincompoop with half her brains. She's a woman, and I won't put a woman in a key job. You can't depend on 'em. If you think you can't get along without Miss Crampton you'd better marry her yourself. Probably spoil a good secretary to make a second rate wife, but according to you she's got all the virtues any woman ever possessed—and more."

Merton sat looking at his chief with a startled expression. Gannon thought his bright young man was daunted by his tirade, but Merton had forgotten most of that. It was the suggestion that he marry Miss Crampton that had overwhelmed him.

"Marry her, marry her—" His brain was given up to that; it would not function on anything else.

He halted outside his office door. What was he going to do? You couldn't very well rush in on a young woman and say, "My dear, they won't give you much of a raise and they won't give you a bigger job, but I'll marry you."

With an effort he pulled himself together and went in.

Miss Crampton's head was bent over a pile of letters and orders.

Cool, impersonal, businesslike, ambitious. She wasn't thinking about marriage unless—what was it Gannon had said? "Probably saving up to marry some nincompoop."

Miss Crampton looked up just then and arose hastily at sight of his haggard face.

"Mr. Merton!" she exclaimed, and took two steps toward him. Merton stretched out a hand. In another moment he would have had her in his arms. All the loverlike phrases he had read or heard were on his lips—Miss Crampton didn't take the third step. Instead she turned to the water bottle and filled a glass.

"You are overtired, Mr. Merton," she said with impersonal sweetness. "Better drink this and rest for a while. The letters can wait."

Merton drank the water stupidly. He felt very much as though it had been poured over him. A moment more and he'd have made a fool of himself.

Late that afternoon when Merton broke the news of Gannon's decision, of which he was careful to give a modified version, Miss Crampton took it easily enough.

"It's about what I expected," she said. "They'll pay me $50 a week for knowing as much and doing more than men they pay twice that. The men will have opportunity to go on as far as their abilities and opportunities will let them, but a woman can go only so far. I was sure that was Mr. Gannon's policy. It's the policy of a good many offices; I mean to find one where it isn't."

"But, Elizabeth"—he was using her first name for the first time and quite unconsciously. "I can't let you go. I couldn't have done anything without you. Why, we—"

She interrupted him.

"Not at all, Mr. Merton. None of us are indispensable. You have been very good to me and I realize that I owe a great deal to your willingness to explain the work to me and to let me help. I hope I have returned value in full, but anyway it was useless for me to learn unless I can contrive to apply what I have learned. I have a chance now to go to the South and East Importing company. They learned somehow that I handled the Backus supply contracts and I'm offered a chance in their European department as assistant manager. Not much pay to start with, but a real chance. It seems one always gets these opportunities outside—a business witness of the prophet in his own country. Now the work is—"

It was Merton's turn to interrupt. He was both surprised and hurt.

"Why didn't you tell me about this?" he asked. "It would have been a strong talking point with the chief. And, anyway, you might have told me," he finished rather lamely.

Miss Crampton shook her head.

"I hesitated to accept," she said, "because I wanted to see what they would do here. I've nearly three years with Foxhall & Nevers, you know. If I had told you and you had told Mr. Gannon he would have thought I was trying to hold him up, was demanding promotion on threat of resigning. He'd never have forgiven me for that, and I'd prefer not to have him my enemy as I move on.

"Now to go back to what I was saying. We are over the big rush and Hughes will be back in a week, his secretary tells me. I'd like to leave at once—they are holding the job open only two days for my decision. I'll come in tomorrow and give Miss Blake—she's the best of the extra help we've had—full instructions about everything, and I'd like to finish here tomorrow night."

Merton was sunk.

"I suppose you are right," he said wearily. "I'll get along. You've done a splendid job of work with me and I owe you more than you owe me. Sorry you've got to leave so suddenly, but it'll be all right."

He forced himself to concentrate on his work and to give Miss Crampton a cheerful and impersonal "good night" when she left.

Merton hated to go to the office next morning. It would be hard to say goodbye to Miss Crampton and he was afraid he might make a fool of himself. When he did arrive he found Miss Crampton already busy going over matters with Miss Blake, and the morning went by without opportunity to speak to Miss Crampton alone.

He knew now what he wanted to say; he phrased it over and over to be sure it would sound casual and natural. At 1 o'clock he would say, "Miss Crampton, you were so nice to me about the luncheons during our rush time. Won't you let me be the host today?"

He was summoning his courage to deliver the invitation when Mr. Gannon's secretary telephoned to say that Mr. Hughes had come in unexpectedly and would Mr. Merton join him in Mr. Gannon's office. The interview was a long one. Hughes planned to get to his desk the next day and needed at once to get in touch with what had happened in his absence.

The chief had in mind a complete reorganization of the two departments in preparation for Merton's move to London, and when 2 o'clock came he carried his subordinates off to his club to lunch and continued the discussion. Merton had only time to dash into his office and out again. Miss Crampton wasn't there. Miss Blake explained that she had gone out late, leaving word that she would be back at three.

Merton encouraged himself with the thought that Miss Crampton had waited because she wanted to see him, and he mentally transferred his luncheon invitation to dinner. That would be even better.

But the conference at the club lasted until late afternoon and it was nearly 6 when Merton got downtown again. His heart lifted at sight of the familiar square of light that marked his office window. He threw open the door with boyish eagerness. Miss Blake was busy with the files. She was alone in the room.

Merton slumped in his chair. Already the office seemed lonely. If he had been alone there it wouldn't have mattered so much. It was the alien presence of Miss Blake that marked the difference. His eye caught a letter on the blotter.

"Dear Mr. Merton:" he read. "You will find everything in order and Miss Blake very competent. She can get me by telephone if anything arises which necessitates consulting me. Thank you for many kindnesses. You have been a splendid teacher. I have just heard about the London job. Congratulations and best wishes."

"Sincerely,

"ELIZABETH CRAMPTON."

"Use 'em and lose 'em," he thought. Well he'd been used and now he was lost—quite.

Merton was booked to sail early in February. He tried to forget himself in the details of his new position and in working out with Gannon and Hughes the reorganization plans. There was plenty to do, but the fire of enthusiasm that had carried him ahead with Foxhall & Nevers was lacking. He realized that he didn't in the least want to go to London. There would be a kind of finality about placing an ocean between himself and Miss Crampton.

One day it occurred to him that he was like Tom Thorpe but with the table turned. He remembered thinking of Tom as an example of the danger of falling in love. Tom had turned down the San Francisco job because he was married; he, Merton, was on the verge of turning down the London promotion because he wasn't married. It was a good laugh if you could manage it.

He had written a letter to Miss Crampton as informally formal as her own. There had been no reply. And once he had telephoned that belated invitation to lunch or dinner. Miss Crampton expressed her appreciation of the courtesy, but had been very busy.

There wasn't even any one to whom he could talk about her, from whom he could learn how she was getting on with the new job.

At last one day at the Advertising club he got news of her. He was lunching with Hughes.

"See that heavy set man with the eyeglasses at the next table?" Hughes whispered. "That's Barton of the South and East. They say he's a driver and one of the coming men in our line."

Merton looked with interest at the man who was Miss Crampton's chief. He was a competent looking person, but Merton's interest in him quickened a thousandfold when he heard Barton's companion say: "Got a woman now as assistant manager of your European department, haven't you? How does it work?"

Merton strained his ears for the reply.

"Not so good," said Barton. "She knows her job all right and she's better than the man that had it before, but there's no pep to her. One of these cold, stand-offish dames. Started in like a world beater, but she's slowed down now. You know how it is. She's probably stuck on some geezer who won't play back. You know how it is."

"That's what I've always said," the other agreed. "A woman's no good beyond the ordinary everyday stuff unless she's got a reason outside the pay envelope. No good when they're on their own, or usually when they're working for another woman. Work best with a man. You get a brainy girl who is a little stuck on the man she's working with and, O boy! how she'll make things move!"

"Suppose Barton's friend was right, and Miss Crampton wasn't interested in the new job because she missed something that had been an unrealized inspiration in the old! He determined that nothing would halt him in his next effort to see Miss Crampton. He decided that he had been an ass not to call on her. No reason why he shouldn't. Young men called on young women every night in the week—thousands of them. He'd do it.

The latch clicked in response to his ring and he found himself climbing an old fashioned staircase which was by no means steep enough to account for his shortness of breath as he

WHEN I saw that, with four counterweights each, let us say, of the weight of the table and lift, these two would seem as much fixed as though they had beneath them a girder, to hold them in place—until there was laid upon them a burden three times their own weight, but that if we could manage to load them to this extent the table would sink through the floor and open a way of escape.

In silence we lifted the chairs and set them upon the board; they were immensely heavy, but the table stood fast. Ten more chairs were added, bringing them one by one from the other rooms and using our rope to lash the perilous pile. But though we added our weight, the mass never budged.

And here we were brought to a standstill, for, though there were yet more chairs, we had used all the rope we had, and we could not think how to get them on to the top of the structure their fellows made.

Suddenly I thought of the slab which Mansel and I had hidden beneath the king's bed.

We had dragged this into the chamber and I was under the table, with my feet braced against the great stretcher, hauling the stone into place, and sitting as it happened, directly upon the cleft, when I felt a definite movement under my seat.

At once I told Mansel, and, after a short consultation, we lay down upon opposite sides and, taking hold of the stretcher, began to pass by inches onto the lift.

As I drew myself on, I felt this beginning to move, and all at once we were sinking into some cold, dark place.

We must have come down with a crash, but the chairs we had piled on the table were overlapping the lift, and, when these were prevented by the floor, the lift, thus relieved of their weight, immediately stopped.

The torch now showed us a cellar, with a door in its eastern wall. About us was the massive cage in which the lift ran, and at each of its corners were a pulley and a rope and a great counterweight of stone. A little to one side stood the windlass, as Mansel had said.

And now, once again, as they say, we had the wolf by the ears.

The floor was but eight feet away, but, if one of us was to descend, the lift would instantly rise and, taking the other up, lock him once more into the dining room; while, if both descended at once, the lift would shoot back into place with a shock which would shake the castle, and send the twelve chairs crashing to wake the dead.

But, after a little reflection, Mansel found out a way.

On the under side of the lift, right in its middle, was a hook; to this was attached the great rope which the windlass controlled. If we could reach this rope, the trick was ours.

Mansel took my left wrist in his hands and lowered me clear of the lift. At once I swung to and fro until I could reach and lay hold of the great iron hook. With my left hand I then laid hold of the edge of the lift, and Mansel climbed round my body and seized the rope. Then we came down the rope together, onto the ground.

We let the lift rise by inches, until it was back in its place, and then, with one accord, we turned to the door.

This was unfastened and brought us directly into what seemed a great hall.

For a moment I thought we were out, for I heard the gurgle of water as plain as could be, but then I perceived that the air was the air of a crypt, dank and something musty and very still.

After listening carefully, we ventured to light the torch.

The place was a kitchen, but had not been used as such for a number of years. There was the huge fireplace, with the chains for the spits hanging down and a grate, like a hayrack, to serve a dozen joints. Five great, shuttered windows were looking upon the courtyard, and a doorway, whose step was muddy, was in the same wall.

And on the hearth lay George Hanbury, with his wrists and his ankles bound, and a gag in his mouth.

That George had been left there to live, if he could, but, if he could not, to die, we had not much doubt. He had lain there gagged and bound, for twenty-four hours; his bonds had never been loosened, he had been given no water, much less any food; he had not so much as been visited. And such as will so use a prisoner are scarcely likely to be troubled to find him dead.

Happily George was strong, and his condition of health as fine as ours, and, when we had set him free and had chafed his limbs, he was able to rise and to walk as straight as he pleased. It was clear, however, that he must have food and drink, and, since there remained in the closet some brandy and bread and meat, we made our way back to the cellar without delay.

By using the windlass, we had the lift down at once, but, when I would have gone up, Mansel put me aside.

"I'm going," he said. "And please give me full five minutes before you bring me down. Now that one's got to go back, he may as well cover our tracks; the pile of chairs doesn't matter, but that slab would make any one think."

With that, he mounted the lift, and I hoisted him up.

And while he was gone, George Hanbury told me his tale.

"When the car came out of the castle, I was down by the beechwoods at the foot of the cliff. Rowley was with me, but Carson and Bell and Tester were on guard, within sound of the drive.

"Carson heard the car coming, and the moment it passed he gave chase. I don't know whether they had expected this, but they did the best they could to shake him off. Of course they failed. They didn't bother much about the foot of the cliff; they certainly went that way, for I saw them go by, but they passed at sixty and never so much as slowed up. The sight of them worried me, but I didn't see what I could do but stay where I was. Of course Carson could have caught them, but, as Bell and he were alone, he thought he couldn't do better than cling to their heels. For half an hour they had the devil's own luck—never a check. Then comes a hairpin bend and two hundred yards further on a flock of sheep.

"When Carson rounded the corner, Bunch was fifty yards off and turning his car. Sheep or no, it was an excellent move. The car has a shortish wheelbase, but a Rolls takes some getting round. Then Carson did well. He stopped, went into reverse, and started to back to a turning he'd marked at the top of the hill. Before he could get there, Bunch was coming like hell. There was Punter beside him, and Casemate was back in the car. As they went by, Punter fired full at Carson and hit the brim of his hat.

"This annoyed Carson and Bell, and I must say I'm not surprised. And, as soon as the Rolls was round, they put her along. By this time

Bunch had stolen a bit of a start, but they gradually overhauled him, and, choosing a smooth bit of going, Bell took a shot at their tank. He didn't hit it that time, but he laid it open the next.

"It was now a matter of time and nothing else. Bunch might go another three miles, but he couldn't do more, so Carson fell back a little, to keep, as he judged, out of range. Considering they'd fired again and made a hole in the screen, I think he was wise.

"They were now not more than six miles from the foot of the cliff, and heading that way. The road was full of bends, so half the time the cars were out of each other's sight. You can guess what happened. Three miles on Carson rounded a bend to see the car, doors open, by the side of the road. Of course, he put down his foot and went by like a blue streak. Two shots were fired, but they didn't do any harm.

"Then Carson drove back to the spur, and he hadn't been there ten minutes when I came in. I was as pleased as Punch when I heard his report. I assumed they'd gone out to get food; and now their car was done in, and they were cut off. We fairly picketed that spur. A ferret could not have passed the line we held. . . .

"Bell and I visited the beechwoods at three. I hated leaving the spur, but it didn't seem prudent for one to go out alone. We saw no one, and, when we got back, Carson had nothing to report.

"At last it began to grow dark, and I had to face two fresh facts. The first was this: According to plan, one of the cars must now leave for the foot of the cliff and stay there perhaps till dawn. That was awkward enough, but the second was worse. It was a yard of pearls to a bootlace that Punter and Casemate and Bunch would try to get home that night.

"After a lot of reflection, I decided to go alone to the foot of the cliff. I went. I meant to take Tester, but at the last I forgot. I found the rope gone and imagined you'd pulled it up. At ten o'clock something fell down about ten yards from where I stood. As I bent over it somebody laid me out.

"Well, there you are.

"The next thing I knew I was lying in the back of the Rolls, which was doing forty over a wicked road. Then I was taken out and hauled through a ground floor window into the Castle of Gath.

"Of course it was easy. When the servants heard the Rolls coming they thought it was me. They probably thought it odd that I should drive on up to Gath, but, before they'd scented the trouble, the fat was burned."

As I bent again to the windlass, my mind was full.

Not only was Rose Noble's foresight a fearsome thing, but the fellow was very well served. Punter and Bunch and Casemate had done uncommonly well. But what struck me most of all was that, though their car had been ruined and the Rolls was at their gate, the temptation to take her inside had been withstood. That for this resolution we had Noble to thank, I have no doubt; the others would scarce have renounced so handsome a prize. Yet, had we seen the Rolls in the archway, the sight would have told us that George was out of the running, and Adele would not have been delivered into the enemy's hand. This was the pink of strategy—the casting away of a scepter to win a crown; and I must confess a sudden, craven fear that we should never outwit a man so firm of purpose and so unearthly wise.

The gurgle of water in the kitchen came from a little well. This had been sunk in the floor and was fed by a pipe which clearly ran out of the channel we knew so well. A similar pipe was conducting the overflow. By this simple device the cooks had always fresh water ready to hand, and, what is more to the point, poor George was able to drink and to bathe his aching jaws. Then we plied him with brandy and made him eat what there was, for, though he made light of his bondage, a man cannot suffer as he had and feel as sound the same night.

While he was eating and drinking we laid our plans.

That the servants were close at hand we had no doubt. Indeed, it seemed certain that they would any moment attack. If they did so before we could reach them, they would assuredly fail, for, for one thing only, they would enter by way of the roof, which the enemy was holding against our escape from the suite. They would thus walk into a trap, of which we, below, could not warn them, because we could not climb up. We, therefore, determined to make at once for the gate and, opening this if we could, to bring them in. If we could contrive to do this without being seen or heard, we should for the first time have the advantage of the enemy, for, whilst they were sure that they had but two men to deal with, and those under lock and key, in fact there would be six men free and within their camp.

The kitchen door was unlocked and yielded without any fuss.

As we looked into the courtyard, hardly daring to breathe, the beam of a torch swept the wall beneath which we stood. It was little more than a flash and came, as before, from above; but it showed that the passage windows were still being watched. We had expected no less, but, although the beam was directed upon the wall, it lighted quite twenty feet of the courtyard itself, and, unless we could cross this belt between the flashes, we could not fail to be seen.

"No good waiting," breathed Mansel. "We must go across one by one. The first twenty feet on foot and as hard as we can; then, down on your face and crawl the rest of the way. If we go lightly the water will cover our noise. Chandos first. Wait for me in the porch; I may be a little time coming, because I must shut this door. And now stand by."

Whilst he was speaking the flashes came and went, but at intervals so irregular that no observation could help us, and we had nothing to do but to take our chance.

At last Mansel gave the word, and I made my dash.

As I fell on my face a flicker lit up the courtyard.

Ten minutes later we were all three in the porch.

The wicket gate was locked, and its key was gone. We there made ready to open the great gate itself, using the greatest care to make no sound. And here, to our vexation, we met with another check. Though we could feel the great bolts, we could not make out how to draw them, for each was engaged with some catch which we could not release. It was dreadful to stand there fumbling because of some simple holdfast never devised to embarrass a porter's hand, but intended to prevent the bolts turning under battery of the gate. Yet show a light we dared not; and, as the minutes went by and catch still mocked our fingers for want of sight, I began to feel that Fortune was not so much frowning upon us as laughing at us in her sleeve.

Then Mansel gave a short sigh and

Perishable Goods

drew his bolt, and a moment later his fingers were playing with mine.

As the door yielded he put his mouth to my ear.

"You go and find them," he said. "Hanbury and I stay here. If you don't strike them at once, try using the torch, but—"

And there, somewhere behind us, a shot rang out.

As we swung around:

"I saw the flash," said Hanbury. "Up on the roof."

I ran full tilt into Rowley, who was standing at the foot of the ladders, with a cord in his hand.

"O, thank God, sir," says he. "We thought you were gone."

I shook him by the shoulder and pointed up to the roof.

"Recall them!" I cried.

"Recall them! How can you get them back?"

He was tugging at the cord like a madman when another two shots rang out.

"I could not stand there idle, but began to go up the wall."

I was on the second ladder, when some one above me looked down.

"Is that you, Bell?"

"Yes, sir."

"Get Carson and come down to the gate."

"Very good, sir."

I slid and fell back to the ground, to run to the gate.

Mansel was standing waiting, cool as a man in a garden regarding his flowers.

"Carson must stay out," he said. "I daren't have every one in. He and Tester must feed us and keep the cars. Send him for food and drink, as soon as he's down. And two 50-foot lengths of rope. The others come in."

While he was speaking, another four shots were fired, and I ran back to Rowley with my heart in my mouth.

Him I sent to the gate and took his place. I think he was glad to go, for the firing was growing hotter, and to stand at the foot of the ladder in the knowledge that those who were awaiting might very well never come down pulled at a man's nerves.

Such concern will seem out of reason. When six men set out in a body to play with fire, it hardly becomes them to tremble lest some one be burned. But our outlook was not so simple. We feared no more for Carson than Carson feared for himself; but we all of us feared very much for the matter in hand. Our school was not that of Rose Noble. If one of us was wounded, we could not let him lie; he would have to be saved and attended at any cost; how high that cost would be no one could tell, but, placed as we were, we all knew that such a distraction might ruin our enterprise.

It seemed an age before Bell began to descend.

"Are you hit?" said it.

"O, no, sir," said he. "Not's Carson. But, of course, we had to go slow."

I sent him to Mansel at once.

Then a shot was fired right above me, and Carson came down with a run.

"Come," said I, and led him way up the spur.

It was well that I did so, for a light leaped out of the darkness, and a bullet went over our heads. To round the picture, I turned and fired back at the torch. No doubt the bullet went wide, but the light was put out.

Then I stopped and gave Carson his orders and told him that we were all safe, and he promised to be at the gate in a quarter of an hour. Then I stole back to the castle, and Mansel took me in.

Two doorways led out of the archway, one upon either hand. These Mansel set us to watch till Carson should come. "But I don't think," he said, "they'll disturb us; they've got their hands full. They've the roof to watch, and the passage, and it won't be light for three hours."

face again to the business of reaching Adele, or, to be more precise, of thrusting between her and Rose Noble, before the latter knew we were there.

One thing was plain. Before the night was over, we must either have accomplished our purpose or have gained some room or corner where we could lie hid. Now the only shelter we knew was that of the cellar beneath the dining room floor, but, since our goal was, as ever, the southwest tower, we decided to make for the latter and to trust to striking another and more convenient lair.

Now, though we knew next to nothing of the way from the porch to Adele, we had one valuable clue.

When Casemate had been hounded

And so I will only say that by galleries, stairs and chambers we made our way in the darkness toward the southwest tower. Again and again boards creaked beneath our weight, and sometimes, do what we would, a hinge would whine; we made mistakes in our going and were forced to retrace the steps we had been at such pains to take; and we went at a true snail's pace, and as blind men go, for we dared not use our torches in case their light should betray us and ruin our game.

At break of day we stood in a little lobby that looked out upon the mountains and seemed at that misty moment to command the world.

The place had the look of a guard-room, and so, I am sure it had served, for a wicket gave directly onto a winding stair, which if a man ascended he came to the roof, but, if he went down, he came to the gallery of stone. It was, indeed, the stairway of the southwest tower.

So we broke and entered into that jealous keep which for six long days had mocked us and all our works.

The need for caution was now paramount.

We stood at the enemy's elbow, and he did not know we were there. We had our hand almost upon him; but he had his hand on Adele. He was unready, but we did not know the ground. If we could strike before he could, the game was ours; but if we were to be behind hand, we had better be sitting at Lass with our hands in our lap.

We afterwards found that there were in the tower three apartments consisting of two rooms each. These were a bedroom and bathroom, very well done. The window from which Adele had signaled was that of the middle apartment, the door of which as she had told us, gave into the gallery of stone.

For a long time we crouched like animals straining our ears, but we could hear no sound. Then Mansel breathed his orders, and we began to move.

George stood fast in the lobby, ready to shoot at sight; Bell and Rowley stole three steps up the stair and stayed with their backs to the wall and their knives in their hands, and Mansel, with me behind him, began to go down.

It was dark in the gallery, for all its five doors were shut, but a pal smear of light was betraying the threshold of the door which led to the terrace steps. That gave us our bearings at once, but if there was some one there, we could not see him, and the silence all about us was that of death.

Then came a sigh of the wind, and something moved.

It was a door on our right—the door of the prisoner's room.

Very slowly we watched it open letting the daylight out. I could see Mansel just before me, covering the gap with his pistol and steady as a rock. I could see beyond him into the

—with agony in her eyes and Mansel's head in her lap.

Here he was right, for Carson came and went, but nobody else; and, though lights flashed on the roof and the passage windows were closed and continually watched, no one came down to the archway or entered the great courtyard.

Carson went heavily away, for, though his part was most dangerous—because, except for Tester, he was alone—and though he would be the sole link between us and the world we knew, he had the heart of a fighter, and could hardly bear to leave us at such a pinch.

Early next morning he was to drive into Lass and there to take in supplies which should last us a week. He was then to bestow the two cars as best he could, somewhere beyond the wood and by the crossroads. He was not to move during the day, but by night he was to come to the spur and there wait till one of us met him or else it was dawn.

Then Mansel shut the gate and shot the three great bolts, and set his by Noble to "turn out the car," he had certainly reached the porch as quickly as ever he could. Now his shortest path, as we knew from the bookseller's guide, was down the grand staircase and across the courtyard. But Casemate had not crossed the courtyard. It was, therefore, perfectly plain that that way was shut.

We, therefore, turned to the door in the western wall of the porch, for Casemate had come out of that, and that could, therefore, lead us back to the gallery of stone.

I could set down our passage in detail, for I remember most clearly every step that we took. The hopes and fears which attended us, the sudden shocks of thankfulness and dismay, the waves of suspense and relief—all these are engraved upon my memory as letters cut upon a stone. But I think that such a recital would be out of place, for only those that were there could find it moving, and I have not the mind nor the skill to trick it out.

bare and polished and the walls were paneled with oak.

Then, very slowly, the door began to close.

In a flash Mansel had stopped it and we were within the room.

This was empty.

A window had been left open and that had occasioned the draught. The bathroom was empty, too. Adele was gone.

Two minutes later we had proved the truth to the hilt.

The three apartments were vacant and the door to the roof was shut. Rose Noble, prisoner and all, had withdrawn to the opposite tower.

It was a bitter business.

That our labor was lost was nothing, but the waste of time shocked us, and the thought that, so far from progressing, we were now twice as far from Adele as we had been at the time when we stood in the porch was plain torment.

That we never had any doubt where Rose Noble and his prisoner were gone I attribute to Mansel alone. Only a brilliant perception can rip the skin off an assumption and bare a fact. Everything, certainly, argued withdrawal to the southeast tower. But that was not nearly enough. We had to know. And Mansel knew.

I have said we were now twice the distance that we had been from Adele. And so it seemed, for we dared not use the roof during the day, and, as we had reason to know, the way by the Royal Apartments was straitly barred. Yet the thought of returning to the porch and thence beginning again to grope our way was hardly to be endured, because the clock was against us and we feared to let go so much time. Cross the porch in daylight we could not, because of the man on the roof. We must, therefore, wait until nightfall to make the move—some sixteen hours of inaction, when time was so very dear. The harder we stared upon this prospect the more ugly and hazardous it grew: the more the daylight broadened, the more perilous seemed delay. Any moment Rose Noble might discover that Mansel and I had escaped; any moment the kitchen might be entered and Hanbury's release become known; any moment one of the gang might stumble into our arms, and, though we could stop his mouth, his failure to reappear would tell its tale. And, if none of these things happened and we lay close until night, would our passage be so successful as the passage we had made? Was there a way within doors to the southeast tower? And what of the caretakers? That we had not found them last night suggested most strongly that their rooms lay the other side; and if we encountered the woman, she was most sure to give tongue.

For an hour we stayed in the gallery, keeping such watch as we could and, for my part, feverishly considering what we should do.

At length Mansel bade us all listen, and, with the plainest reluctance, unfolded the following plan:

"Mr. Chandos and I must re-enter the royal suite. That we can do from this end without any fuss. Mr. Hanbury, with Bell and Rowley, will go to the top of this tower. Ten minutes after we have entered Mr. Chandos will give a great cry. The sentinel watching the courtyard will rush to the opposite wall, to see me piled up on the terrace, with a length of rope in my hand. I shall plainly have fallen down while attempting to scale the wall. Mr. Chandos will be kneeling beside me, trying to lift me up. The sentry will rush to his tower to raise the alarm. He will surely leave the door open—the door from the roof. Mr. Hanbury and Bell and Rowley will immediately cross the roof and follow him in.

"Now, I think that Rose Noble will go to the terrace at once, and the others with him. You see, if I were to die, Mrs. Plydell, comparatively speaking, would hardly pay for her keep. So I think they'll all get down to me as fast as they can. Very Well. While they are gone Mr. Hanbury, Rowley and Bell will find Mrs. Plydell, release her, and carry her off. Let her down to the spur with Rowley and see that she runs for the wood. Carson to drive her to Poganec there and then. Not until she's down on the spur will Mr. Hanbury and Bell return to the tower—with the object of killing Rose Noble before he kills them."

He paused there for a moment, biting his lip.

"I don't like it," he added, slowly, "but I don't know what else to do. It washes me out of the battle, and Mr. Chandos, too; but a part must be played which no one but we two can play. Rose Noble has got to be drawn from his prisoner's side. And nothing that I can think of will do that except my health. Any ordinary demonstration would make him stick tighter than ever to Mrs. Plydell's arm. But tell him I'm down and out, and, though he won't believe you, he'll go to see. And on that point, one word more.

"Instead of rushing to the terrace, Rose Noble might rush to the roof. He's a very shrewd man. If he does, you've got him, you three. Don't wait. Just let him have it—both barrels and one for luck. Once he's over, you won't see the others for dust."

As he spoke some door was opened, and down the winding stairway came Punter's voice:

"An', when you're through, you might take a look at the Willie. I don't suppose he'd bite you if you took out his bit."

"Rose said—" began Casemate.

"I know," said Punter. "That's Rose. But I don't fancy dead men. You can shove the corpse in the ground, but a yard full of sextons can't bury the — shout. One or two dead's enough, and before this worry's over you'll see all that. No. Let the — waste, if you like, but keep 'im alive."

At Punter's first word we had begun to withdraw, for it had been arranged that at the first show of movement we should immediately enter the room which Adele had used. At a sign from Mansel, however, I let the others retire and began to follow him gently up the stair. This was, of course, of stone, so we made no sound.

It was a desperate move, but I knew where Mansel was going and I knew he was right to go.

Casemate was bound for the kitchen, so Casemate had to be stopped. And if he reached the guard room before us, the game was up. You cannot pursue in silence over a wooden floor.

Mercifully the voices continued, but I never knew what they said. My ears were strained to catch nothing but a step on the stair.

But none came. Only the voices grew clearer the higher we went. We glided into the guard room, or the way of a snake. Then we turned right and left and stood, one on each side of the doorway, with our backs flat against the wall. The wicket opened, so we were very well placed.

"I don't care," Casemate was saying, "I don't like the — job. I don't mind dirty weather, but I like to know where I am."

"If you must know," said Punter, "You're up on the — top. Mansel put up a bluff and it's bottom's fell out." Rose has got 'im as tight as a —."

"Never knew when he hadn't," said Casemate. "First, he'd never find us, and then he'd never get in. Now you say 'That's all right, but he'll never get out.' An' what about Jute? Where's Jute?"

"Jute knows 'is garden," said Punter. "If Jute don't come in, it's because there's some rhubarb wants watchin' the other side."

"If you ask me," said Casemate, "Jute's well pulled out."

"O, put it away," said Punter. "Why, Jute—"

"—well pulled out," repeated Casemate. "He's had a look at his seaweed and he's got in out of the rain. An' I don't blame 'im. 'Half a million,' says Rose, for the pickin' up. 'Pickin' up.' He sucked in his breath. 'I wonder what he'd call reachin' down' An' when I said 'Who's this Mansel?' he says, 'He's a one-legged Willie, with a college way of talking and a mouth full of rubber teeth.'"

"Now, look 'ere," said Punter earnestly, "I don't deny that Mansel's not big small stuff. He ran 'round Jute, an' he climbs like a — ape. But that's where 'e gets off. He's not up to Rose's weight."

"He never was," said Casemate. "But he — near got him down, an' he's not dead yet."

"Now, look at it this way," said Punter, plainly doing his best to hearten his doubting friend. "A man don't cough up half a million because you tickle 'is chin. He's got to be broke in pieces, an' then some more. Well, he's not going to hand you the — hammer, you know. He's goin' to bite an' scratch till you've got him stuck. Well, he's had his bite an' his scratch, an' now he's — well stuck. I'll tell you this. So long as Mansel was out I never slept sound. I've seen 'im before, an' I like to know 'is game. But now I'll put my feet up, because the —'s stuck. — well stuck, like a bug pinned up on a board. An' you watch 'im come unbuttoned this afternoon. Wait till he hears the goods beginning to talk."

"It doesn't hurt," said Casemate. "I had my arm done once."

"I guess Rose didn't do it," said Punter. "And now slip after them eats. There's a pot o' strawberry back o' the cans of pears."

Casemate made no answer, but began to descend.

I think I shall always hear his steps on the stair.

To my fancy his tread seemed wary, as though the man were suspicious, apprehensive of ill to come. He certainly stood at the wicket for a quarter of a minute or more, as though he had remarked and was listening to the vigorous slam of my heart two paces away.

Then he pulled open the door and came into the room.

I did not see Mansel strike him, for the former had been a great boxer and was startlingly quick with his hands. But I heard the dull smack of the blow and I saw Casemate spin on his heel and then fall away from me backward, without a cry. I heard his head meet the stone and his body fell down with a thud, but the sounds were dead sounds and could not, I think, have been heard at the head of the stair.

My eyes were still upon Casemate when Mansel touched me and turned. I pointed to the form on the floor. "Safe for an hour," breathed Mansel. "The others will tie him up."

We whipped down into the gallery and, while I summoned the others, Mansel undid the bolts of the passage door.

I must here confess that I quailed at the sight of that suite. For me it reeked of misfortune, of frantic endeavor doomed before it was begun; and to go back to such a cockpit of broken hopes was clean against my stomach. Yet, as Mansel had said, there was nothing else to be done; and, in view of the Casemate business, we had not a moment to lose.

I turned to Rowley to give me his coil of rope.

As he laid it about my shoulders, "Shut the door, and don't bolt it," breathed Mansel. "And stand by to move in five—not ten—minutes' time."

Hanbury nodded. I observed that he looked very pale.

Then Mansel stole into the passage, and I in his wake.

Before we had gained the closet the door had been shut.

The windows of the closet were still open, as was the trapdoor, and the room was full of sweet air and the murmur of the water below.

Mansel sat down on the floor and swung his legs into the trap. Then he looked up and smiled.

"William," he said, keeping his eyes upon mine, "we're going to bring this right off. I know you're frightened to death of letting me down, but you won't—if you do as I say."

"I want you to stand at that window, and I'll tell you what you will see. Never mind whether you're dreaming or whether your sight is blurred. That is what you will see—and consequently what you will do."

"You'll see me come out of the archway on to the terrace below. You'll see me cast the rope and you'll watch it rise. At the second attempt you'll see it catch on something—you can't tell what. You'll see me test it and watch me begin to climb. I shall go up—up—up. Leaning well out of the window, you'll watch me with your heart in your mouth. When I'm six feet from the top, to your indescribable horror the rope will begin to slip. Instinctively you'll try to warn me—let out a yell of a cry. As you do so the rope will go and I shall come down. You'll see me asprawl on the terrace, lying appalling still, and you'll naturally rush to reach me as quick as you can. I shall be plainly disabled—for all you know, dead. Well, that means the game's over, and you'll naturally shout for help. When it comes they may possibly seize you, but you'll only do your best to get back to my side. You see, I

THERE is hardly a section of the United States now which has not begun to take some thought for its future physical development. Many towns and cities have passed zoning laws, others are debating the question. From points as far apart as Florida, Massachusetts and Oregon, the unrestricted erection of signboards and filling stations along the highways has been realized as a menace to resort prosperity, and various steps have been taken, or are proposed, to curb the growing abuse and develop the highways according to a dignified plan.

Highly restricted suburban developments are appearing everywhere—in Baltimore, which has one of the oldest and most beautiful; at Forest Hills and Jackson Heights, Long Island; at Palos Verdes, Los Angeles County, and elsewhere. In such places restriction is carried to the point of actual architectural control. But so far, though the value of zoning is being more and more realized, few American towns or cities have adopted architectural control on a municipal scale. The great world example of such control is, of course, Paris. It is the most beautiful city in the world as a result, and to that fact, no doubt, owes no little of its tourist trade. But there is at least one American city which has had a taste of architectural control, and with results of such interest and value that it is worth the attention of the nation.

That city is Santa Barbara, California.

Nature was kind to Santa Barbara from the start. From its shelf by the Pacific it looks out to the Channel Islands, which break the force of the waves; it looks east across its bay to the Rincon, almost as Naples looks across to Vesuvius, and to the northwest a line of hills cuts off the storms. Directly behind it rise the mountains to three and four thousand feet, giving it water and background. Here, in the eighteenth century, the Spanish priests built a mission, and here the de la Guerra family built their adobe house and ruled the land beneficently.

Over the steep mountains came Fremont and his men—and danced with the inhabitants instead of fighting them! Here, much later, came many wealthy people from the East, yielded to its spell, and built themselves houses and gardens—rare gardens where, if you wish, you can have yellow daffodils blooming at the feet of blue delphinium, or make perennial hedges of geraniums. The town grew rapidly into a city—the way towns do in southern California. It grew too rapidly, no doubt. But nature was kind again. It sent an earthquake.

Most people wouldn't regard an earthquake as a special manifestation of kindness, and when Santa Barbara looked about at its ruins that first morning, probably it didn't. But it would admit to-day, only a few brief years later, that on the whole the shock was a blessing. For a new town has arisen, architecturally so far superior to the old, and with such a definite idea of what it wishes to be like, how it desires to control its future growth, that it is thrice rare among American municipalities, and ought to be seen and studied by every Mayor and planning board in these United States.

The secret of Santa Barbara's ability to make itself over into such a delightful city is twofold. First, after the earthquake, it was only too apparent that shoddy construction and wrong methods of construction were menaces in an earthquake country, and rebuilding would have to be supervised closely. Accordingly, a committee was appointed, which for many months had autocratic control of all building plans.

But, further, this committee was given a power, perhaps unique in our municipal history, not only to control the methods of construction, but also the style of architecture. With the active aid of trained architects, this committee was able to encourage, even at times to compel, a certain unity of style, to prevent the erection of hasty abortions, and to bring about the erection of structures, large and small, which have grace, dignity and charm. Altogether, it passed on 2,000 plans before it was abolished.

Secondly, this committee undoubtedly owed its powers not only to the emergency created by the earthquake, but to the temper of the citizens, who for many years had worked together in a Community Arts Association, who had seen many beautiful houses erected or restored in the true California style, and who had a definite feeling for, and pride in, the peculiar atmosphere of their city. The element of compulsion was small, the element of practical aid and encouragement large, in the work of the committee. At the present time, so thoroughly has the ground been laid, prizes are annually given for the best buildings erected and remodeled in the past twelvemonth, and the town is taking on more and more the unique aspect of a city built to function actively in the twentieth century, yet architecturally charming, homogeneous in style, and quite unlike the standardized American city you see, alas, from coast to coast.

For 1926 and 1927 the prizes for buildings were awarded to the Hotel Biltmore, on the beach just out of town, and to a business block in which the shops surround a charming inner court, with palms, flowers, a fountain, arched arcades. Stepping off the main street into this court to make a purchase, you linger to enjoy its coolness and charm. The Biltmore, a truly lovely building, long and low and rambling, at the head of the beach, deserves the admiration that architects, west and east, have given it.

What is this style of architecture which Santa Barbara is incorporating into an entire city? If you go to the old mission there (or to any of the California missions), you will see its original inspiration. California, from San Francisco down, has for cultural background and colonial history the life of the Spanish settlers. Moreover, the Spanish type of architecture would peculiarly fit this land, any way, exactly as English Georgian peculiarly fitted green New England. English Georgian had to be modified for the south. It looks grotesquely out of place in California.

In a wide, open, arid land, backed by high mountains that are wrinkled by erosion into tawny folds, a land where green means water and man's cultivation, a land, too, which is so often fronted by the great, shining spaces of the Pacific ocean, it takes the high notes of a red tile roof and of gleaming white or light tinted walls cut into by the heavy shadows of deep window embrasures, to make the needed impression.

So much is this country like Spain that instinct alone would have guided an architect to choose the Spanish style, had there been no warrant in California history. However, colonial Spanish architecture made few provisions for many things deemed essential in modern homes, and an American city has need for many types of building unknown to the priests and ranchers of 1780. Moreover, other elements than Spanish have contributed to later California and, above all, nobody wishes slavishly to copy.

For many years architects on the coast, working from the colonial Spanish base, have been evolving what may now justly be called a California style. It remains distinctly Mediterranean in atmosphere, but it has been noticeably modified by the Indian influence of the southwest and by the needs of modern domestic life, business and industry. In the process some quite terrible structures have been perpetrated and not all of them by people trying to be their own architects, either.

Just as in the east, when the impulse first came to return to the so-called colonial (or Georgian) style, even many of our architects did not understand that style and perpetrated columned horrors which would have made Charles Bulfinch cover his eyes, so in California the impulse to be "Spanish" led, and is still leading in some places, to an employment of white or pink or yellow stucco daubed on in regular patterns of irregularity, iron balconies, orange awnings, ridiculous towers, machine-made tile roofs, which have small relation either to Spanish architecture or good looks.

It is the special merit of Santa Barbara that it realized this danger, that it called in the assistance of architects skilled in this particular style, and trained its inhabitants to an appreciation of the real thing, the essential simplicity of the Spanish inspiration, the value of bare masses, heavy shadows, spare but well designed detail and the final touch of landscape setting.

Nothing contributed more, perhaps, to the public understanding of the style than the reconstruction and enlargement of the original de la Guerra governor's house, facing what is now the civic center of the town. The old house of abode, one story high, was built around three sides of a square, the fourth side being open to the street. Some of the de la Guerra family still live in one wing. The front wing and the rear side are now used for shops. Passing through by an arched passage at the corner, you come into a green court behind, lined with flagged walks and adorned with pots of flowers—a court formed by the rear wall of the old building and the higher walls of new structures built all around what we in the east would call the back yard.

These structures are two stories high, of white stucco, and house shops, studios, apartments, even a delightful outdoor restaurant, which is, again, an inner courtyard. The south walls of studios have no windows at all, perhaps—just great spaces of shining white. Where a window is needed, it appears, sometimes with a little balcony of wrought iron to give a touch of detail and throw a heavy shadow.

There are arches and passages leading to other streets—giving the name El Paseo to the restaurant. There are second story inner balconies. The first impression is of buildings which grew there quite artlessly, to fit special needs and corners, and of buildings, too, as simple in construction and detail as the old de la Guerra house itself. That, of course, is the impression the architect and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hoffmann, the owners, wished to convey.

For in this simplicity, in this easy adaptability of the style to daily use, when guided by taste and understanding, lies the charm of California architecture. You come through the old abode dwelling to this inner court, to get luncheon at the restaurant, to buy a print, a new tie, a Chinese jade, a cactus, a book, and you find some friend sitting on one of the stone benches, another strolling along the flagged walk, some one in the restaurant is singing a Spanish song; the sun, striking down a white slab of wall, throws a shadow design across it from a window balcony, the street noises have been silenced, there is a fragrance of freesia from the flower shop in the cool, arched passage off to the left, and you are in a different world, as far removed from the world of plate glass windows on a noisy sidewalk as one can well imagine, yet with exactly the same goods at your disposal.

Other business blocks, where the site and the type of shops permit, are following the example of the de la Guerra development and by utilizing the Spanish court construction or the hitherto unhappy rear areas, are making of a morning's shopping in Santa Barbara something of a garden tour or a venture into another land.

But one of the greatest merits of the California style is its adaptability to small houses, houses costing only $5,000 in this region where foundations don't have to go below frost; and one of Santa Barbara's triumphs is the extent to which it has persuaded and assisted builders of small houses to employ the style under expert guidance. A little patio behind a white wall, the one-story house flanking it, deep window embrasures taking away the sense of flimsy construction too common in our eastern small frame houses, a bit of nice detail in stucco framing the entrance door—and for the rest, vines, roses, the easily grown flowers which in two years in California will bow the place. How different such houses are from the horrible "rectilinear suburbanhood" we see surrounding so many American cities! They are bright, solid, simple, beautiful—and, best of all, no two of them need be alike when designed by understanding architects.

fifty feet from the beach, are many such houses, in almost absurd contrast to the shingled monstrosities called "seaside cottages" which disfigure so much of the New England coast. One especially I recall. The Indian element was prominent in the design, for it had a flat roof concealed by a low parapet, and extremely thick, chunky walls like a pueblo dwelling. Why not, on top of this cliff above the beach? The flat roof was no doubt used as a veranda from which to watch the sunsets. Terra cotta pots of bright flowers stood on the corners of the parapet.

The little house sat solidly on its cliff top, a part of the landscape—and between it and the rim of the cliff, a flat space not many feet wide, was the garden, a garden entirely composed of succulents, of the cacti and sedums and other plants which flourish in sand and desert. Some of them had overrun the level, and started down the gullies in the bluff toward the beach below. Some were running along into a neighbor's preserves, who was evidently making them welcome. The bright sun was beating down on the blue Pacific. Over the roof, behind, rose the ramparts of the mountains. And the white house, like a pueblo dwelling, like the spirit of the hot southwest, but cooled with its awnings and civilized with its Spanish note of flower jars and a touch of wrought iron work, looked out across its dainty garden of native plants and fairly begged to be admired.

I don't mean to say, of course, that Santa Barbara is alone in achieving such houses. There are many of them, all up and down California. A new and highly restricted suburb of Los Angeles, Palos Verdes, is being developed under tight architectural supervision and is going to be, some day, one of America's model towns. And, of course, everywhere that wealthier people, with the taste to employ skilled architects, have settled you find beautiful houses in the California style.

But nearly everywhere, too, you find—as in the east—real estate "developments" where the style has been almost burlesqued by ignorant builders, or houses cut to uniform pattern along gridiron streets, in a monotony of bad taste, or houses which parade a Spanish detail or two upon a nondescript framework, and remind you of nothing so much as the cook masquerading in a mantilla. The proportion of good small houses going up in Santa Barbara, and the infrequency of the soul-crushing "development," is what strikes even the casual visitor.

Of the more elaborate houses in Santa Barbara and its suburb, Monticello, the casual visitor sees less, because they are so often hidden by hedges and screened by trees. But here, again, the town has its lesson. Back somewhere in the nineteenth century America achieved institutions called "village improvement societies," and one of their first "improvements" seems to have been the almost complete abolition of fences, walls and hedges, of our good old English heritage of privacy. The picket fences of New England went into the furnace. The middle west seems to have been entirely settled by people who wanted ardently to look into their neighbors' yards and wanted their neighbors to share the same privilege.

It got so that until recently even in New England you were regarded as something of a killjoy, if not, indeed, slightly demented, if you put a hedge between your yard and the road, and out along Main street you would probably be regarded as a bolshevist, even today. One of the things which makes American suburbs and smaller cities so uniformly deadly is their lack of walls and hedges, and consequently their dearth of true gardens into which you get tantalizing peeps, and of the piquancy of roofs rising over a wall, the allure of privacy. If an English town is more attractive than an American—and generally it is—how often that is due to the fact that each house has a garden, each garden a screen, each household suggests a pleasant and quiet retreat from the road.

Santa Barbara, where gardening is a passion, and where, it must be admitted, a large number of the inhabitants have the leisure to practice it as an art, has shown, certainly, that individual privacy and community spirit are not antithetical. Even comparatively small houses, on small lots of a quarter-acre, are screened from the highways by walls, hedges, trees or shrubs, and each little garden is an outdoor room, as private as a room within a dwelling. Nearly all the newer streets are winding, following the contour of the land, and running between trees and hedges, with glimpses only of a patio beyond a gate, or a red roof, or a splash of white wall; your sense is of a perpetual garden or of a rich land unspoiled.

Our residential sections, in most places, looked naked and uncompromising and show off every ugliness of structure, while Santa Barbara's residence sections are green, luxuriant, with every dwelling (though it may be actually close to the road) seemingly withdrawn into its little domestic private world, its crudeness, if it changes to be crude, half hidden by foliage and flowers.

America, we are constantly saying, is a "new" country. Just how new? The town I live in was settled in 1726. That's quite long enough to grow a hedge! The trouble isn't that we are a new country, but that we are a country too content with ugliness, and too individualistic to work together in a community.

Santa Barbara happened to have a body of citizens not content with ugliness and willing to work together, early and late, to abolish it in their city. Don't think these hedges and gardens, these winding streets and rows of trees just happened. They were planned for, just as much as the charming houses and the hotels and office buildings. They are part of the ideal the city has set itself.

If it will cheer you up any, I'll add that you don't get far out of Santa Barbara on the famous Pacific highway before the filling stations, signboards and hot-dog kennels begin. You'll feel right at home, five miles out of town!

my friend. Let's both tell the truth."

Another pause. Then—

"I killed Eddie."

The sheriff called Paulin in, and Val sat down at a desk, lighted a cigarette, and wrote out what she called her confession of the murder of her husband.

The story she told on this occasion was as follows:

Quarreled Over Mabel.

Eddie and she had quarreled about her friendship for Mabel and her neglect of him. On the previous evening they had gone upstairs to the bedroom. Velma started to fix a curtain over one of the windows. They had talked of going to Cleveland that night but Eddie said he didn't feel real well.

They had been invited to Miss Young's home but when Velma broached the subject Eddie made a derogatory remark about Mabel. He said he wasn't going to Cleveland and neither was she.

"I took issue with him and defended Mabel," Mrs. West stated. "He struck me in the nose and made my nose bleed. I saw red. As I staggered backward from his blow my hand fell on the hammer I had been using and which I had placed on a small table nearby. I struck him and he fell to the floor."

"When he started to rise I struck him again. I hit him several times. After he lost consciousness I placed a pillow case over his head and hit him several times more with the hammer."

Then she tied his hands and feet with twine and took the keys to the car from his pocket and drove to Mabel's home in Cleveland.

The body was discovered when West failed to report for work the next morning.

In subsequent days the murder gained wide publicity. The newspapers played it up as a "jazz murder." They dwelt upon the inevitable clash between the small town and the big city. Eddie West, they pointed out, had been a simple-living country boy; his wife craved the excitements of the city.

As things turned out, most of the early conclusions were erroneous. The principals in the case might just as well have been both city-bred persons, or country folk.

The state announced that it would fight to send the accused young woman to the electric chair. The defense made some statements about "transitory insanity."

Judge Marvin H. Helter, at the preliminary hearing held in Plainesville, declared the killing was the "most unspeakable crime in the history of Lake county." Velma collapsed when the judge ordered her held without bail.

An imposing array of legal lights represented the slim murderess in the various hearings and arraignments. One was Attorney Francis W. Poulson, of Cleveland, who saved Eva Kaber from the electric chair after she had stabbed her wealthy husband to death. Another was Poulson's associate, George M. Heil. There was also Richard Bostwick, youthful prosecuting attorney of an adjoining county.

Sobbed and Swooned.

Velma sobbed and swooned in the court appearances. It was pointed out that she was a very nervous person. She said she hoped she would have enough strength to endure a trial. The defense pictured her as a hothouse flower who had too suddenly been exposed to the withering forces of life.

Indicted within two weeks after the crime on a charge of murder in the first degree, Velma refused to plead, on advice of counsel, and a plea of not guilty was entered by Judge Arlington G. Reynolds. The trial was set for March 5.

The approaching proceedings were viewed with horror by most every one concerned. Even justice recoiled at the thought.

On March 4 it was announced by the prosecution that Mabel Young had made an eight-page "confession" revealing many details of Mrs. West's activities before the murder. The statement was said to have told the true story of the two girls' friendship, and West's reaction to it all. The state declared that much of the case would revolve around Miss Young's admissions.

The next day the bombshell exploded in the form of an announcement that Velma West would not go to trial. After a day of conferences between attorneys, it was said that Mrs. West would plead guilty of second degree murder.

The contents of Miss Young's statement were not made public, but it was stated that the trial—if it were to be held—would involve in the case a girl of 17 who had never been mentioned before.

Prosecutor Seth Paulin had said earlier that neither the sparing of expenses nor persons would influence the state. But now, it was stated, Paulin had decided to accept the guilty plea "to save the parents of the murdered man and also the witnesses who would have to be called."

The West family, financially and politically powerful, had long been trying to avoid a trial, it was said.

The plea of guilty of second degree murder was a routine affair. Velma displayed some emotion when Common Pleas Judge J. D. Barnes referred to the killing as "a horrible crime, an unthinkable thing." He added, however, that "counsel for both sides had consulted with him fully and had failed to find any basis for a first degree charge."

This disposal of the case aroused Lake county exceedingly. Condemnation of Paulin and his special assistant, Homer Harper, was heard on every street corner where citizens gathered. It was said repeatedly that the big city lawyers had tricked the prosecution. Reports of compromise, outside influence and even bribery were passed about.

A Cleveland paper published statistics showing that the average prison term for second degree murder was less than ten years. In Ohio paroles are granted with a free hand. The murdered man's father, who maintained an unbroken silence until after Velma was sentenced, gave out a statement in which he said he was not satisfied with the disposal of the case. He said he had never been consulted before "this deal was made."

Paulin and Rasmussen, the sheriff, also gave out statements. Paulin said that he would not seek another term as prosecutor. Rasmussen asserted

Paulin was "yellow," and that there was a "nigger in the woodpile."

Attorney Poulson, chief counsel for the defense, admitted that he and his associates would have been lucky to get a first degree verdict with a recommendation of mercy.

Velma Looks Forward.

Young Bostwick had made a special trip to the Ohio state penitentiary to witness an execution.

As for Velma, she said she looked forward to the time when she would be eligible for a parole.

"It gives me hope to know that I may be paroled within ten years," she said. "I expect to work, to occupy my mind, to get away from it all. I long for the fresh air and for something to do. It has been terribly lonely in the jail here. I love life and I want to live it. That's the way of youth, I guess."

shall still be breathing, but the fall will have broken my back.

And now let me have the rope.

"When you see my arm go back you'll know that I'm going to sling it. Watch it rise and fall, and mark how I gather it up for the second cast."

As he spoke he was making a slip-knot, but his eyes never left my face.

Then he smiled again and disappeared.

I made my way to the window like a man in a dream.

I cannot swear to what happened in the next two minutes of time. That is the plain truth. Time and again I have called up the burden of those moments, started to set it down, and then laid aside my pen. I remember it perfectly, but I cannot say "This I imagined, and that I saw," for the line between fact and fancy is a line that I cannot trace. Indeed, I shall always believe that Mansel had influenced my will, for I did what I did dazedly and was conscious all the time of the smile upon Mansel's face and the light in his eyes.

I remember leaning out of the window and finding the air most heavy and the sunshine curiously dull; I remember how the sill of the casement punished my back, and how the sweat was running upon my hands and face. I remember shrieking incoherence and feeling suddenly sick and staggering down to the archway, trembling in every limb.

And then I was all dripping wet and down on my knees, and Mansel lay huddled before me, with one leg beneath the other and a loose look about his neck.

I got my arm under his shoulders and raised him up, but his head rolled over sideways and, though I tried to prop it, it would not stay.

I cried out at that, but maybe I had shouted before, for I saw Rose Noble coming, with Punter and Bunch. They seemed to come down in a wave—down the steps from a door in the wall.

As they reached the terrace a slim figure flashed in their wake. I watched it outstrip the three men—throw them aside.

Then Adele was down beside me and sitting back on her heels, with agony in her eyes and Mansel's head in her lap.

The shutting of a door roused me and I sat up, to find myself alone.

The mountain tops before me were alight with sunshine, and in the huge void which lay between them and the terrace a great bird was sailing and wheeling, as an aeroplane at play.

For a moment I watched it lazily. Then I remembered with shock the plan we had laid and how perfectly it had worked, and how, in the moment of triumph, Adele had brought it to naught.

In a flash I was on my feet and trying to think what to do.

I had been left in a faint, not so much as bound. My pistol had been taken, but not my knife. It was clear that I was regarded as safe under lock and key.

At this my heart leaped up, for, of course, I could leave by the suite whenever I pleased; the only question was how to turn to account this unsuspected freedom.

In view of the turn events had taken, Mansel was sure to continue his pretense of a broken back. Finding their purpose frustrated, George and the servants were probably lying concealed in the southeast tower. I was at liberty and the enemy was clean off his guard. If we had shot at a pigeon, we had killed something more than a crow. We had made notable progress, and before the day was over.

And there I remembered Casemate, and my dream began to settle, as a house that is built upon sand.

CHINOOK THE OLD TRAPPERS' LANGUAGE By EL COMANCHO

KAHTAH—Pronounce each A as in Father and accent the first syllable. KAHTAH is used in asking all questions beginning in Why or How, and the accompanying words fix its exact meaning. Thus if you were to punish your dog and I said KAHTAH MIKA MAMOOK OKE-OKE? the translation would be "Why did you do that?" But if you were to perform a card trick that I did not understand, I would ask you exactly the same question, and the meaning would be "How did you do that?" Almost any interrogatory idea can be expressed by KAHTAH, the definite meaning being clear because of the other words and the conditions under which the question is asked.

KAHKWA—Pronounce as it is spelled, with a slight trailing "breath" sound at the end. KAH-KWA alone means Like, The Same As, Similar To, but it is seldom used alone, ordinarily preceding a group of words to express the idea of similarity between two persons or objects. DELATE KAHKWA is "Very big alike" or "Exactly alike."

HALO KAHKWA is "Not alike" or "Different." MIKA KAHKWA MIKA means "You are like me," and MIKA TUMTUM KAHKWA MIKA is "I think the same as you do." In fact, KAHKWA means in Chinook about the same as a Chinaman means when he says "Allee Samee." You cannot say "Fly" in Chinook, but you can say MAMUKE KAHKWA KUL-LA KULLA, or "Moves like a bird," and get over the idea.

KLATAWA—The first A is as in Hat, the others as in Father, and the final syllable is held a little. Accent the first syllable. This means Go, Going, Gone, Went, Gone Away, Will Go. It is one of the three action words in Chinook, the others being CHACO (come) and MAMOOK, the word that is used for all actions except those expressed by Go and come. COMTOX KLATAWA means "Do you understand the going," or "Do you know the way." SPOSE MIKA KLATAWA is "Will you go?" The word is used in an unlimited number of circumstances, being correct in any place where Go would fit in English. It is one of the most frequently used words in Chinook.

every girl's vacation pleasures will be doubled if she keeps a permanent record of them in a memory book. Here are instructions for making one simply and cheaply.

Choose any size which you prefer. Ten inches by seven inches will serve, or the book may be much larger. The stationery store will tell you some of the sizes in which the right kind of paper may be readily secured.

For the covers you will want two pieces of heavy cardboard, in any color that you may choose, and about a dozen sheets of a good, heavy paper for the leaves. This paper may be in a color also, if you wish. As the book is loose leaf, new sheets may be added as you need them. Now punch three holes in each sheet, one inch from the left edge as shown in Figure I. A paper punch or a sharp instrument may be used, or the stationery store will be glad to punch the holes if you request it. The middle hole is in the exact middle of the sheet, and the other two are an inch from the top and bottom respectively.

Now write on the cover, in your best writing, "Summer Memory Book, 1928." Decorative pictures or a design may be added if you are handy with a pen. Then write a heading for the top of each sheet, using the headings shown in the drawings, and any others that you desire. Some others might be "Parties," "Sports," "Picnics," "Auto Trips," and so on.

To lace the book you will need from one to one and a half yards of colored ribbon or fancy cord. Figure II shows how to run the lacers through the three holes, and Figure III shows the book complete, with the lacers tied in an attractive bow.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY Chapter 82—Justinian The Great (483-565 A.D.) By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

THE MOST FAMOUS OF THE EASTERN ROMAN EMPERORS WAS JUSTINIAN THE GREAT. BORN IN 483 A.D. OF PEASANT PARENTS, HE GREW TO MANHOOD IN A LITTLE VILLAGE IN DACIA.

IN 518 HIS UNCLE, AN ILLITERATE OLD GENERAL NAMED JUSTIN, WAS MADE EMPEROR BY THE ARMY. JUSTIN BROUGHT JUSTINIAN TO CONSTANTINOPLE, MAKING HIM HEIR TO HIS FORTUNE AND THE THRONE.

JUSTINIAN RECEIVED AN EXCELLENT EDUCATION. HIS LEARNING AND PIETY WON HIM THE SUPPORT OF THE CLERGY, HIS LIBERILITY MADE HIM POPULAR WITH THE PEOPLE. HE BECAME A LEADER OF THE SENATE.

JUSTINIAN FELL IN LOVE WITH THEODORA, A FAMOUS DANCER. HE WISHED TO MARRY HER. BUT THE ROMAN LAW FORBODE THE MARRIAGE OF A SENATOR WITH AN ACTRESS. JUSTINIAN HAD THIS LAW ABOLISHED.

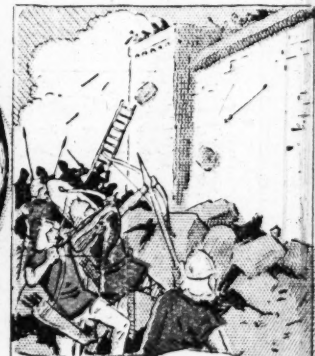

THE BEAUTIFUL DANCER AND THE HEIR TO THE THRONE WERE MARRIED. AFTER JUSTINIAN BECAME EMPEROR (527 A.D.), THEODORA OFTEN HELPED HIM BY HER RESOURCEFULNESS AND HER COURAGEOUS SPIRIT.

JUSTINIAN DESIRED TO RESTORE THE ANCIENT POWER AND SPLENDOR OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE. IN 533 A.D. HE SENT BELISARIUS, HIS BEST GENERAL TO RECOVER THE LOST PROVINCE OF AFRICA FROM THE FIERCE VANDALS.

BELISARIUS LANDED ON THE SHORES OF AFRICA AND, AFTER A BRIEF CAMPAIGN, CONQUERED THE VANDALS. AFRICA BECAME AGAIN A PART OF THE EMPIRE UNDER AN "EXARCH" (GOVERNOR).

HE NEXT CONQUERED SICILY, INVADING ITALY, AND CAPTURED NAPLES AND ROME. IN ROME HE WAS BESIEGED BY A HOST OF OSTROGOTHS, BUT SKILLFULLY DEFENDED THE CITY FOR A YEAR.

FINALLY, A ROMAN ARMY CAME TO HIS RESCUE. THE OSTROGOTHS, EXHAUSTED BY THE LONG SIEGE, RETREATED. BELISARIUS PURSUED THEM AND CAPTURED RAVENNA, THEIR CAPITAL.

BELISARIUS AND NARSSES, ANOTHER ROMAN GENERAL, COMPLETED THE CONQUEST OF ITALY, AND RECOVERED A LARGE PART OF THE OLD WEST ROMAN EMPIRE FROM THE BARBARIANS.

JUSTINIAN ADORNED CONSTANTINOPLE WITH MANY BEAUTIFUL EDIFICES. HE BUILT THE GREAT CHURCH OF SAINT SOPHIA, WHICH AFTER THIRTEEN CENTURIES STILL EVOKES THE ADMIRATION OF VISITORS TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

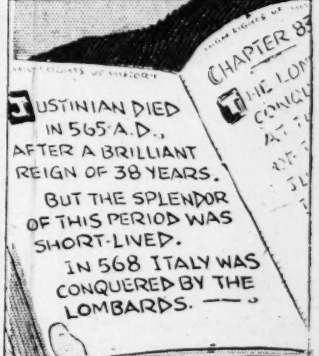

DURING THE REIGN OF JUSTINIAN, THE CULTURE OF THE SILKWORM WAS INTRODUCED INTO EUROPE, THE EGGS BEING SMUGGLED FROM CHINA IN A HOLLOW STAFF.

JUSTINIAN IS MOST FAMOUS FOR HIS COMPILATION OF THE ROMAN LAW. AT HIS COMMAND A COMMISSION OF DISTINGUISHED JURISTS COLLECTED ALL THE LAWS OF HIS PREDECESSORS.

THE BEST OF THESE LAWS WERE MADE INTO A CODE, CALLED THE CODE OF JUSTINIAN, WHICH WAS PUT IN FORCE THROUGHOUT THE EMPIRE, AND LATER BECAME THE COMMON LAW OF EUROPE.

JUSTINIAN DIED IN 565 A.D., AFTER A BRILLIANT REIGN OF 38 YEARS. BUT THE SPLENDOR OF THIS PERIOD WAS SHORT-LIVED. IN 568 ITALY WAS CONQUERED BY THE LOMBARDS.

The Dungeon By The River

Further Adventures of An American Boy In A European Kingdom.

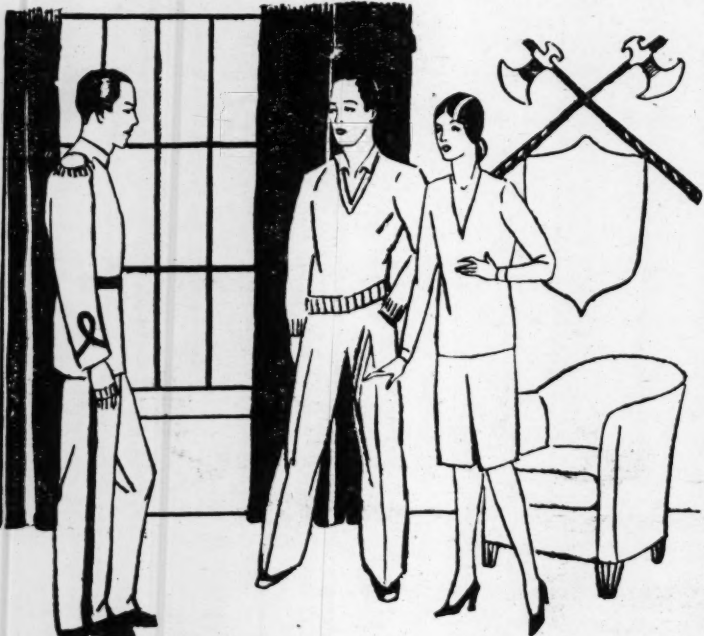

By W. Boyce Morgan

SYNOPSIS.
Donald Chamberlain, son of the American consul at Allepe, capital of the little Central European Kingdom of Movania, is a close friend of young King Philippe, whom he saved from a kidnapping plot at the time of old King Peter's death. One day when Don goes to the palace for his regular tennis game with King Philippe, the young ruler tells him he wants to talk to him. Philippe then reveals that he is worried because his sister, the Princess Sonia, and Captain Koenig, his personal bodyguard, wish to be married but cannot because Captain Koenig is only a minor noble and Duke Boris is also a suitor for her hand. It was Duke Boris who tried to kidnap Philippe and seize the throne at the time of King Peter's death, but his great power in the kingdom had saved him from punishment. Don suggested that Philippe make Captain Koenig a duke because of his splendid record, which would allow his marriage to the princess. While the king is considering the possibility, Princess Sonia arrives, breathless and excited, to tell him that Captain Koenig has just been asked to appear before the council of regents, and that it is rumored he is suspected of treason.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

"Treason? Captain Koenig? Impossible!" But King Philippe's voice was worried as he uttered the word.

"It's True, Sonia," He Said Angriily. "They Are Throwing Him Into Prison!"

and with a hurried request to the bewildered Don to follow him, he hurried toward the palace.

Philippe led the way through a rear entrance to the huge palace and along the polished corridors to his own chambers. There he turned to the Princess Sonia and Don.

"Will you await me here?" he said. "I will change clothes and go at once to the Chamber of Regents."

He left, looking boyish and very unkinglike in his tennis flannels, but Don saw that there was a hard gleam in his eye. Princess Sonia sank into a chair, and her lips trembled as she turned frightened eyes toward Don. He walked over to her.

"Please don't worry, Your Highness," he said consolingly. "Why, the idea of Captain Koenig being a traitor is ridiculous! Nobody in the kingdom will believe it."

She shook her head sadly. "You do not know how things are, Donald," she said gravely. "Karl has enemies—powerful ones. If they have resolved to ruin him, I fear gravely for his safety."

"Yes, and I'll bet I know who his worst enemy is!" cried Don emphatically. "Duke Boris! The man who tried to kidnap Philippe, and who would have killed me that day if Captain Koenig had not saved me. That man is capable of anything!"

The princess' face was suddenly full of scorn. "And they want me to marry him!" she said bitterly.

"Have you any idea what this charge of treason is based on?" inquired Don.

"I know very little," replied the princess. "Karl and I were together in the garden. We expected to join you and Philippe on the tennis court later. Suddenly Karl received a summons before the Council. He had no idea what it was about, but my maid has told me that gossip in the palace the situation, and Don, in spite of his alarm, did his best to cheer the princess. Then King Philippe returned to the room, and as he entered they saw that his face was white with rage.

"It's true, Sonia," he said angrily. "They are throwing him into prison!" With a cry the princess jumped to her feet. "Prison! Oh, Philippe, they mean to kill him. We must save him!"

King Philippe clasped his sister's hand. "It is very serious. Charges have been made against Karl in connection with our new fortifications being built near the Bachembourg border. He is accused of turning over plans of the gun placements to the Bachembourg army. It's a foul plot against him, but the regents are taking it seriously. And I can do nothing. They listened politely to me, and then told me that I would be informed of the results of their investigation. They practically ordered me to leave, and not bother with affairs of state that did not concern me. Oh, if I were only of age, and really King of Movania, instead of just a figurehead with a Council of Regents as the real rulers!"

Princess Sonia, her eyes flashing, said, "This is Duke Boris' work! I'm sure of it. He is seeking to discredit Karl."

"I was just considering making Karl a duke, Sonia," informed Philippe. "Don here suggested it as a way of making your marriage with him immediately possible. And I believe I could have done it if this charge had not been made. Duke Boris must have anticipated such an action, and hit on this to prevent it."

Sonia cast grateful eyes to Don. "What are we going to do?" she said pleadingly, addressing the American boy. "You have helped us before—can't you help us now?"

In a sudden flash Don remembered his father's warning not to mix in the intrigues of the palace, but he cast the memory from him.

"If Duke Boris is at the bottom of this, isn't there some way that we can show him up, in spite of his power?" he suggested.

"But who can do it? We haven't a friend we can trust, except you, Don. Upon whom could we count to prove the falsity of these charges?" Philippe's words carried a plea that was apparent to Don. He slowly got to his feet.

"Well, it sounds like a pretty big order," he said, with a self-conscious grin, "but if you think I could do anything to save Captain Koenig and help you, just say the word. I'd welcome a chance to get even with that bird Boris!"

Philippe grasped his hand. "It means danger, perhaps of your life," he said seriously. "It will be a hard, perilous, thankless task."

Don looked at the king and then at the eyes of the princess.

"That's the kind of a job I like," he said with a grin. "Count on me."

Philippe and Sonia greeted his words with voluble expressions of gratitude.

"How will you begin?" inquired the king. "Is there anything I can do to help you?"

Don pondered. The fact was he didn't have the slightest idea what he was going to do, himself.

"If we could find out exactly what the charge is and what they have done with him, that would help," he said finally.

"I'll get Lieutenant Von Loom of the guards at once," cried the king. "He is Captain Koenig's friend, and should tell us."

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

A NOVEL WIND MOTOR

This wind motor will turn, apparently against itself, in any wind. You will need four small discs of tin three inches in diameter, a piece of broom handle, some wire and pieces of wood for the frame.

Cut a segment from each disc and then bend the pieces to form a cone and solder the edges. Set a piece of straight, heavy wire in each cone, each wire being eight inches long. After centering it carefully, solder it in place.

Mount the broom handle between the upper ends of the uprights. Make notches in the ends for the bearings. Drive nails or short pieces of heavy wire into the ends of the broom handle to form axles. The wood about them should be well oiled to reduce the friction.

No matter how hard or lightly the wind blows, this motor will spin merrily because the cones offer much less resistance when the point is toward the wind than when the open side is windward. If you cannot get the tin you can make the cones from heavy paper. If this is done, use wooden sticks instead of the wires and use paste to attach them.

SCHOOL IS OVER

Well, here's another school term ended. What has it meant to you?

Of course, you know more than you did nine months ago. You have had new studies. Perhaps you didn't do as well in them as you might have, or perhaps you were a "star pupil." But in either case, your school term has increased your knowledge. You are older, broader in experience and, we'll hope, wiser than you were last September.

It's a good idea to stop right now and think about this last term, and about the terms to come. Are you getting all you can out of school? Are you learning your lessons well, taking part in various activities, making worthy friends? Are you building a firm foundation for later success in high school, perhaps in college, surely in the outside world after you are through with text books?

Ask yourself these questions. You know the answers.

reached the third landing. A door opened at his step, but it was not Miss Crampton who smiled up at him.

"I was looking for Miss Crampton," he half stammered.

"Do you know, I guessed it," answered the girl. "And I've been wondering why you hadn't called before. You are John Merton, are you not? I am Sylvia Lawton, Miss Crampton's roommate."

She had ushered him inside as she was talking and the bewildered Merton had followed mechanically.

The lively young person saw that he was comfortably placed in a big chair beside the tiny fireplace and that cigarettes, matches, and ash tray were within reach.

"Please smoke," she said. "It will keep you from interrupting. You doubtless think of Elizabeth as cold, and reserved, and ambitious, and a lot of other unpleasant adjectives—unpleasant when applied to a woman. She's nothing of the sort. A man always thinks these things about a woman who has brains and uses them. Elizabeth got her brains from her mother. They are splendid brains, but when Mrs. Crampton passed them along to her daughter she tangled them up with a twisted perspective, a point of view that was all right for Mrs. Crampton but all wrong for Elizabeth."

"Mrs. Crampton was a born business genius. She fell in love, or thought she did, with a man—well, you'll see the kind he was."

"Mr. Crampton was 28—about your age, I'd guess—and he was getting on quite nicely; but he thought he was a tin god. Elizabeth's mother wanted to keep on with her work after they married, but he wouldn't listen to it."

"Then Elizabeth came along, and a little later Crampton lost his grip. Didn't get some promotion he expected and blew up. When Elizabeth was seven he ran off with a good looking divorcee who had salted away her alimony. If he'd only died he would at least have left some life insurance. As it was, he left nothing. Mrs. Crampton started to work again. But she'd been out of touch for eight years and it was a hard struggle. She got on her feet again well enough to see Elizabeth through school, but she did a bit of teaching herself."

"She got it firmly into Elizabeth's mind that the woman who depends on a man is a fool; that the domestic, hearthside, homekeeping woman is an inferior animal and that independence in the business world is the only way to happiness. You see, she was just as narrow minded a her husband had been."

"Her creed may be all right for some women, but it was all wrong for Elizabeth. That girl is naturally domestic. Just look at this apartment."

"Now, here's where you come in."

When she became your secretary she did begin to like business. At first I thought she had caught on at last and that her mother had been right. But I came to see that she was translating business into terms of some man. I'm a rather keen person, myself—perhaps you've noticed—and without Elizabeth's knowing it I pieced out the whole story. Ambitious young man afraid that women would gum his game; girl who thought she was ambitious and had been taught that men outside of business were poison. Nice pair!

"When she quit Foxhall & Nevers all that bright enthusiasm she'd had for business snuffed out. I'd guessed it. She wasn't interested in imports or exports; she was interested in a man's interest in them. She had fooled herself into thinking she was doing two persons' work to further her own ambitions, when in reality she was doing it to further yours."

"As soon as I was sure of that, I turned my inquiring mind to you. At first I thought you might be one of those 'use 'em and lose 'em' kind like Gannon—yes, I know all about him—and that Elizabeth was making the same mistake her mother did, falling in love with the wrong man. I perked up a bit when Elizabeth told me you had asked her to dinner, but I agreed that she'd been wise to turn you down. If you were worth having, I knew you'd sooner or later show signs of life."

"Elizabeth had told me about the London job—she tried to act pleased over having had such an able boss, and managed to look as though she'd lost her last friend; and I was getting scary. Friend of mine at Foxhall & Nevers told me you were to sail next week. Well, I suppose last minute courage is better than none."

Miss Lawton stopped short and looked at the mantel clocks.

"Time's up," she said. "Elizabeth will be here in five minutes. I have a pressing engagement with a friend in the next apartment. I'll be back in an hour and let you thank me."

She whisked out of the room, was gone before Merton, who had leaped from his chair, could frame one of the questions that clamored in his mind. He was too excited to think clearly. Elizabeth was this, Elizabeth wasn't that. Elizabeth, Elizabeth—why, that extraordinary girl had told him that Elizabeth loved him.

He became aware that he was pacing blindly about the room, knocking against furniture, probably making an ungodly racket. He sought the deep chair before the fire and sank into it. Strange he hadn't noticed before what a rosy flame the coals had. He was building castles in them when a key clicked in the lock, the door opened, and a weary voice that tried valiantly to be cheerful called: "Sylvia, where are you? I've resigned my job, and I'm just a little frightened. Come and scold me—it will brace me up—"

She stopped abruptly, sensing that Sylvia was not there. She gave a startled little cry, and came to peer over the back of the big chair. Merton caught her hand.

"Elizabeth," he said softly. "I love you. I love you, Elizabeth. I've been a blind fool, and I love you."

He said it over and over as though fearing she would not understand, and he clung to her hand with a grip that hurt.

She stood still for a long moment, so still she did not seem to breathe.

Then she said, "John. O, John." And he drew her down into his arms, where she lay like a tired child.

After a time they began the pleasant business of, "Do you remember—" and "That time when you—" and the like, living over the time when they were unwitting lovers. They were still enlarging on these topics—with intervals of eloquent silence—when Miss Lawton came in, after discreetly announcing herself by a lively tattoo on the door.

Elizabeth disengaged herself from John and the big chair, and as he arose she led him by the hand toward Miss Lawton.

"Sylvia," she said shyly, "let me present Mr. John Merton. He is—that is, we are—well, dear, we're engaged, you see."

And the extraordinary Miss Lawton gave a masterly imitation of a person being surprised. Merton started to speak, but checked as he realized that this young lady was the most discreet of meddlers, and that never with her consent would Elizabeth know her friend's part as a bringer of light to a dark place.

"I let Mr. Merton in," Miss Lawton mentioned after she had kissed Elizabeth, and said with real warmth the natural commonplaces. "I let him in, and it seems he came to carry off my best friend. Sudden person, isn't he, Elizabeth?"

Then she found an excuse to leave them together for what John said was the first satisfactory "good night." They had ever said to each other—and certainly the longest. But before she left them she had done one more piece of friendly meddling.

Merton was sailing in eight days—on a Saturday afternoon—and it was arranged that he and Elizabeth would be married the next day at the license bureau to facilitate passport matters, have the religious ceremony on Saturday at noon, and go from the church to the ship.

"You'll be so busy getting last things done at the office," Elizabeth had said, "that I'll hardly have a chance to see you. I know the hours you keep. Don't you want me to come back and help out?"

Merton's face brightened, but Miss Lawton brought him up short.

"No, you don't," she said. "This girl is going to be just as busy as you are, and on quite as important matters. I hope you'll realize, Mr. Merton, that while you are probably getting an excellent business adviser and general manager, you've lost forever your office assistant. 'Use 'em and lose 'em,' as old Gannon says. This woman's place is in the home."

Merton had that in mind when he had his last interview with his president.

"By the way, Mr. Gannon," he said, trying to sound casual, "I'm taking my wife with me when I sail."

The old man pumped his arm vigorously.

"Delighted! Delighted!" he exclaimed. "Keep you steady. Fine! Always like to see my associates safely moored. You know when one of the office girls marries we give her a present, wish her joy and fire her; but when one of the men marries we give him a bonus. Just a minute."

He scratched off a sizeable check.

"Present this to Mrs. Merton with my compliments, and take some days off to run over to Paris and help her spend it. By the way, who is she?"

When Merton told him, Gannon beamed again.

"Congratulations! Glad you listened to my advice. Remember, I told you to marry her."

But Merton couldn't resist the temptation to recall the true version of the advice.

"As I remember it, sir, you said if I married her I'd probably lose a first rate secretary and get a second rate wife."

Mr. Gannon never wavered. "Not at all," he boomed. "What I meant was she'd make you as first rate a wife as she did a secretary. Give her my best remembrances—and the check."

It was late afternoon when the ship hauled out from her pier and the tugs nosed her down the river. In spite of the chill, Elizabeth and John kept the deck. They watched the myriad lights blossom out in the tall towers of lower Manhattan, and even thought they could distinguish the particular pattern of light that had been their working home.

"Looks like fairyland," John said. "And it was our land of romance, wasn't it, dear?"

Elizabeth snuggled her arm closer in his.

"Yes," she said. "But there were times when I hated it. I'd been taught to believe that the only way to happiness was independence, and that to win it I must keep clear of men. I used almost to hate you because you made me like you so much. And you were afraid of me, too, weren't you, dear? You thought that a man got on best if he avoided entangling alliances with women. Wasn't it strange that love should have begun as fear?"

The deck was deserted. Merton put his arm about his wife and held her close.

"That's the way love ought to begin," he said. "It's a terrible and beautiful thing and the part of wisdom is to fear it. We did, until we learned that the only way to any happiness for us was together—to happiness or to success in the world. We could use each other, but we were of no use to anybody or anything if we lost each other."

The lights of the tall towers astern were fading now, but it really didn't matter, for their audience was giving its attention to something entirely different.

that city. (Warlick)

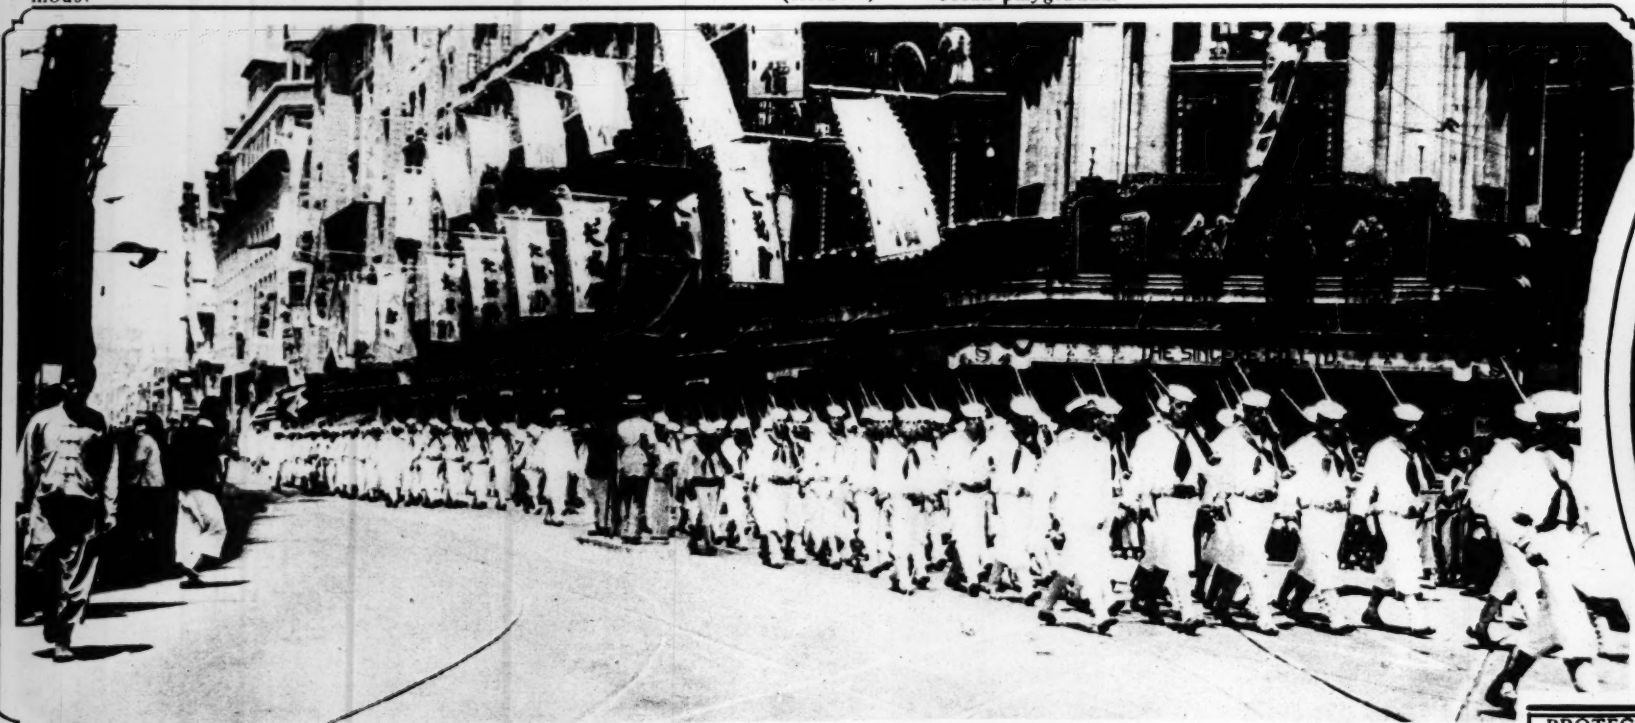

FLO ZIEGFELD'S CHOICE—The famous theatrical producer picked Miss Frances Henrion as the most beautiful coed at the University of Wichita, Kansas. Is it unanimous?

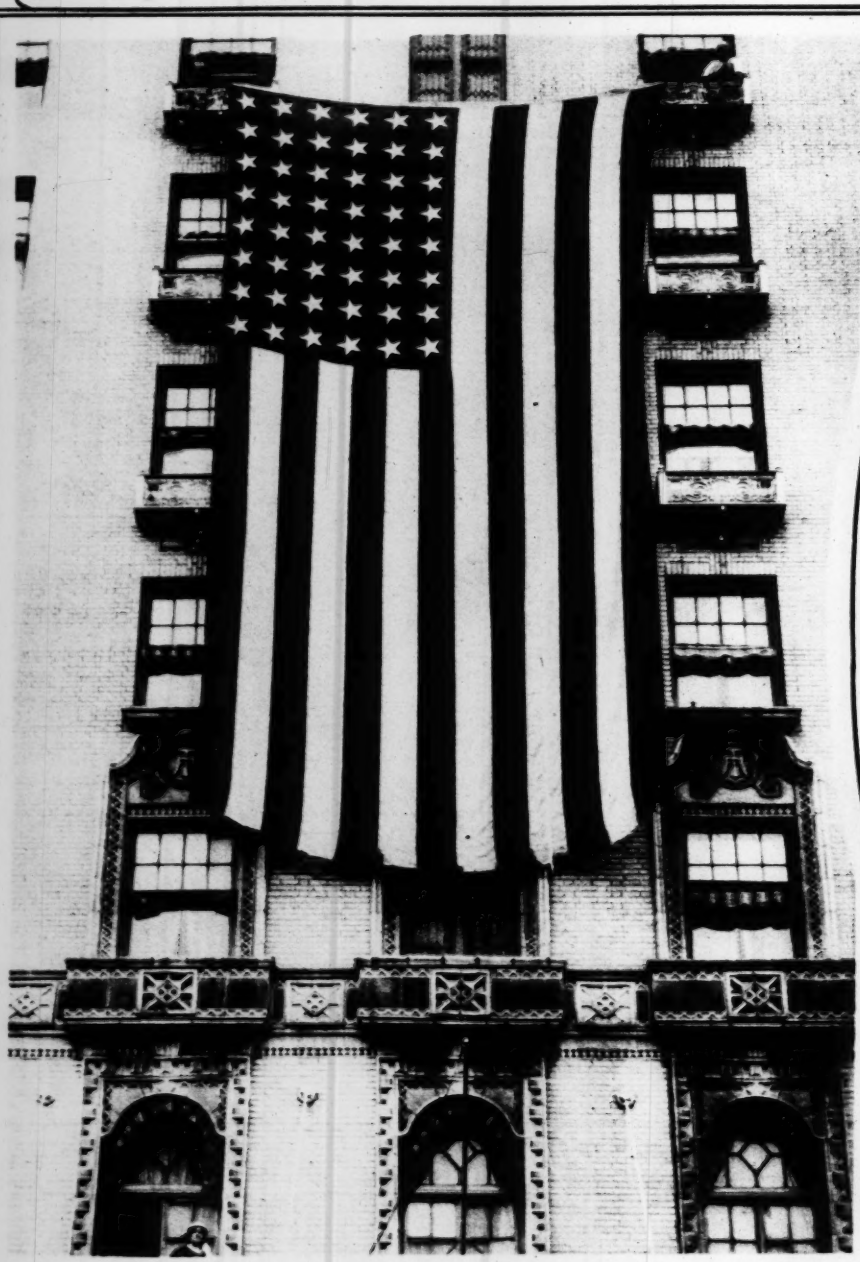

SEA-GOING HOTEL FOR ST. SIMONS ISLAND—The former battleship Amphitrite, now converted into a palatial marine hotel, will spend the summer anchored in St. Simons sound, off the coast of Georgia, to provide ideal vacation quarters for Georgians who visit Sea Island beach, Georgia's ocean playground.

PROTECTING AMERICANS IN CHINA—United States sailors parade the streets of Shanghai en route to Tientsin, where marine forces are being massed to protect Americans during the Chino-Jap disorders.

AL JOINS THE PRESSMEN—The governor of New York, prominent candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, became a regular pressman in May when he donned overalls and started the new Knickerbocker press in Albany, N. Y.

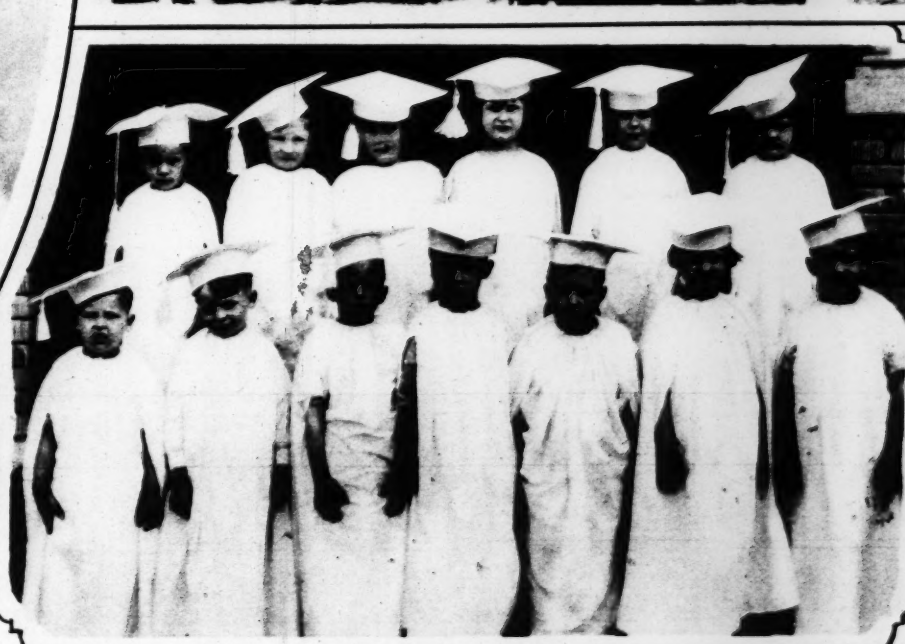

MOTHER OF FLAG DAY PREPARES FOR CELEBRATION—Mrs. Laura B. Priska, originator of the flag day idea, with the gigantic flag which will fly from the arm of the Goddess of Liberty when patriotic organizations unfurl the "Stars and Stripes" June 14.

THE LADY AND THE PENGUIN—Beach bags in the shape of the queer Arctic birds are the latest bathing novelty. Marceline Day, the screen star, here displays one with a striped flannel beach costume with plain jersey jumper.

HONORED ON GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY—Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mauldin, of Lawrenceville, Ga., with the friends and relatives who participated in observance of their golden wedding event.

DOCTORS OF FUN—That's the degree conferred on these tiny tots comprising the graduating class of the Winder, Ga., kindergarten.

MISSION OF MERCY IN FROZEN NORTH

St. Anthony, tiny village in the great snow plains of Labrador, in the polar regions, recently made famous by trans-oceanic fliers, is the site of the Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission. This mission helps make life bearable for the people of the far northern coastland, constantly suffering from the rigors of the long winters. The interesting group of photographs are by Herbert.

EASY NOW, DOC—Even in snow-clad Labrador dentists of the Grenfell Labrador Medical mission ply their busy trade.

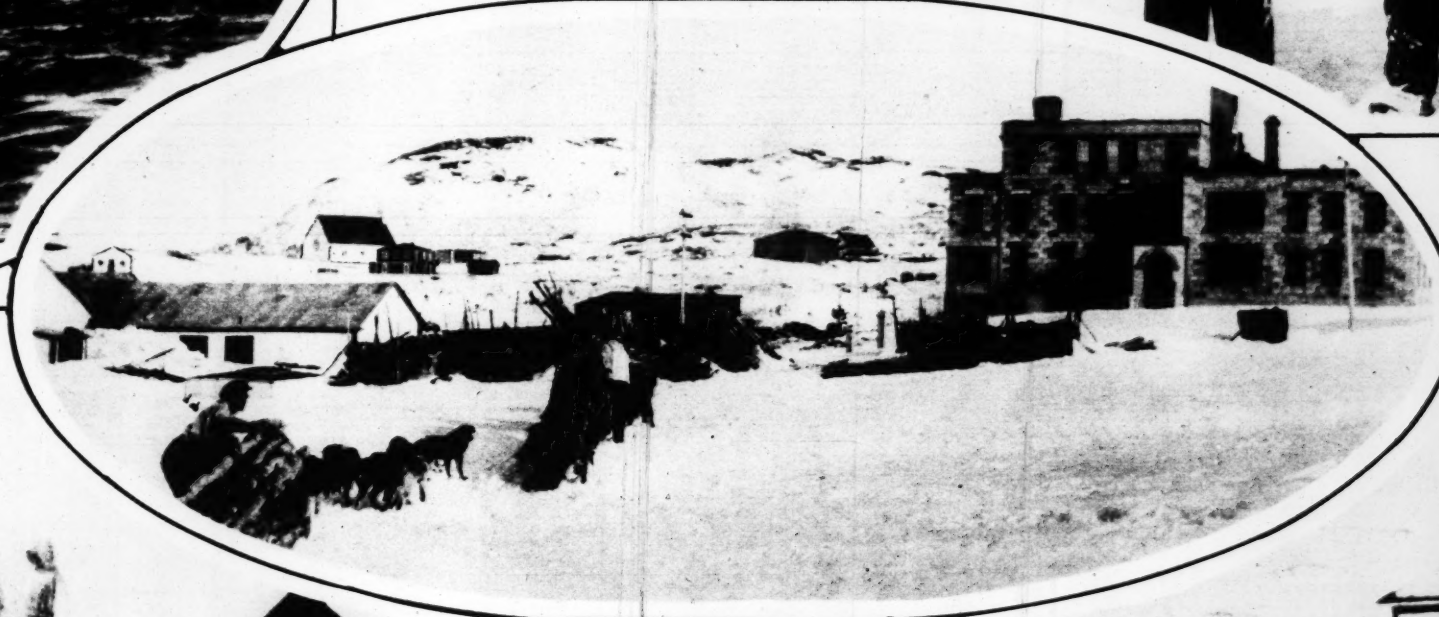

NATURE'S OWN ICE CREAM CONE—A great snow and ice glacier weighing 200 tons floating along the Labrador and Newfoundland coasts.

SNOWBOUND—This tiny valley cringes under the biting lash of the great northern snow waste. To the right is a schooner, caught in the ice for the winter at St. Anthony, site of the central station of the Grenfell Labrador medical mission.

NEAR SANTA CLAUS' HOME—Special charges of Sir Wilfred Grenfell, loved missionary. These young residents of the Grenfell orphanage at St. Anthony are the same as any other kiddies the world over. (Herbert)

HOSPITAL DAY at St. Anthony. Every man living in the village gives one day of labor to the hospital center by chopping wood and fuel. On a day called hospital day, this wood is brought to the hospital and stored in bins.

OFF ON HER ROUNDS—A visiting nurse of the central Grenfell hospital at St. Anthony, Labrador, starts out on her rounds. In the picture are seen the tops of a picket fence buried in snow.

ARRIVAL OF SPRING is celebrated by youngsters of the Grenfell orphanage at St. Anthony, Labrador. This is probably one of those places where they write about "palm trees swaying 'way down south."

MUNICIPAL FARM IS MONEY-MAKER

One of the most successful farms in the state of Georgia, and one which goes in for highly diversified products, is the city dairy farm operated under direction of the department of construction. Here are raised fine wheat and truck, blue-blooded swine, aristocratic cattle and many other remunerative farm and dairy products and stock. The accompanying pictures were made on the Atlanta dairy farm last week.

THE WHEAT IS FINE—One of the few successful Georgia wheat crops is to be found on the city dairy farm.

PRIZE DUROCS—They constitute another of the products of the farm. George Brown, well-known Atlanta hog and cattle fancier, gave the city, through Chief of Construction William A. Hansell and Councilman Charles L. Chosewood, some of the finest boars in this section.

DIXIE BEAUTIES THRILLED BY MARINE DISASTER—Miss Stella Wolfe, of Kingtree, S. C., and Miss Jennie Trotter, of Greensboro, N. C., were passengers on the S. S. Mohawk when it collided in New York harbor with the Jefferson. After a night aboard the coast guard cutter Seminole, they were landed in New York and passed through Atlanta en route home. (Associated Press)

SERVICE AND LOTS OF IT—Nancy Carroll, screen star, coyly displays this Swiss Chatelaine watch which is more than 150 years old—and still running. Shaped like a marble, it has a magnifying glass front and back.

SUAVE ADOLPH WAS NERVOUS—When Adolph Menjou and Katherine Carver, both screen favorites, faced the civil official who married them recently in Paris, the sophisticated Menjou appeared a bit shaky for once in his life. They are shown here before the Fifth Arrondissement being wedded. Elizabeth Drum, sister of the bride, attended her. (Herbert)

ATLANTA AIR MAIL RACER CRASHES—"Pat" Morrissey, Atlanta-New York air mail pilot, met death when his plane crumpled to earth near Richmond, Va. The accident was attributed to a heavy fog. (International)

BACK TO ARMOR—The next war will produce a peculiar looking soldier, not unlike the old knights in armor. The fighting man of the future will wear a new gas-proof suit similar to the one shown here being inspected by naval officers at Edgewood, Md. It was designed by the army's chemical warfare division. (International)

TO PLAY FOR MOUNTAIN CHILDREN—Talented Atlanta youngsters will take part in a revue for the benefit of the Tallulah Falls school Saturday, June 9, at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium. The Federation of Women's clubs will sponsor the event. Here are three tiny performers who will participate, little Misses Susan Garrett, Laura Jarvis and Jacquelin Sears. (Kenneth Rogers)

Latest Styles Make Youthforms a Necessity

Round Out Your Form Make It Beautiful

Today's style clearly defines the best. Style artists have deemed the ill-fitting, flattening, pinching, tissue-destriving wear, and have given women a new charm and beauty with the Youthforms. Youthforms are the one support that corrects two purposes—holding your bust in correct position and giving you that infinite charm of youth.

YOUTHFORM'S secret is in the elastic band which goes around the body, and the beautiful first quality pink Van Hecke's Dressing Room form which holds the bust in shape, creating all right from them. Doctors and physical culture experts are endorsing YOUTHFORMS to correct sagging busts. Thousands praise YOUTHFORMS daily for they are comfortable, restful, enjoyable to wear. Not sold in stores because they are made to your individual measure. Under direct.
